BARBARA HOWARD

She also spent 15 years at New England Credit Union Center in Southborough, where she worked as vice president of Business Development, and ran the training center as well as established a new call center for members to apply for loans and credit/debit cards over the phone.

"Barbara's experience in streamlining operations and dedication to improving services for customers make her a welcome addition to our team," Egan said. "Our customers will benefit from her competence and expertise. We look forward to the opportunities she will create."

Howard is a Board Member of both the Kiwanis Club of Quincy and the Quincy Business Association. In her spare time, the Franklin resident enjoys volunteering at Purrfect Cat Shelter in Millis and spending time with her son, Jake.

Bank of Canton has offices in Canton, Quincy, Randolph and Brookline (to open this spring) and lends throughout the state. Established in 1835, Bank of Canton is a Massachusetts-chartered mutual savings bank that offers its consumer, business and commercial customers access to a full array of deposit, loan, investment and convenience service options. WJDA Signs Off Sunday After Nearly 60 Years

At 11 a.m. Friday, News Director Joe Catalano will host a nostalgic program looking back over the highlights of the years since James D. Asher Sr. first went on the air Sept. 13, 1947.

Guests on the program will be two of the longest-running stars of the station, both now retired, former News Director Herb Fontaine and Win Bettinson, who conducted the popular "Party Line" program for many years.

"I'm upset that it's closing," said Fontaine. "It was part of my life for so long. It's tough to be left without it."

Technically, the station is still owned by Asher and will be until 40 days after the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) approves the transfer of the recently renewed license.

But, said Asher, Principle Broadcasting has purchased 100 per cent of the air time under a marketing agreement with WJDA, which Asher called "a common practice" among broadcasters.

"Medical Breakthrough For Sciatica"

By C. Ann Willet

Boston- " Sciatica has puzzled doctors and frustrated patients for years. But now space travel and modern technology may have finally cracked the back pain and sciatica code."

Those are the enthusiastic words of Boston's, Dr Jonathan D. Yalowchuk. Dr. Yalowchuk has been using non-surgical spinal decompression - an amazing space-age medical breakthrough to treat back pain, disc herniations, and sciatica... for over 10 months now.

"I was shocked at the results spinal decompression gets in such a short time. And how long those results last... without the side effects of drugs or risk of surgery. I was also shocked that so few doctors in the country were willing to invest in this amazing new technology." commented Dr. Yalowchuk. "But the best thing is I am able to offer this medical breakthrough to so many low back disc herniation and sciatica sufferers right here in Boston."

Due to his tremendous success in treating back pain, herniated discs, sciatica and pain radiating into the arms and legs, Dr. Yalowchuk has made available a free report to anyone suffering with these painful conditions.

"I just wanted back pain sufferers to know they have an option other than drugs and surgery... an option that really works. I wanted to let them know there is finally REAL hope... that hope is detailed in my free report."

To get your free copy of Dr. Yalowchuk's revolutionary new report, "How Space Age Technology Is Solving Back Pain Without Drugs Or Surgery!" just call toll-free 1-888-371-6190 and listen to the 24 hr recorded message or visit www.BackSuffering4.com for all the details. Delahunt Negotiates More Venezuelan Discount Oil

Next winter is still more than six months in the future but Congressman Bill Delahunt and former Congressman Joe Kennedy appear to have nailed down another emergency delivery of discount Venezuelan heating oil for needy families in Massachusetts.

Delahunt and Kennedy, chairman of non-profit Citizens Energy, met for a couple of hours in Caracas with Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez Monday and came away with an agreement to furnish the oil at a cut rate through CITGO, a subsidiary of Petroleos de Venezuela.

"CITGO furnished 12 million gallons of discounted heating oil last winter," Delahunt told The Quincy Sun in a telephone interview. "CITGO is prepared to deliver even more. They will not only continue to furnish it next winter but they will expand it.

WILLIAM DELAHUNT

"I saw what had happened to the price of gasoline and oil in the 70s and I felt that it was important in April to look ahead to next winter.

"It will relieve a lot of anxiety. The retired CEO of Exxon is getting $350,000 a day and the average family is concerned about just getting through the winter."

Delahunt said it is likely that the first delivery of 2006 oil from Venezuela will again go to a family in Quincy. Last year, the first delivery — and the accompanying photo op —- went to the family of Linda Kelly in North Quincy.

Each family received 200 gallons, enough to last three weeks, at a cost of about $276, a savings of some $184. About nine million gallons of the discounted oil went to families and three million to agencies serving them.

The vehicle for distribution was Kennedy's Citizens Energy group.

This year the distribution of cheap oil through CITGO promises to spread well beyond Massachusetts since Congressman Greg Meeks, a New York City Democrat, also was included in the discussions with Chavez.

Improving A Home's First Impression

(NAPS) Realtors say a large percentage of home buyers make decisions about homes before they even walk in the front door. Those decisions are usually based on the initial impression a buyer gets at first sign of a house and yard.

As one might imagine, improving a home's first impression is an important step in getting top value for a house. Fortunately, simple steps can help. Start by standing across the street and viewing a home with an objective eye. Does it need a paint job? Is the front yard overgrown? Is the roof showing wear? And don't overlook cosmetic or structural details like the railing around the porch or deck.

Simple upgrades in these types of details can make a world of difference. If railings need a bit of work, consider installing low-maintenance materials that give a clean finished look. CertainTeed's Panorama Composite Railing System features the look of freshly painted wood with the durability of a composite, yet requires virtually no maintenance.

The railing is fully wrapped with white polyvinyl chloride (PVC) for a weatherable, colonial white finish that's impervious to decay and insects. The stylish system also features concealed hardware for a seamless, bracket-free look. Its core is made from a composite formula of PVC and recycled maple wood flour. The affordable exterior upgrade is long-lasting, and because it complements composite, vinyl, wood or concrete surfaces, it can be a quick way to make a great first impression.

The strong weather-resistant system is backed by a 10-year limited warranty to ensure years of beauty. For more information, visit www.certainteed.comm.

INTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

Avoiding Roof Disasters

(NAPS) The roof is the first line of defense against the elements of nature, such as high winds, heavy rain, sleet and snow. Conducting a complete inspection-inside and out-each spring can help avoid costly problems later on. Look for these key danger signals that indicate a roof is not adequately protecting a home:

• Water, water, anywhere?: A home inspection should start with a check for leaks in the attic. This can occur and be most obvious after heavy, driving rain. Also, walk through each room of the house and inspect walls and ceilings. Ceiling spots can be another warning sign a roof needs repairs. And peeling of interior or exterior paint or wallpaper, sometimes from excessive moisture or high humidity, can be sign of possible inadequate attic ventilation. If more ventilation is needed, it can be relatively easy and inexpensive to install, even if there's no need for a new roof.

• Crack down on cracks: The most common leak sources on the outside include cracks in flashing around the chimney and vents, or worn-out, decayed or missing shingles. Check gutters for debris, including granules in the gutter. If there is an excessive amount of granules, it may indicate aging shingles that should be replaced. While up there, check for any missing, cracked or curled shingles. These should be replaced quickly to avoid structural damage to the roof deck and the interior of a home. If any shingles are blistered, decayed or "dirty looking," they need to be replaced, too.

If there are any of these potential problems that need repairs, the first and most important step to take is to find a competent roofing contractor.

Poorly installed or constructed roofing systems waste American homeowners billions of dollars every year, according to GAF Materials Corporation, North America's largest roofing manufacturer. Fortunately, most risks can be avoided with a professional roofing system that's correctly installed, maintained and/or repaired.

GAF offers access to a database of factory-certified, prequalified roofing contractors. Every contractor is licensed and insured, and pledges to work on the houseowner's roof as if it were their own. Call 888-LEAK-SOS or check the Web site at www.gaf.com.

The site has graphics that help to understand spot problems, provides a list of certified roofing contractors in the area, and even offers a free video, "Avoiding Roofing Disasters."

Get Your A/C Ready Now for Summer

Q. You have recommended insulating the heating ducts in the house to increase efficiency. Does the same hold true for air-conditioning ducts? — Jake in Oakland

A. Because central air and central heat generally use the same ventilation ducts to carry cooled or heated air through the house, the answer is yes. The main purpose of insulation is to prevent heat from being lost as the air is moved to the living areas of the house, and it will do the same for cold air. So insulation will provide year-round efficiency and improved energy costs.

Before installing insulation, check the ductwork for damage or loose joints, make repairs, and cover joint seams with mastic — a gooey adhesive that dries to a solid sealant — or foil tape, which has a metal backing and acrylic adhesive. Both products should be UL 181 approved. Standard duct tape is not recommended for sealing duct joints or leaks.

Insulate ducts in unheated areas of the house, such as the basement, attic or crawlspace. Wrap the ducts in 2-inch-thick, R-8 or R-11 insulation, taping the seams with foil tape.

Spring is a good time to check and improve your air-conditioning system, because any problems can be taken care of before hot weather really sets in. You'll also have a better chance of scheduling professional repairs — because on the first hot day of summer, if the system shuts down, you'll end up waiting a long time for a repairman who's answering hundreds of similar calls.

Uncover and clear debris from outdoor central-air units, trimming back any shrubs that have grown to within 6 inches of the unit. Make sure the condenser fins are clear, and that the unit does not sit in direct sunlight (if so, plant a bush or small tree nearby to shade it). Purchase filters and schedule the annual inspection if recommended by the manufacturer. Filters should be changed every month while the air conditioner is in use.

Window and room units should be taken out of storage and inspected for damage, dents, rust and dirt. It's still too early to install these units in some parts of the country, but in general, when you replace your storm windows with screens, it's safe to put the window units up, too. Filters should be cleaned or replaced every two weeks during the season, and the condenser grills should be vacuumed and then wiped with a damp rag.

Send questions or home repair tips to homeguru2000@hotmail.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Get Value From Property Renovations

(NAPS) Most home-owners assume that remodeling a kitchen can significantly increase the value of a home, but fewer homeowners recognize that the increase may depend on the degree of remodeling and the costs involved.

Cost does not necessarily equal value. "Not every renovation will pay off at closing," said Richard Powers, MAI, SRA, president of the Appraisal Institute. Powers offered a few dos and don'ts of home improvement that may help consumers sell their homes for more, or sell them more quickly.

• Don't over-improve. Look for what's standard in the neighborhood. Adding a deck might seem like a good idea, but if no one else in the neighborhood has one, here may not be a return on the investment.

• Do invest in basic upgrades. Fresh paint (stick to neutral colors), new fixtures, flooring and lighting in kitchens and bathrooms can pay dividends.

• Do consider adding an extra bathroom. Homeowners can often recoup the extra cost of a bathroom at closing because of the appeal that extra bathrooms have for homebuyers.

• Furgo the swimming pool. Pools generally burn off more people than they attract because of the perceived upkeep and insurance costs and the fear of liability.

• Enjoy the renovation. Why wait until moving to have that new kitchen? Generally, a new kitchen will hold its value for one or two years.

• On all those projects: Those that add square footage to bring a house up to- but not beyond-community norms generally pay off the most.

To help get value from home improvements, consider consulting with a designated member of the Appraisal Institute. Those members with an SRA designation have experience in residential valuation. Those with MAI or SRPA designations are knowledgeable about commercial property.

When discussing home or business renovation, a professional real estate appraiser can advise how different improvements can influence property value. If the renovation is considered major, the appraiser can complete a feasibility study-an analysis of the property's value after improvement.

To find an MAI-, SRPA- or SRA-designated appraiser in the area, or for more information, visit the Appraisal Institute at www.appraisalinstitute.org.

Landscape Can Drive Home Values

(NAPS) - The look of your lawn and garden may be the first and perhaps the most lasting impression people have of your home and property. Landscaping plays an essential role in enhancing its beauty and increasing the value.

Fortunately, homeowners can turn their own landscapes into works of art at an affordable price.

In recent years, many companies have begun to introduce more varieties of bagged rock and mulch. A new line of decorative rock and stone from Vigoro offers landscaping enthusiasts 26 varieties of bagged products in a wide variety of shapes, sizes and colors.

Decorative landscaping stones and mulches are not only an excellent way to beautify and accent garden beds, ponds, driveways and walkways, they also provide natural benefits to the soil and plants. These benefits include controlling and reducing erosion, retaining moisture, controlling weeds and insulating the soil.

Here are a few tips on choosing and applying mulch:

• Choose mulch that is long lasting and not easily washed away.

• Pick mulch that has a loose structure to let water pass through quickly.

• Apply mulch in late spring. This helps reduce soil temperature and save water.

• Apply fine mulches one to two inches deep. Coarse or fluffy mulches should be put on three to four inches deep.

• Apply mulch evenly and level it with a rake or your hands.

• Wet thoroughly after applying mulch.

• Pull mulch a few inches away from plant stems and tree trunks. For more information, visit www.vigoro.com.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Relieve Aches, Pains Of Outdoor Exercise

(NU) Most know the painful truth: just a few minutes of gardening, golf or other warm weather pursuits can cause aching muscles that hurt for days.

Sore muscles are caused by microscopic injuries to the cells in the muscles surrounding tendons and connective tissue. Damage to the cells causes biological chemicals to leak out and stimulate nerve endings, causing pain. The best cure? The experts say it's prevention.

Warming up muscles before starting any physical activity is a good first step. For instance, when working in the garden, stretch back muscles, upper legs, shoulders and wrists first. Also be sure to stretch after exercise.

Here are some more suggestions for preventing aching muscles.

• Give the body a boost. A supplemental health drink like NuVim can ward off the negative impact of stress or inflammation caused by strenuous activity. NuVim contains nutrients that support muscle flexibility and everyday activity performance. As an added bonus, NuVim works in conjunction with the immune system to keep it functioning at its best, according to the manufacturer.

Available in the refrigerated juice section of grocery stores, NuVim contains high levels of the antioxidant vitamins A, C and E and 100 percent of the daily recommended requirement of zinc, plus calcium and complete protein. For a list of stores that carry it or to purchase NuVim in powder form, call 877-850-8777.

• Stay hydrated. Dehydration causes fatigue, increasing the risk of injury. Don't smoke or drink alcohol during a physical activity like gardening or golfing. Both cause loss of fluid.

• Pay attention to posture. For example, when gardening, kneel, don't bend. Also, alternate stance and movements as often as possible to keep the muscles and body balanced.

• Do it right. Seek expert advice, and consider taking golf lessons. Knowing the proper stance and swing techniques will help prevent injuries.

• Make sure equipment is the right fit. Sporting equipment that's the wrong size can cause aching muscles.

In A Slump? Revitalize With These Tips

(NU) Picture this: The baby's sick and the husband's out of town. There's a meeting in 10 minutes, and a report due by Friday that's not even close to being done. Sound like an energy-sapping day?

This is a very common situation. Most people seem to be striving, but failing, to find some kind of balance between work and the home. The result is that Americans are feeling run down, exhausted, fatigued and more depressed than ever.

The stress of life and the everyday routines take a toll on mental and emotional health. The following tips can boost energy levels and improve lifestyle.

• Alter diet: The typical American diet is heavy in white flour, processed foods, red meat and foods loaded with fat. Increasing fruits and vegetables, whole grains and soy products can do wonders for energy levels.

• Unwind before bedtime: By doing something relaxing before hitting the hay, like reading, going for a short walk or taking a bath, unwanted tension and stress is released, which is a major factor in improving sleep.

• Drink an energy beverage: Energy levels can be affected by what is consumed, and food often contains additives and preservatives. In addition to harmful toxins and pesticides in the environment, it may be beneficial to cleanse the system. In this way, certain drinks can help.

Innovative Technologies Corporation of America's Hair of the Dog contains 1,000 milligrams of vitamin C and delivers 3,200 milligrams of Phase 1 and Phase 2 detoxifiers, which specifically target the liver.

Since the liver works as a filter, protecting the body against thousands of toxic substances, drinks like this can aid the body in the cleansing process. For more information, long on to www.hairofdog.com or call 800-482-2637.

• Keep a positive outlook. Feelings of health and well-being are directly related to a person's outlook on life. Being grateful for what life offers rather than unhappy about what is lacking, can go a long way in improving health.

Allergies Affect Outdoor Exercise

Q. With the weather warming up, I would like to start exercising outdoors, but I suffer from seasonal allergies. I take medication for my allergies, but I don't exercise as hard because I don't want my allergies to flare up. What type of activities would allow me to move my exercise routine outside?

A. According to the American Academy of Allergy, Asthma and Immunology, you are one of more than 35 million people in the United States who suffer from seasonal allergies. There are ways to exercise outdoors with seasonal allergies, but you'll need to be aware of outdoor situations and listen to your body's response.

Consult an allergist or immunologist and work with them on developing a management plan to help control your allergies throughout the year. If you are beginning to exercise outdoors for the first time after begin diagnosed with allergies, discuss with your physicians any modifications you may need to make with medications or treatments.

The AAAAI recommends taking the following precautions before heading outdoors to exercise:

• Check the pollen count. The National Allergy Bureau (www.aaaai.org/nab) is a service that compiles the pollen and mold counts each week and reports them to local media for everyone to access. Stay indoors when high pollen counts are reported.

• Minimize outdoor activity during peak pollen times, usually between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. Exercise should be done during low-count times.

• On days with a projected high pollen count or high humidity, or on hot and windy days when dust and pollen are blown around, it is recommended that you stay inside.

• Take medications at least 30 minutes prior to outdoor activity.

• Remember to warm up and start slowly. Allow your body time to adjust to the pollen in the air, and recognize symptoms that may cause your condition to worsen.

• Drink plenty of fluids and take breaks when necessary, and cool down after your activity is complete.

• On higher pollen-count days, complete less-strenuous aerobic exercise or choose an environment with less exposure to pollen. Activities such as tennis, basketball, cycling and jogging/running can be completed on hard surfaces such as asphalt that won't expose your shoes and body to the pollen kicked up while exercising in grass.

• Once your activity is complete, take shoes and outer layers of clothing off outside to limit the amount of pollen you bring indoors.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kfws@hearstsc.com or write her c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

DIABETES' POTENTIAL EARLY LINK TO GUM DISEASE

While it has already been established that diabetes is linked with gum disease, researchers now believe that diabetes may trigger gum problems earlier that they once thought. According to a new study, diabetes-related gum damage may begin as early as age six. When researchers examined the oral health of children between the ages of six and eleven years, they found more dental plaque and gingival (gum) inflammation among the diabetics. Specifically, researchers found early signs of gum disease in nearly 60 percent of the diabetics in the six- to eleven-year-old group, compared with about 30 percent of the non-diabetics. This study shows that gum disease prevention and treatment should start early among diabetics.

Unless you have regular dental checkups, you may not be aware you have periodontal disease until your gums and bones have been so seriously damaged that tooth loss is inevitable. We are currently accepting new patients. If you know of anyone in need of quality dental care we would appreciate your referrals. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our purpose is to help people reach and commit to the highest level of dental health personally appropriate to them. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. According to the study mentioned above, many young diabetics do not realize they have an increased need for dental care, as evidenced by the fact that they were less likely to visit the dentist than non-diabetics.

Red Raiders Seek Second Victory Against Quincy

By CHRIS POISSON

BASEBALL

The North Quincy High School baseball team placed second in last week's second annual Quincy/North Quincy Tournament at Adams Field.

After beginning the season with six losses, the Red Raiders opened the tourney last Tuesday with an 11-6, come-from-behind victory over Archbishop Williams. But in Thursday's championship they were overpowered by Milton, 8-0.

"We're a 1-7 team," said head coach Rick Beach. "As (Bill) Parcells says, 'You are what you are.' But I don't believe that. I think my kids are playing good. As you see, a couple bad hops here and there. That's the way it's been going. The kids have been playing hard."

North Quincy, which was scheduled to play Brockton Monday and at Plymouth North Wednesday, will face Quincy today (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m. at Adams Field.

In the championship, the Red Raiders, who finished last in the inaugural tournament a year ago, managed just one hit against Greg Potts, who struck out 10 and walked none.

"The kid pitched great," Beach said. "He's supposedly their No. 2 but he looked like a No. 1."

Sophomore pitcher Mike Horgan started off strong, giving up one run in the first three innings when Mike Burke led off the second with a double and later scored on a passed ball.

Horgan, though, ran into some trouble in the fourth when Milton batted around the order to push across seven runs. He allowed three hits and two walks while the defense committed three errors.

Senior tri-captain Paul Doolan relieved him and tossed 3 2/3 innings of shutout ball, yielding four hits and a walk.

"Paul Doolan did a great job," Beach said. "He was maybe going to start, but I wanted to see what my sophomore could do in big games. He's my future. He pitched fine. We had a couple of errors in the infield that hurt. The umpire said he pitched great. He got a little up with his curveball but his changeup was great."

The Red Raiders broke up Potts' no-hit bid in the sixth inning when junior Jay Lewis crushed a two-out double over the left fielder's head that reached the fence on one bounce.

"He's deceiving," Beach said. "He's small, but he can rip the baseball."

That might have put them on the board, but junior Shaun McBrien was called out on what appeared to be an infield hit to shortstop before Lewis' at-bat.

"We're battling," Beach said. "I have three seniors that start. We're young. I have a good future. There's some young talent. Hopefully they stick together. I lost five starters from last year due to grades."

In the win over AW, North Quincy banged out 13 hits to back up senior tri-captain John Allen, who fanned six and allowed seven hits in a complete-game effort. Allen earned the team's tournament MVP honors.

Trailing 6-5 in the sixth, the Red Raiders plated six runs on four hits, two walks, a sacrifice and a fielder's choice. Sophomore Pat Totten stroked a two-run double and junior Chris Boyd ripped a two-run single.

McBrien went 3-for-4 and knocked in four runs, all with two outs. In the second inning, runners on second and third scored when he hustled to beat out an infield hit.

Junior Steve Matos also went 3-for-4 with three runs scored and Lewis went 2-for-2 with two stolen bases.

Presidents Win In A Laugher, 6-1

BASEBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

Quincy head coach Mike Draicchio reminded his senior co-captain to lay off the high pitches all day, but John Orlando couldn't resist in his first three at-bats last Friday afternoon against O'Bryant at Adams Field.

In his last at-bat in the sixth, Draicchio again advised one of his best hitters to avoid pitches up in the zone. This time Orlando finally fought off the temptation, watching a first pitch fastball go high into the catcher's mitt before sharing a laugh with his coach.

The Presidents were a loose bunch at that point as they were three outs away from notching their first victory of the season, 6-1.

"It feels good to win," Draicchio said. "We've been in four other games where we had a chance to win the games. Hopefully this will start us on a streak. You never know what's going to happen."

Quincy also took part in last week's second annual Quincy/North Quincy Tournament, finishing in last place. It suffered a 3-1 loss to Milton and a 6-4 setback to Archbishop Williams in the consolation game.

The Presidents (1-7), scheduled to play at O'Bryant Monday in a rematch, will take on North Quincy today (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m. at Adams Field.

Against O'Bryant, sophomore Mike Lebel went six innings for the win, allowing a run on three hits. He hit four batters and walked two, but was able to overcome his control problems and escape a couple of jams.

"He pitched a good game," Draicchio said. "He's a young kid. It's going to take some time to get the experience out there. He's done the job in the innings he's been in already. He looked very good out there early, striking out batters."

Sophomore Rick Salvucci pitched the seventh inning and struck out two.

"It's nice to get the young guys on the mound, too," Draicchio said. "Both are sophomores, which is nice. It gives us a little rest for other arms that have been pitching a majority of the games."

O'Bryant scored its run in the first inning when Lebel gave up two singles and a walk to load the bases. He hit a batter to force in the run, but punched out the next two hitters to end the threat.

The Presidents plated five runs in the second. Junior John Alexander blasted a leadoff double over the left fielder's head and scored on Salvucci's single to center. Salvucci stole second, moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on senior Joe Griffin's single.

After Lebel walked, Griffin (2-for-2) scored from second base on an errant pickoff attempt. Senior co-captain Mike MacPherson knocked him home with a single, which got by the center fielder allowing him to reach third. Orlando (2-for-4) followed with an RBI single.

In the third, Lebel hit the first two batters and walked another with two outs to load the bases. He got a hitter to look at a called third strike to again work his way out of trouble.

"That is a lot of confidence when they do that stuff," Draicchio said.

Quincy added its other run in the sixth when senior Dan Scribi lined a pinch-hit single to left that scored Griffin. Junior Steve Connolly went 2-for-4 with a double.

In the tournament, the Presidents almost pulled out an amazing comeback against AW in their final at-bat.

Down 6-2, Lebel, junior Dan Myers and MacPherson walked to load the bases. Orlando was hit by a pitch to force home a run and Connolly made it 6-4 with a sacrifice fly.

With two outs, Alexander lined a shot but left fielder Mike Logan made a nice running catch to preserve the win.

"Unfortunately the kid made a helluva catch," Draicchio said. "If he doesn't make the catch, it's a different ball game. That's the way it is."

AW grabbed a 2-0 lead in the second inning against senior pitcher Jon Pelletier. Dan Woods plated junior Kevin Bossart with a single and Logan knocked in Tom Seiminski with a sacrifice fly.

It extended its lead to 6-0 the next inning. Bossart, who earned the team's tournament MVP award, drilled a two-run double to left-center and scored on Seiminski's triple. Doug Myers had a two-out double to score Seiminski.

The Presidents got on the board in the bottom half when Orlando ripped a two-out double over the left fielder's head to score MacPherson (walk).

They added another run in the fourth when Salvucci singled, Griffin - the team's tourney MVP - doubled and Lebel reached on an infield error.

In the Milton game, Myers turned in a strong outing on the mound, scattering eight hits and allowing no earned runs while striking out five. Milton scored a pair of unearned runs in the second and added another in the fifth.

"Danny Myers pitched a great game," Draicchio said. "He's a junior and he's going to pitch in a lot of games the rest of the way through. Pretty much the same with the younger guys."

The Presidents took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Pelletier singled home MacPherson (walk). But pitcher Ryan Stoller, who lost to Quincy in last year's final, shut them down the rest of the way and finished with eight strikeouts. Salvucci had the only other hit for Quincy.

HOMEGROWN FUEL

As geopolitical unrest and dwindling resources conspire to drive up the price of petroleum, consumers, vehicle manufacturers, and energy companies are increasingly turning their attention to possible alternative fuels. One such fuel is biodiesel, which can be produced domestically from vegetable oils. Aside from having the advantage of being produced in this country, biodiesel fuel emits fewer emissions than petroleum-based (petro) diesel and it is safer because its flashpoint is significantly higher than conventional diesel fuel. At the same time, biodiesel fuel can be blended with petroleum diesel fuel (in a 20:80 mixture) for use in unmodified diesel engines, or may be used in its pure form in engines with certain modifications. It can also be distributed using today's infrastructure.

With gas prices as they are, people are striving for ways to save money on fuels. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we will be happy to answer any questions you may have regarding alternative fuels. We have many ways to improve the gas mileage you receive. We are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles. Come see the automotive experts located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree. To schedule an appointment to have your car checked for ways to improve fuel consumption call 781-843-1550.

North Quincy Wins First

SOFTBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

The North Quincy High School softball team broke into the win column over school vacation week with a bang.

The Red Raiders pounded their way to a 28-0 rout at Madison Park last Thursday, which also marked the first victory for rookie head coach Mike Connor.

They opened their season with a 7-0 loss to Plymouth South April 12, a 13-1 setback at Whitman-Hanson April 13 and a 10-4 defeat at Winthrop last Tuesday.

"It's their first win," Connor said. "A win's a win. Hopefully it can propel us in the right direction. I have a competitive team. We have to avoid that one big inning.

"At the start of the season I said I had pretty good bats, but they've been neutralized by some good pitching. Our infield defense is the strength of our team. It has been exceptional."

North Quincy (1-3 overall), which played Plymouth North Wednesday, will return to action next Wednesday against Falmouth at 4 p.m. at Mitchell/McCoy Field. Monday's game against Hull was postponed due to rain.

Freshman Siobhan Carnell powered the offensive outburst, going 3-for-3 with nine RBI, including a fifth-inning grand slam and a triple. She also made several great catches in center field.

Senior captain Kelly Barden also went 3-for-3 with six RBI. Sophomore second baseman Paige Bonanni also went deep, belting a three-run homer as part of her 3-for-5 day. Freshman pitcher Brittany Folkins tossed a three-hit shutout.

In the Winthrop game, Bonanni pitched well despite the loss, allowing only three earned runs. Barden went 2-for-4 with two RBI and senior Jessica Mann walked three times and scored twice.

"With two outs, we had a couple of miscues in the outfield which led to seven unearned runs in one inning," Connor said. "It was 10-4, but it was a close game."

"Every game is winnable," he added. "We're a young team so we're behind the eight-ball a bit. We have to learn how to win. The future is bright."

GIRLS' – BOYS' TRACK

Thirty-eight schools came to christen NDA's new, state-of-the-art, eight-lane, 400-meter track.

She was not the only Red Raider to score as freshman Julie Lynch threw nearly 20 feet further than she ever had, taking fourth with a 97-6 toss to qualify for the Eastern Mass. Division 1 state finals.

"Lynch just took it to another level," said head coach Geoff Hennessy. "I knew she was an athlete, but when you qualify for states you put yourself in a special class. Her athleticism and work ethic can't be taught. This kind of stuff will also pay benefits in her other sports, basketball and volleyball."

Quincy's Krystin Newsom made the finals of the 100-meter dash with a seventh-place finish, and was also ninth in the triple jump.

Other outstanding performances were turned in by Alyssa Beach in the javelin (70-10) and Lauren Brooks in the mile (5:59). Shauna Harty, Jenna McAulife and Ellen Einsidler all ran personal bests in the 800 as did Amy Guan in the 300-meter hurdles.

On the boys' side, Adams Jean-Baptiste placed second in the high jump, clearing 5-8, and Danny Keeley and Greg Ingram threw personal bests in the javelin. Rob McGroarty clocked his fastest time in the mile (5:44).

"It was a great meet for our kids," Hennessy said. "We got points scored by both boys and girls and the fine facility and cooperative weather brought out the best for everyone. It had a state meet kind of atmosphere."

Hennessy said he was extremely proud of the javelin group who mostly all scored personal bests.

"Some of the credit has to go to (assistant) Jimmy Finn who spent all vacation week working on technical stuff with all the throwers," he said.

Q/NQ, which traveled to Falmouth Tuesday for a boys' and girls' dual meet, will bead to Peabody Saturday for the Class A Relays.

Jack Green Inductee Coaches Hall Of Fame

Former Charlestown High School coach John "Jack" Green of Squantum will be inducted into the Massachusetts High School Football Coaches Hall of Fame Sunday, April 30, at Lantana's in Randolph.

Green became an assistant coach in 1967 and continued coaching for more than 33 years, 25 as the head coach. He also coached track for a number of years during the 1970s.

In 1975, the same year he became head coach, the Federal Court Desegregation Order came to Charlestown, throwing the high school, the town and Boston into well documented social turmoil. As a health and physical education teacher, Green was called on by the administration to help maintain a safe and secure school environment.

Green was named coach of the year in 1985 by the Association of New England Football Officials and received the Mark T. Crehan Award.

For ticket information, contact Betty Kelly, Charlestown High School, at 617-635-9914, or Tony Green at 617-328-7245.

SPRING CAR CARE

Engine Treatment Aids Conservation Efforts

(NU) As gasoline prices fluctuate in each day's headlines, conservation is taking on a new importance. The automotive industry is doing its part with research and development into various technologies, some of which may make it to the marketplace.

But until then, motorists are looking for concrete steps they can take to help them use less gas, save money and help the environment.

Good driving habits-avoiding hard accelerations or speeding- can easily improve everyday gas mileage. Regular maintenance helps by allowing a vehicle to get its optimal mileage; such maintenance reduces polluting engine emissions. And something as basic as keeping tires properly inflated can give motorists an extra three or four miles per gallon.

When everyone conserves, the potential for fuel-saving becomes enormous.

The use of engine additives is another tool to conserve gasoline in a vehicle owner's arsenal, according to the makers of Xcelplus, a single-use additive that coats internal engine parts with an ultra-thin protective layer that reduces wear and tear and improves fuel mileage. They point toward a U.S. Department of Energy study showing that the nation could save more than 100 million barrels of fuel each year through the use of this product.

Individual motorists can expect to see an average increase of six percent in miles per gallon, according to the Department of Energy study. Other tests showed an increase of up to 17.5 percent.

An added benefit is longer engine life. The U.S. Army used the Xcelplus formula in controlled tests involving mission-critical equipment and "found virtually no wear or deterioration to all components treated" as well as protection in the case of engine oil loss due to its coating properties.

Combine the benefits of this engine additive with the extra miles per gallon one can expect through sensible driving habits, regular maintenance and keeping tires at proper inflation, and the numbers add up to real savings for consumers.

Visit www.xcelplus.com to learn more about the engine treatment industry, read test results and view user testimonials.

Those interested in displaying their vehicle should contact Principal Frank Santoro at 617-984-8751. Entry fee is $10 which will be used for student scholarships.

QHS Automotive Program Receives National Certification

The automotive training program, one of Quincy High School's Career and Technical Education Programs, has received certification by NATEF and the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence (ASE).

ASE certification of an automotive training program through NATEF brings with it: program credibility, prestige, recognition, and overall program improvement. The certification process benefits schools, students, future employers, and the automotive service industry. Quincy's program passes strict certification rules in all eight possible areas: brakes, engine repair, electrical/electronic systems, heating and air conditioning, manual drive trains, suspension and steering, engine performance, and transmissions.

To achieve this recognition, the school's automotive training program underwent evaluations by the national Automotive Technicians Education Foundation (NATEF). Nationally accepted standards of excellence in areas such as instruction, facilities, and equipment were used.

A visiting team from NATEF conducted the site visit in March. Assisting with the visit were local professional mechanics: Steve Arnold from Quirk Chevrolet and Greg Egan from Tower Automotive. They gave a full day to the evaluation visit.

Emily Lebo, Director of Career and Technical Education said: "Our programs continue to flourish with the care and support of our community.

"During The past few months, we have worked closely with NATEF to make certain that our program would meet strict industry standards, and now we are delighted to join the ranks of the ASE certified training programs. Students will be assured of a quality education, and shop owners will be assured of getting quality job applicants."

"This is great news for automotive-minded young people and their parents," said Donald Seyfer, NATEF chairman. "Because this program increases cooperation between local education and industry leaders, it gives added assurance that Quincy's graduates will be employable technicians. As a result of the quality education provided by the Career and Technical Education Programs, the motoring public will benefit since better repair technicians will join the local work force."

Upon completion of the evaluation, NATEF recommended that Quincy be certified by the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence (ASE). ASE is a national non-profit organization which tests and certifies repair technicians, in addition to certifying automotive training programs.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Impatience is still somewhat of a problem. But a sign of progress should soothe the anxious Aries heart. Meanwhile, invest some of that waiting time in preparing for the change ahead.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Bovines tend to excel at solving problems, not creating them. But you risk doing just that if you're slow to respond to a timely situation. If necessary, seek advice from someone you trust.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The Gemini Twin might need to do more than a routine check of both a job-linked and home-based situation. Dig deeper for more data on both fronts to avoid unwanted surprises later.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Moon Children facing an important workplace decision are encouraged to use their perceptiveness to see through any attempt to win them over with a supercharge of fawning and flattery.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Good news catapults Leos and Leonas into reconsidering a deferred decision. But time has moved on, and it's a good idea to recheck your plans and make adjustments where necessary.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The week favors relationships, both personal and professional. Take the time to look for and immediately repair any vulnerable areas caused by unresolved misunderstandings.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A friend's problems bring out your protective instincts. Be careful to keep a balance between meeting the obligations of friendship without being overwhelmed by them.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The temptation to take an extreme position on an issue is strong, but moderation is favored both in personal and professional dealings. Move toward finding areas of agreement.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Getting another boss or teacher? Try to see the person behind the image. It will help you adjust more easily to the changes that new authority figures inevitably bring.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Much as you might dislike the idea, keep an open mind about using the assistance of a third party to help resolve problems that threaten to unravel an important agreement.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Music helps restore the Aquarian's spiritual energies this week. Take someone you care for to a concert of your musical choice. Also, expect news about a workplace matter.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A challenge that seems easy enough at first could take an unexpected turn that might test your resolve. Decide if you feel you should stay with it, or if it's better to move in another direction.

BORN THIS WEEK: You can be strong when standing up for justice, both for yourself and for others.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

NANDO OF ROME Celebrates 35 Years In Business -- State Rep. Bruce J. Ayers (left) presents Nando and Carol Crisafulli a State House citation in recognition of their 35th year of business in the city of Quincy. Nando opened his shop on Billings Road in 1970 after moving from his first hair salon in Dorchester. "This is a great milestone to recognize Nando and Carol's hard work and dedication to their clients. Being in business for thirty-five years says a lot about the reputation that he has established over the years with his clientele," Ayers said. Former Mayor James Sheets (right), a loyal customer, also commended Nando for his accomplishment. "The many pictures of celebrities covering Nando of Rome's walls validate his abilities as a professional hairstylist," Sheets said.

MWRA Apologizes For Not Informing On Sludge Removal

"Even though some folks may have been aware, I was not aware of it." And, he added, he was sure his constituents were unaware of it.

"As long as you're the executive director, we'd really appreciate a phone call. You have to realize you are not a small business, Raymondi told Laskey.

He advised Laskey and other MWRA officials to be aware of how their actions affect people.

The Justice Department and the Federal Court approved the decision to end contract with ECDC Environmental L.C., a Utah-based landfill company that is available by rail.

They allowed the contract to end based on a "good track record" by the plant, and as a means to eliminate the $817,000 reservation charge for emergency landfills that were not being used, said Laskey.

The last plant failure was in 1998 when a fire brought the plant to a 50 percent performance rate, and the plant relied on the ECDC rail system, he said.

"The odds are very remote that the whole thing would go. We feel very comfortable. We do think we've been a good neighbor to Quincy. We believe our impact is very minimal," said Laskey

The routes that trucks would take in the event of a shutdown would include East Howard Street and Quincy Avenue to Route 18 in Weymouth, said Michael Hornbrook, chief operating officer of the MWRA. The designated streets are included in the new contract, said Laskey.

"We're talking about literally a handful of trucks per day in a worst case scenario," he said.

The MWRA agreed to adhere to a list conditions by Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee for truck exportation. They include:

- The trucks are not to stop in Quincy when loaded with sludge.
- The trucks must remain in good condition with properly maintained covering.
- The trucks are to be lined.
- The trucks are to be cleaned after every dump.

Those are good solid standards," said Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin.

According to Laskey, NEFCO handles fertilizer in three forms. It comes to the plant in liquid form by an underwater piping system from Deer Island. It is then "centrifuged" into a cake form, which is similar to topsoil. The sludge cake is then heated into pellet form.

In the case of a system failure at the plant, temporary portable centrifuge machines would be brought in to solidify sludge into cake form, preparing it for exportation, said Hornbrook.

The emergency equipment de-waterizes the material, but does not dry it into pellet form, said Tim Dunlap, Director of ECDC.

"It looks like topsoil, it's not sloshy liquid. We truck them in sealed dumptrucks that are covered on top. It's very safe, it's very well-contained. I don't think it's a risk," said Laskey.

"It's Class B solid, it's not hazardous waste," said Hornbrook.

If there was a failure, and processing of any fertilizer became impossible, the liquid flow from Deer Island Treatment Plant would be halted, said Laskey.

Laskey also said that although it was unlikely that they would need an additional backup plan, as a last resort the plant would seek a rail system route after 30 days if further actions were needed.

Including an emergency rail backup plan was a reaction to letters from Senator Michael Morrissey and Mayor William Phelan who both expressed concerns with eliminating rail backup.

"We're not abandoning rail," said Hornbrook.

Laskey said the initial contract from 1991 was "a belt and suspenders" effort to supply the Federal Court with a preliminary backup plan.

The MWRA discovered the ECDC landfills in Utah, which were available by rail, but were not chosen for that purpose, said Laskey.

Tim Dunlap, director of ECDC, had a different opinion on the importance of rail in the original contract.

"The initial Quincy (contract) required anything other than local deliveries to be by rail. We always had the right equipment because there were always 40 rail cars ready to be used.

"Will I admit to some bias? I can't confess to being totally objective about that."

Dunlap said ECDC had offered a 30 percent reduction in costs as part of a negotiation process that was denied by the MWRA.

The Oversight Committee is a full membership committee but City Council President Douglas Gutro did not participate in Monday night's meeting.

Gutro is employed with the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) where he works at the Regional Administrator's office. Although participation in the oversight committee was not a conflict of interest, the EPA suggested that Gutro not participate in the oversight meeting, said Gutro.

Coughlin served as chairman in Gutro's absence.

Renovated House Will Be Home For 19 Veterans

By MIKAELA SLANEY

"You have done the right thing," said Normand Grenier, thanking a crowd for their part in the completion of a renovated home at 31-33 Winter Street that will house 19 previously homeless male veterans.

Grenier, executive director of Neighborhood Housing Services, was a speaker at the ribbon cutting ceremony Friday,, that celebrated the most recent installment of the city's 10 year plan to end homelessness.

"You've taken your tax dollars and given them to the people who needed it most. The people who wouldn't survive. The beauty of what we've done speaks for itself, and that really is the best thank you," he said.

Funding for the renovation of the home, (the Winter Street Project) came from grants and donations from:

The city of Quincy (HOME and CDBG), South Shore Savings Bank, Mass Housing Finance Agency, NeighborWorks America, Department of Neighborhood Development, Interfaith Housing Partners, Center for Community Recovery Innovations, and the HUD/ McKinney Grant.

Guests at the ribbon cutting ceremony were welcomed by Planning Director Dennis E. Harrington.

"We... have over the past year been meeting with a group developing a 10 year plan to eliminate homelessness, and we're way ahead of schedule," said Mayor William Phelan.

Phelan gave estimates of a reduction from 96 homeless people in the city in 2005 to 78 this year.

The Winter Street home, known as "Father McCarthy's House," is named for Rev. William McCarthy, founder of Father Bill's Place. His interfaith housing facility has provided permanent solutions for homelessness since its foundation in 1984 as an emergency shelter, and helps them to achieve self-sufficiency.

Phelan presented a plaque at the ceremony recognizing McCarthy for his "tireless dedication" in helping Quincy's homeless.

"I call anyone who contributes to Father Bill's (Place), especially financially, 'my angels.' Everyone has helped so much," said McCarthy.

"Our mission is to keep people off the streets," he said. "God give us the grace to continue your mission so that the sign on Father Bill's Place may be taken down."

Thirty five beds were removed from Father Bill's Place after profviding housing solutions for people in their shelter, said John Yazwinski, executive director of Father Bill's Place.

"The plan is working. This plan is not sitting on a shelf. We will end homelessness," he said.

"Well, isn't this the way it should be, right here, right

Task Force Begins Inspections

City Cracking Down On Illegal Rooming Houses

The city is cracking down on illegal rooming houses.

The Task Force created under Mayor William Phelan's Neighborhood Initiative program is up and running.

Its mission is to investigate all complaints of illegal lodging houses in the city and eliminate the use of those found to be in violation.

Property owners who fail to correct any violations will have a comp'aint brought against them in Quincy District Court and be subject to a fine of up to $1,000 a day for each day a violation exists.

"We are committed to improving our neighborhoods and listening to the concerns expressed at neighborhood meetings and through the surveys," Phelan said. "Our Task Force will appropriately address every complaint and ensure that our neighborhoods are protected from illegal rooming houses."

The Task Force is comprised of representatives from the police, fire, health and building departments. Members will also work with other city departments as needed to help rid the city of these illegal uses.

Neighbors may report a suspected illegal lodging house by calling the Task Force Hotline weekdays, between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. The number is 617-376-1455.

When a complaint is received, the Task Force will perform a random onsite inspection of the premises. During the inspection, the team will cite the property owner for any violations of Building, Health and Fire Codes, as well as any outstanding Zoning Ordinance violations.

Neighbors may also call the Task Force Hotline to receive updated information on the status of any complaint.

VETERAN MEMBERS of the WJDA staff, past and present, were on hand for the final nostalgic broadcast of the popular Party Line program. WJDA STUDIO on has been a fixture on Brackett Street for most of the Quincy station's 59 years. It no longer will be.

Down Memory Lane

Nostalgic 'Party Line' Is WJDA's Farewell

By TOM HENSHAW

One caller remembered a long ago quiz program called "Stump the Staff." Another recalled "Breakfast With JDA," which opened the day's broadcasting at 6:30 o'clock in the morning for so many years.

The name of Slim Pickens, who delivered the weather reports with a country twang, came up. So did Jerry Howard and "the Little White Cloud," and "The Stork Report" of new born babies.

And someone came up with a tape of the late Roy Lind reading a commercial for the long gone Morey Pearl's Sea Food Restaurant at 572 Southern Artery and its "157 kinds of pizza."

It was a nostalgic last "Party Line" for WJDA Friday morning when the retired stars of Quincy's own radio station gathered for the last time and 1300 On Your Dial was turned over to multicultural and religious programming.

WJDA was founded by James Asher and Joe Tobin in simpler times.

Don Latulippe, who joined the station at 18 only a few ticks after it went on the air Sept. 13, 1947, recalled being hired because he was able to untangle a snarled wire recorder.

"Joe Tobin and Fred Lane recorded the midnight mass at St. John's Church on Christmas Eve," he said, "but the wire was in a great big knot.

"I told them I have a wire recorder just like that and I can undo it for you. This was at 2 o'clock Christmas morning. I took it home and untangled it but there was nothing on it."

So Latulippe said he borrowed a recording of the Messiah from his piano teacher, took the wire and the record to the studio and said, "You can't play this but you can play this."

"It caught the attention of the boss," he said, "He called me and asked, 'Can you type?'"

It was the start of a career that took Latulippe to Boston radio stations WEZE and WRKO and television Channels 2 and 7.

Win Bettinson, who conducted Party Line for many years, remembered joining the staff of WJDA while the station was celebrating its fifth birthday.

He also remembered the Blizzard of 1978 when he dug himself out of his Braintree home and was taken by Braintree police to the town line where Quincy police picked him up and took him to the Brackett Street studio.

"We stayed the whole night," he said.

A story from the Christian Science Monitor read reporting the start of the Quincy station and the fact that the transmitter tower was among the pigs and cows on Hodgkinson's farm in Germantown.

Herb Fontaine, the news director for 35 years, was there, too, and it was noted that his early morning interview calls to police stations and politicians all over the South Shore were legendary.

There were the days when Labor Day meant a Jerry Lewis' Telethon and WJDA broadcast from the downtown offices of The Quincy Sun as they raised money to fight muscular dystrophy.

Terry Fancher, the former South Shore Chamber of Commerce officer, recalled his youth in Arkansas listening to a community radio station much like WJDA. He missed it coming to Boston.

"When I came across 1300 on the dial and I heard WJDA, I knew I was home," he said. "That was the kind of station I grew up with."

Many in Quincy and the South Shore grew up with WJDA also — and now it is no more.

Men over 60 and women over 65 are at risk for vascular disease and stroke, conditions that may lead to long-term disability, loss of limbs, or sudden death.

Large Turnouts At Neighborhood Meetings

Mayor William Phelan's "Neighborhoods First" meetings have drawn large crowds in West/South Quincy, Quincy Point, Squantum and North Quincy.

Meetings will be held this week in Hospital Hill, Marina Bay, Montclair, Germantown, Merrymount and Quincy Point.

"The involvement of our citizens is paramount to strengthening our neighborhoods," Phelan said. "We can not truly achieve sustained improvement of our neighborhoods by fixing potholes alone. It takes an active, concerned citizenry to truly strengthen a neighborhood. I have been very much encouraged by the turnout thus far and the enthusiasm expressed by the residents involved."

Wednesday night Phelan was out to Marina Bay (6 p.m.) and Montclair (7:15 p.m.). Tonight (Thursday) he will be in Germantown (6 p.m.) and Merrymount (7:15 p.m.)

Next week's schedule includes meetings in Beechwood Knoll, Wollaston, Tuesday at 6 p.m. and at the Marshall School, Quincy Point, Tuesday at 7:15 p.m.

The following night, Wednesday, May 10, there will be meetings in Houghs Neck at 6 p.m. and Adams Shore at 7:15 p.m.

"Our goal is to empower residents to participate in the prioritization of neighborhood issues," Phelan said. "Working with the community and the ward councilors, I believe we can do a better job of understanding and addressing the issues that mean the most to our residents."

For more information on the "Neighborhoods First" initiative, call the Mayor's Office of Constituent Services at 617-376-1500.

Father Bill's Place Lease Renewed

The City Council Monday night approved Mayor William Phelan's five-year lease granting city property for Father Bill's Place, a homeless shelter at 38 Broad St.

"We truly do feel that it's our home, it's a great location for us in the city," said John Yazwinski, executive director of Father Bill's Place.

Over the past 18 years, the shelter has been improved with extensions, kitchens, ad new bathrooms, said Yazwinski.

The lease originated in 1988, with the opening of the shelter, which assists over 1500 individuals annually. Funding is provided by private contributions, and assistance from the state and federal government, said Yazwinski.

"Over 60 percent of the individuals who come to Father Bill's Place are coming with a last address or residence from Quincy," said Yazwinski.

"All the work that Father Bill's Place does is great for the city," said Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis.

The City Council vote did not include Councillor Joseph Finn.

Finn is the executive director of Massachusetts Housing and Shelter Alliance, and the former executive director of Father Bill's Place. Finn precluded himself "to avoid appearances of impropriety," he said.

Palestine/Israel Conference At First Parish Church May 13

The Friends of Sabeel-North America will sponsor a conference on "Peacemaking in Israel/Palestine: Is It Possible?" Thursday, May 13, from 12 noon to 4 p.m. at the United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St.

The Friends of Sabeel North America is a support group for the Sabeel Ecumenical Liberation Theology Center in Jerusalem.

"Sabeel," the Arabic word for "The Way," is identified as a movement of Middle East Christians dedicated to the promotion of justice, liberation, non-violence and reconciliation among the region's communities.

The keynote address, "An Introduction to the History of the Conflict," will be delivered by Shukri Khuri, a professor of surgery at Harvard Medical School.

He is a member of the American Diaspora Alliance for Israeli-Palestinian Peace and a member of the Commission for Peace and Justice of the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On May 6, 1911, George Maledon, the man who executed at least 60 men for "Hanging Judge" Isaac Parker, dies of natural causes in Tennessee. Paid $100 for each hanging, Maledon considered the job "honorable and respectable work" and tried to be a conscientious hangman who minimized suffering with a quick death.

• On May 1, 1931, New York City's Empire State Building is dedicated. Standing 102 stories, or 1,454 feet from the top of its lightning rod to its base at 34th Street and Fifth Avenue, the Empire State Building was constructed during the height of the Great Depression at a cost of only $40 million.

• On May 4, 1948, 25-year-old Norman Mailer's first novel, "The Naked and the Dead," is published. • On May 3, 1952, a skimodified U.S. Air Force C-47 becomes the first aircraft to land on the North Pole. Aboard the flight was Dr. Albert P. Crary, a scientist who in 1961 traveled to the South Pole by motorized vehicle, thus becoming the first person in history to have stood on both poles.

• On May 7, 1966, "Monday, Monday," by the Mommas and the Papas, hits the top of the charts. This was the first musical quartet to include two men and two women. Almost all previous groups that topped the charts were single-sex groups, like the Supremes or the Beatles.

So Long, WJDA

It's like losing one of your best friends or a member of the family.

WJDA, gone.

But fond memories remain.

"We're a family station," said Jim Asher who with his then partner, Joe Tobin, signed WJDA on the air at 1300 AM Sept. 13, 1947.

JIM ASHER

And, the station became a part of the daily lives of Quincy and South Shore families for 59 years.

They faithfully tuned in for the local spot news, to hear what was going on at City Hall, listen to a high school football game, check on "no school" announcements or for the community calendar of social and civic activities.

WJDA's call letters were Asher's initials: James D. Asher. A native of Kansas, he got to know Quincy as general manager at Remick's in the late 1930s and thought it the ideal place for a local radio station.

Asher originated and hosted the folksy popular early morning "Breakfast With WJDA" program featuring small talk such as how John (Zap) Duane was doing in cribbage, chatting with his engineer Fred Lane on the air, and, in between, playing stirring Sousa marches to help listeners get out of bed.

And then there was his on-air sidekick: Belinda the cow. Belinda would respond to something Asher said with a believable "moo." So believable that some people thought Belinda was for real and wanted to know how much hay she ate.

Another early popular program was "The Stork Club" with Mary Johnson reporting the latest births at Quincy, Milton and South Shore Hospitals.

And, of course, "Party Line" hosted at various times

BETTINSON

LIND

CATALANO

by Win Bettinson, Joe Kenney, Roy Lind and, more recently, Joe Catalano.

They and other voices behind the WJDA microphones became household names and community friends.

COLEMAN

KENT

Don Kent, the station's first weather forecaster with the on-air name Don Dixon, moved on to WBZ radio and television.

Sportscaster Bob Gallagher became the "Voice of the Miami Dolphins." Early newscaster Bill Edwards went to NBC's "Monitor" program and Don LaTullipe to WEZE and WRKO.

And to WJDA from Boston stations came Jerry (Slim Pickens) Howard, Nelson Bragge and Bob Risling who had their loyal followers.

As for loyal followers, former news director Herb Fontaine had his share of them. He was never shy about asking a loaded question or getting a public official out of bed at 4 a.m. for comment on a current issue.

FONTAINE

And those other familiar names that helped make tuning into 1300 became a must for listeners:

Ken Fallon, Charlie Ross, John Nicolson, Mike Logan, Terry Fancher, Bill Coleman, Bob Gohl, Rob Gilman.

NICHOLSON

Asher died in 1973 and his son, Jay Asher, took the helm. You might say Jay started at the bottom — emptying wastebaskets at the station when he was 12.

JAY ASHER

WJDA continued to serve the community well under Jay's leadership. And went far and above the call of duty during the Blizzard of '78 — to many the station's "Finest Hour."

During most of that famed storm that bashed the coast, flooded streets and homes, smashing sea walls and burying the area under 27 inches of snow, WJDA remained on the air as a beacon with vital information. For one full day it was the only means of communication between local officials and the public. The station stayed on the air two nights after normal broadcasting hours to keep that information flowing.

Including appeals for emergency equipment such as snowblowers and four wheel drive vehicles needed by the Civil Defense.

Teaming with Asher were Fallon, Fontaine, Bettinson, Ross, Nicolson, Lind and Don Baird, all of whom had made their way to the station one way or another including hitching rides on snowplows and in police cruisers.

"They arrived like the cavalry," Asher recalled. "All different directions and methods."

WJDA with its sister station WESX in Salem were sold for $4.5 million to Principle Broadcasting Network based in Bridgeport, Conn.

WJDA after nearly 60 years is no longer WJDA.

It signed off the air Sunday night and as of Monday became a Christian-oriented cultural music and talk station broadcasting out of Chelsea.

The call letters WJDA are gone forever. The studio will be gone, too. Quincy will no longer have its own radio station.

For longtime loyal listeners so familiar with the WJDA community-oriented format, tuning into the 1300 AM frequency Monday morning was like landing in a foreign country.

Those 59 years were good ones.

Well done, WJDA.

We're gonna miss you.

Scenes From Yesterday

THE NEWLY OPENED Presidents' City Motel at 845 Hancock St. in Wollaston published this 1957 postcard. Winfield and Lena Strout built the motel on the grounds of the Winfield House Restaurant that they had operated since 1937. Motels were a fairly new concept at the time and the Strouts offered the advantage of a restaurant on the premises as well as modern deluxe units with an air conditioner, TV, radio and telephone in each room. In the foreground is a cherry red Cadillac hardtop convertible with the tail-fins, whitewall tires and fender skirts that were so much a part of American automobiles at the time. When this motel opened, Hancock Street was Route 3, the main road from Boston to Cape Cod. It is still in business. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Patriots' Day Memorable In City Of Presidents

My granddaughter, Elia, and I took the trolley ride to the Presidents' houses on Patriots' Day. She was a late riser so we weren't able to do everything that was available.

We enjoyed the cooking demonstration at Hancock T.V. and Appliance. The chicken was delicious. Dr. Elijah Skinner explained the fine art of dentistry and surgery way back when – every interesting and very scary.

Sgt. Slaughter gave instructions in drilling and marching, then led the Colonial Militia in a charge. Abigail Adams took the lead of the militia and Sgt. Slaughter led the Red Coats in a charge. Elia chose to be one of the Red Coats. What fun they had!

We continued on to the Josiah Quincy House which we'd never seen. Elia got a big kick out of the paper shoe covers and the way they slid on the wood floors. Outside there were old time games with hoops and sticks.

We had a great time!

Congratulations to all involved in making it a day to remember.

Karen Marinella To Host Quincy Environmental Network's Anniversary Celebration May 10

Karen Marinella, anchor for "The Ten O'Clock News" on WLVI-TV, will host the Quincy Environmental Network's fifth year anniversary celebration Wednesday, May 10 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

"We immediately thought of Karen as the ideal person to help us kick off the evening," said Marcia Smith, one of the event's organizers. "She is a native of the South shore and has shown a real commitment to both environmental and non-profit causes."

Marinella is involved with non-profit organizations including Rosie's Place, Cambridge Family and Children's Service and Best Buddies.

KAREN MARINELLA

The QEN was established in 2001 to promote and coordinate efforts to protect Quincy's natural environment. Some of its accomplishments include candidates' nights on green issues, advocating for open space protection and holding public informational meetings on a variety of environmentally related topics.

"We really want this evening to be in recognition of all the hard work our members do on behalf of the environment. It is an opportunity for the greater community to come out and show their support for the QEN," Smith added.

Quality Home Care Bill Advances Through Legislature

Ayers Co-Sponsors Legislation To Help Seniors, People With Disabilities Live At Home

State Rep. Bruce Ayers (D-Quincy) is co-sponsoring a bill to improve access to home care services for local seniors and people with disabilities who want to live in their own homes.

The bill will make it easier to find and hire in-home personal care attendants, a process many Massachusetts residents and families struggle with regularly.

By establishing a directory of caregivers, the legislation will mirror successful measures taken in other states to improve availability of emergency and backup home care.

The bill advanced to the House Ways & Means committee after receiving a favorable recommendation from the legislative Health Care Finance committee. Passage through the Ways & Means committee is often a last step before a bill is voted on to become law.

Personal care attendants, consumers, and advocates were expected to rally at the state house Wednesday, April 12 to support the Quality Home Care bill. Statewide advocacy groups, including the Massachusetts

BRUCE AYERS

Association of Councils on Aging and the Disability Policy Consortium, have united behind the bill, citing major home care workforce shortages, and caretaker turnover rates in Massachusetts cities and towns averaging 40%-60% annually.

The need for quality home care in Massachusetts is growing rapidly as baby boomers age, adding urgency to the legislation co-sponsored by Ayers.

"The Massachusetts Councils on Aging supports this legislation because Massachusetts seniors deserve consistent delivery of care services," said Barbara Farnsworth, Advocacy Chair of the Massachusetts Councils on Aging. "Without an emergency backup system in place, consumers are left alone with no care."

Veterinarian To Speak To Snug Harbor First Grade

And she'll bring along a Chihuahua dog and an unspecified bird to illustrate her points.

The youngsters read about Dr. Smith in the book assigned to improve literacy among children and were thrilled to learn that she was with the Animal Rescue League in Boston.

"They're very excited about her visit," said Allan Osborne, the principal at Snug Harbor School.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Abandoned Fuel Oil Tanks

Some of you may have an abandoned oil tank in your basement from a fuel oil to natural gas conversion, or one replaced and never removed.

You might not have removed it where you didn't know what was involved in doing so. You might be considering replacing your existing tank and wonder about the process as well. Let me tell you what is required when removing or replacing an above-ground fuel oil tank.

If an above-ground, 275 gallon fuel oil tank is left unused for 24 months, it is considered abandoned and the code declares that it must then be removed. How does one do that?

You can contact a fuel oil delivery company and inquire about removal or check in the Yellow Pages for a contractor listed under "Tank Removal." That contractor, in turn, is required to pull a permit from the fire department for the removal. Besides the current location of the tank, we will then ask the contractor at what approved tank salvage yard it will be properly discarded and where any hazardous waste or sludge will be properly discarded as well.

At your home, the contractor will then drain the tank on site and clean it there as well. At some point a fire department inspector will stop by the location to make certain that the exterior fill and vent piping has been removed and issue a signed permit so that the tank can be transported to the salvage yard. Upon proper disposal, the tank salvage yard will acknowledge receipt of the discarded tank.

Checking on the removal of the exterior piping is essential so that no future fuel oil delivery can be made to that address. It has happened a number of times! An individual will remove the tank illegally while neglecting to remove the fill pipe. In time there have been accidental deliveries and fuel oil is delivered through the piping onto the basement floor. The remedial costs for the environment cleanup are astronomical, far outweighing the cost of a properly permitted tank removal.

We understand that this process can be a new experience for you, while I assure you we will do everything possible to quell your concerns and instruct you on the procedure. It is far better to remove it properly while we maintain the paperwork on the process. you are welcome to contact us with any questions.

American Idol Contestant To Visit Bernazzani School

The fifth-grade students at Bernazzani Elementary School are hosting a night with American Idol contestant Ayla Brown Friday at the school.

The event was planned to raise money for the students' end-of-the-year expenses including a pizza party and trip to Canobie Lake Park in June.

Ayla has quickly risen to celebrity status since her appearance on the widely popular weekly television program. The 17-year-old Wrentham resident is graduating from Noble and Greenough School in Dedham this month and plans to attend Boston College in September on a full basketball scholarship.

A letter was sent to her father, state Sen. Scott Brown of Wrentham, inviting Ayla to come to Bernazzani as part of an "American Idol" theme event.

"The children would be so excited to meet her, and the parents, who see her as a role model and inspiration for their own children, would be grateful as well," the letter stated. "Ayla personifies the values that we try to teach our children at home and within the Quincy Public School System."

Ayla is also the daughter of Gail Huff, a news reporter for WCVB Channel 5.

Renovated House Will Be Home For 19 Veterans

now," said Philip Mangano, executive director of the U.S. Interagency Council On Homelessness.

"All on the same page, with the same goal, the same mission. Well that's a good thing here in Quincy, and we expect good things in Quincy.

"This kind of partnership we've seen... it works! We don't have to wonder if it will work, we already see it. You're just too blessed here in Quincy, (McCarthy) must be on his knees every night.

"This ceremony represents the best of what's going on in our country! We as Americans are partnered to end a national disgrace, and it's about time," said Mangano.

The president proposed another "record" of more than $4.15 billion for homeless for 2007 said Mangano.

Mangano also noted a national decrease in the number of homeless veterans from 250,000 homeless in the late 1990s to less than 100,000 now.

"Our celebration here today is local, but it has national implications, so congratulations on that," said Mangano.

"You have done the right thing."

DAN RAYMONDI
"A Partnership that has no equal."

"A partnership that has a mission of providing permanent homes for the homeless is one that has no other equal," said Councillor Daniel Raymondi, Ward 2, whose Ward includes the Winter Street home.

"This city should be so proud. It is the real deal. It is a partnership that works," said Arthur Connelly, President and C.E.O. of South Shore Savings Bank.

"These organizations have accomplished what others have only dreamed about. We continue to be prepared to provide (financial support). Not just my bank, but other banks.

"We're ending the day when homeless wander the streets waiting for their bed," said Connelly.

DENNIS HARRINGTON
Welcomed guests

Donating a check to the Neighborhood Housing Services on behalf of South Shore Savings Bank as part of their long-term support stuartship, Connelly said, "it's only pennies, but we're so proud to be a part of this."

Donating a $25,000 check on behalf of Citizens Bank, David Kilnapp, Sr. vice president said, "It's right to celebrate but we have a lot more work to do, so let's do it again and again and again, until we put this guy (McCarthy) out of business."

The Winter Street Project was part of Quincy Community Development week, April 17-21, and follows the completion of a home on Clairmont St. that houses 12 homeless women.

Councillors Jay Davis and Joe Finn were also present.

Total Dollar Volume $1.31 Billion

Norfolk County Real Estate Sales Down 4% In First Quarter

Total dollar volume of real estate sales in Norfolk County for January through March, 2006, was $1.31 billion, down four percent from the comparable period last year, reports Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell.

A total of 3,992 deeds were recorded during the quarter, also down four percent. Average sales prices, however, increased. The average price reported in deeds over $1,000 (both residential and commercial properties), was $603,860, up 13% on a year-to-year comparison basis.

According to O'Donnell's report, mortgage activity declined on a year-to-year basis, with 10,962 new mortgages recorded, showing a total dollar amount of $5.44 billion. The total number of mortgages was down 12 percent, and the total dollar amount down 14 percent, from January through March of 2005.

"It is important to note that mortgage filings do not necessarily represent an overall increase in indebtedness, since many mortgages are refinancings replacing existing debt or secure equity credit lines which may not be drawn in their entirety," O'Donnell said. "For similar reasons, mortgage activity is closely related to changes in interest rates."

The Registry of Deeds is the principal office for real property records in Norfolk County. The Registry is a basic resource for secure, accurate and accessible land record information.

For further information regarding the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, call 781-461-6116 or visit the Registry website, www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Insurance Tips For Homeowners, Renters

(NAPS) Whether a homeowner or renter, insurance provides critical protection.

Homeowner's insurance protects a home's physical structure and an owner's personal property. In contrast, renter's insurance only protects personal property. Everyone, homeowners and renters, needs liability coverage to provide financial protection in case others are injured on the property or by fault of the owner.

There are options to insure a home and belongings for either their replacement cost or their actual cash value. Actual cash value is the amount it would take to repair the home or replace damaged possessions after factoring in depreciation.

It's a good idea to make an inventory of all personal belongings and save receipts for major items, along with a photograph or video of each room. Store copies of the documentation in a safe deposit box or another offsite secure location in case the home is destroyed.

The following are some considerations provided by The National Association of Insurance Commissioners (NAIC), a voluntary organization of state insurance regulatory officials:

Important Considerations

With expensive valuables, such as jewelry, antiques or art, it may be beneficial to purchase a "rider" to a policy, as these items are subject to coverage limitations in basic policies.

Damage to a home or belongings caused by flooding is NOT typically included in a homeowner's policy. For owners living in areas prone to flooding, inquire about flood insurance through the federal government's National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP). Insurance agents can help obtain flood insurance.

Insurance Tips For Different Life Stages

At different stages, people have different insurance needs. For instance:

- Young singles who are sharing an apartment with unrelated roommates each need their own individual renter's policy to protect their own possessions.
- Young families that add a swing set or trampoline for their kids should consider additional liability insurance.
- Established families that may be remodeling or building an addition should update their homeowner's policy to reflect these enhancements.
- Seniors should ask if they are eligible for discounts. And if the mortgage was just recently paid off, and the homeowner's insurance was previously paid through the mortgage company, be sure to assume direct responsibility for the premiums so that the policy doesn't lapse.

Remember, before signing an application for insurance, take a few minutes to stop, call the state insurance department and confirm the company is legitimate and authorized to sell insurance in the state.

For more information about insurance, visit the NAIC's new consumer education web site called Insure U Online at www.InsureUonline.org.

Flynn Auctions Watertown Property For $380,750

The property of 124 Riverside St. in Watertown was recently auctioned by Daniel J. Flynn & Co., Inc. for $380,750.

Flynn & Company was hired by the Town of Watertown to conduct the auction which attracted 56 registered bidders.

The auction for the Victorian era house at 124 Riverside St. started with a low bid of $10,000. After the fast paced bidding, the town-owned property was sold to Nadia Shirazi for $380,750.

The century old colonial style property has sat vacant on the corner of Riverside and Royal streets, since its original owner passed away almost 10 years ago.

"The final price at auction is the truest test of the real estate's fair market value," said Auctioneer and Flynn & Co. CEO Dan Flynn. "Auctions create a sense of urgency among potential buyers because the subject property will only be available for sale at the specified date and time."

In addition to a streamlined marketing process, real estate auction sales generally contain no contingencies that can slow or even derail a closing.

Daniel J. Flynn & Co., Inc. is a full service real estate firm specializing in real estate sales and leasing, auctions, real property appraisals, construction and development.

Investing In A Home's Value

(NAPS) The impact the outside of a home makes is the first impression others will have on it. Whether looking to put a home on the market, or just to improve its appearance, there are a few key projects that will improve the resale value and the aesthetics of a home.

Cut the grass and weed and edge the garden. Keeping a yard manicured will make a big difference only expense is a little elbow grease. For a minimal cost, annual flowers can be planted and they will likely bloom all year long. Plant red flowers to attract hummingbirds.

A deck is a natural extension of living space. While a deck is ideal for hosting parties, having barbecues and enjoying quiet nights at home, it also adds financial and visual value to the home. To avoid burdensome staining, sealing or painting of a wood deck, choose a wood composite. A wood composite, such as TimberTech, is a low-maintenance product made from wood and plastic that looks well-kept all year.

When adding a wood composite deck, or when using it to replace a wood deck, much of the investment will be recouped after selling the home. Remodeling Magazine's 2005 Cost vs. Value Report estimates a national average of a 90.3 percent return on investment for deck additions. TimberTech offers a wide variety of planks and color choices, accessories and railings to create a backyard paradise. For more information, visit www.timbertech.com.

A few simple lights can have a dramatic effect. Use temporary lights to create an ambiance for a get-together and keep the party lit long after dark. Use permanent lights to line walkways, garden beds or decks. Most outdoor lights are now available with solar power, so there's no need to mess with cords and electrical outlets.

Siding is an important part of the exterior of a home. While there are many options available, make sure to invest in a siding that will look as good in the future as it does today. To ensure maximum curb appeal, choose a siding product that gives the desired look and maintenance freedom.

One option is insulated siding, which offers long-lasting beauty with an authentic natural wood appearance, and the insulation gives a home better energy efficiency for added savings. For example, Crane Performance Siding's CraneBoard Solid Core Siding features an authentic wood look and comes in six styles, including a new Board & Batten and Beaded siding. For more information, visit www.cranesiding.com.

Homeowners can easily improve the look of their home by doing a few of these tasks. What's more, low-maintenance additions provide homeowners with more time for important activities, such as relaxing with family and friends.

Lawn & Garden Tips

(NAPS) When it comes to watering your yard, you may be able to save yourself some "green" – without your lawn turning brown – by using an irrigation system.

• Waste not, want not – Instead of watering for one long continuous session, try splitting the watering time into shorter periods and take 15-minute breaks in between each session. This will let the water soak in, while minimizing runoff.

• Raise the blade – Trim grass at a higher mower setting to shade roots from sunlight and encourage deeper roots. Lawns with longer grass blades (2 inches) will retain more moisture and encourage deeper, healthier roots.

• Watch the clock – Water between 5 a.m. and 10 a.m., when the sun is low, winds are calm and temperatures are cool. By watering in the morning, you give the leaves a chance to dry out during the day.

• Divide by zones – Different plants need different amounts of water. Divide your yard into separate irrigation zones so the grass can be watered separately and more frequently than ground covers, shrubs and trees.

Septic Tank Safety Measures

Q. I think before you write an article on septic tanks you should do a little research and learn something about the business. First off, you should never recommend someone check their own cesspool. I was involved in a very unfortunate incident of a customer falling into the cesspool and dying because he was trying to check his own. So it is very upsetting to hear you give some advice that can be deadly to someone. I am the owner of a cesspool company, and I advise you do some serious research before writing an article.
—Anonymous, via e-mail

A. Well, that's it folks, from now on don't check your septic tank levels with a measuring stick, call a professional to do it. While you're at it, throw away all your power tools, your ladders and maybe all the fatty foods in your refrigerator, too. They are all unsafe and can lead to your demise.

I am being a bit flippant, but the last time I checked this was a "do-it-yourself" column. And I have great faith in my readers that they will observe basic safety guidelines before checking septic tank levels, using power tools, climbing ladders or consuming steaks.

That said, let's go over some common-sense precautions to take before checking your septic-tank levels: Bring a helper along, and if you're worried about falling in, bring a sturdy rope. Don't lean over or into the tank opening. If the measuring stick you're using doesn't reach the bottom of the tank, get another one. And don't ever attempt to drain or clean the tank yourself (this actually did lead to a widely publicized fatality a couple years ago) — the point of measuring the amount of sludge is to determine when to call a professional to pump it out.

If you'd like more in-depth information about septic tank maintenance than this brief column can provide, allow me to recommend my favorite book on the subject: "The Septic System Owners Manual" by Lloyd Kahn, Blair Allen, Julie Jones and Peter Aschwenden (Shelter Publications, 2000).

It's also not a bad idea to have one or two safety guides for other do-it-yourself tasks in easy reach. So head to your nearest bookstore (or online store) and ask for books on power-tool or home-improvement safety. Many of these guidelines are included in any general home-improvement book you pick up, so be sure to review them before starting repair or maintenance tasks.

The steaks I can't help you with, I'm afraid. You'll just have to use your best judgment. Although I do have a decent marinade recipe for them.

Offense Powers Raiders Past Presidents, 8-1

BASEBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

Even with a 7-1 lead in the sixth inning, head coach Rick Beach seemed uneasy because he has seen his North Quincy High School baseball team have that one bad inning far too often this year.

Quincy had loaded the bases with two outs and was one swing away from getting back into the game last Thursday night at Adams Field. This time, though, the Red Raiders prevailed when senior pitcher Paul Doolan struck out a pinch-hitter en route to an 8-1 victory.

"We usually have one bad inning," Beach said. "That's been our problem all year. It almost happened with the bases loaded but we got out of it. We got a couple of nice bounces and some nice drops at second when stealing bases which helped out."

"The kids have been playing hard," he added. "We're young. Out of my starting 10, I have three seniors and they're the captains and have been with me for four years since they were freshmen. Everybody else is young and it's a learning experience for them."

North Quincy (2-8 overall, 1-3 Atlantic Coast League) played at Falmouth Wednesday and will travel to Brockton Friday at 4 p.m.

Quincy (1-8, 0-4) played Falmouth Monday and Dennis-Yarmouth Wednesday, and will host King Philip Regional tomorrow (Friday) at 4 p.m. at Adams Field.

Doolan, who pitched well in his previous two outings, limited the Presidents to just the one run on two hits and four walks while punching out eight. He held them hitless through four innings before senior Joe Griffin, who had both hits, placed a ground ball under the glove of a diving second baseman in the fifth.

"Doolan pitched great," Beach said. "Two-hitter and he struck out eight. He's been doing a great job all year."

"I just told them you can't win on two hits," said Quincy head coach Mike Draicchio. "We helped them a little bit, there's no question about it. It's a consistent thing we've been doing, unfortunately. If you swing at high pitches, all you're going to get is pop-ups. That's what we did a bunch of times."

The Red Raiders grabbed a 3-0 lead in the second. Junior Chris Boyd (3-for-4) singled and with two outs junior Stephen Matos (2-for-3) blasted a triple to right-center, scoring on the play when the third baseman couldn't field the throw. After junior Brendan Carnell reached on an error and stole second, junior Shaun McBrien plated him with a single up the middle.

Quincy junior Dan Myers kept his team in the game by working out of a couple of jams, including a bases-loaded threat in the fifth inning.

"I thought that our kid pitched pretty well early," Draicchio said. "He's been pretty much our most consistent pitcher for the year."

The Red Raiders, though, knocked him out of the game in the next inning. After the first two batters flied out, senior tri-captain Tom Power (2-for-5) reached on a bunt single, stole second and scored on Doolan's single.

Doolan (2-for-4) stole second and scored on senior tri-captain John Allen's single. Boyd followed with an RBI double over the left fielder for a 6-0 lead.

The Presidents ruined Doolan's bid for a shutout in the bottom half. Junior Steve Connolly led off with a walk, moved to second on a passed ball and to third on a wild pitch before junior John Alexander brought him home with a sacrifice fly.

North Quincy, which banged out 14 hits, tacked on an insurance against reliever Jon Pelletier in the seventh when junior Jay Lewis scored Matos with a sacrifice fly.

"I wasn't expecting to be where we are right now," Draicchio said. "I don't think anybody was expecting to be where we are. But I knew there was going to be a struggle with pitching. I knew that was going to be tough.

"We get down in a game like this and sometimes you can't battle back. Unfortunately for us, it's been consistent that way. If we're down, we have a very difficult time to fight and get back into games. I'm just hoping we start doing some of the things we need to do. Because I really feel we have too much talent not to be getting some W's."

LEAKING INFORMATION
Coolant leaking from the radiator may be due to anti-freeze that has not been changed according to the recommended schedule and has become corrosive. Otherwise, it may be that normal shaking and vibration has led to an eventual separation between parts connected by solder, epoxy, or mechanical crimps. In addition, thermal forces arising from extremes in engine temperatures may have caused cracks in stressed areas. Regardless of the cause, a radiator leak must be checked as soon as possible because loss of coolant can spell disaster for the engine. Remedies can range from clamp tightening or hose replacement to radiator repair or replacement. So, don't assume the worst until you have had the problem checked out.
A radiator leak could be a simple fix, but it could be something more serious. One way to be completely sure is to have the experts at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO look at it. We have years of experience and can properly service your car. Preventative can save you money over the life of your car. Bring your car to 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree if you see any fluids have leaked from your car. Call 781-843-1550 to set an appointment. Open: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.
HINT: The most common indication of a coolant leak is green fluid beneath the front end of the vehicle. Attend to this problem immediately.

Quincy Defeats Randolph, Malden To Reach .500

SOFTBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School softball team moved above the .500 mark last week with a pair of distinctive victories.

After pounding Randolph, 15-1, last Tuesday, the Presidents rallied for a 4-3 hold-your-breathe type win over Malden last Thursday at Mitchell/McCoy Field.

"Like I said before, if we can get to our 10th game at 5-5 I'd be happy," said head coach Mike Sedar, whose team is 4-3 overall (2-1 Atlantic Coast League). "It looks like that might be a prophet."

Quincy, which played at Falmouth Monday and at Dennis-Yarmouth Wednesday, will square off against North Quincy tomorrow (Friday) at 6:30 p.m. at Mitchell/McCoy Field.

The Presidents showed they've come a long way since their first meeting against Malden, a 7-2 loss April 18.

"Malden is a good little ball club," Sedar said. "They played better this time than the first time we played them. We played so bad the first time. I think we played better.

"We're playing better in the infield for sure. We're more aggressive. We're hitting the ball better. Our short game is getting much better. This was a good game for us. We're starting to get better. You can see it. We have 10 solid kids now. Looks like we'll be fine."

With a 4-3 lead in the seventh inning, sophomore starter Katie Santon walked the leadoff hitter before senior Theresa McConicki, battling an illness, relieved her.

McConicki gave up a bunt single, induced a ground ball out and intentionally walked a batter to load the bases. She escaped the jam, recording a foul pop-up to first base and a grounder to shortstop to preserve the triumph.

Santon allowed five hits and five walks and struck out five in her outing. She gave up an RBI double in the first inning. In the fourth, a pair of walks sandwiched an infield error to load the bases with no outs.

With the infield draw in, she induced consecutive ground balls to get the force out at home. She yielded a two-run single as Malden took a 3-0 lead, but a runner was thrown out at third base to end the inning.

The Presidents responded with four runs in the bottom half. Senior tri-captain Kim Lebel reached on an error and stole second. Senior tri-captain Courteney Hall reached first base when she grounded back to the pitcher, who failed to get Lebel out at third.

After Hall took second base, junior Brighid Kyle reached safely when the pitcher fielded her grounder and held the ball to prevent Lebel from scoring.

With the bases loaded and no outs, senior Erica Berg got Quincy on the board with a sacrifice fly to right field.

"This was her first game," Sedar said. "She was with us at the beginning of the season and then got hurt. She's a nice first baseman and hits the ball well."

Freshman Alyssa Mullen dropped a bunt and the catcher tried to get the force out at third base, but threw the ball into left field allowing the tying runs to score and Mullen to reach third.

Senior Felicia Avitable grounded to the third baseman, who couldn't get Mullen out at the plate in time as the Presidents went ahead, 4-3.

"That's what we should be doing because we have a lot of speed," Sedar said of his team's aggressiveness on the base paths in the fourth inning. "Even our slower players are pretty fast. We should be doing things like that. We haven't been lately."

Quincy-North Girls Dominate Field Events In Falmouth Loss

TRACK

The Quincy/North Quincy High School girls' track team continued to dominate in the field events, but with several key runners out of action it dropped a 73-63 decision last Tuesday at Falmouth.

Freshman Jessie Howlett ran an Atlantic Coast League-leading 12.8 in the 100 meters and also anchored the winning 4x100 relay team. Virginia Wong also set an ACL best, winning the javelin with a 105-5.

Krysten Newsom placed second in the 100 also with a personal best 13.1 and took both the long jump and triple jump. Kelly Pineo won the shot-put and Lauren Brooks took the mile.

Placing second were Kim Allen in the high jump and triple jump, Krystine Kelley in the 400, Lily Man in the 800, Nicole Kasanoff in the mile, Kelly Pineo in discus and Rachel Barrett in the shot-put.

Third-place finishers were Erin Collins in shot-put, Julie Lynch in javelin and Kerry Regan in the two mile.

The 4x100 relay team of Newsom, Emma Bonoli, Allen and Howlett won. A win in the 4x400 relay would have earned a tie but the Clippers were just too strong.

In last Saturday's State Relays at Peabody High School, the javelin relay of Wong (107-8), Lynch (73-6) and Alyssa Beach (71-6) took second, missing the win by a mere 14 inches.

The shot-put team of Kelly Pineo, Barrett and Collins placed sixth. Pineo also had a personal best of 83-5 in the discus.

Although none of the track or jumping relays placed, several girls turned in noteworthy performances including Man (2:42.9 in 800), Christine Sorenson (14.6 in 100) and Tam (14-1 in long jump).

Q/NQ traveled to Plymouth South Tuesday for a tri-meet with Plymouth North and Sandwich and will attend the MSTCA Freshman-Sophomore meet Saturday in Franklin.

Morrisette Legion Baseball Tryouts Saturday, Sunday

The Morrisette American Legion baseball team will hold tryouts Saturday and Sunday at 12:30 p.m. at O'Rourke Field, Quarry Street.

Tryouts will continue on Saturdays and Sundays at O'Rourke Field for the rest of the month. Anyone who resides in Quincy, born on or after Jan. 1, 1987, is eligible to try out.

There are 11 teams competing for this year's Zone 6 title: Morrisette, Quincy, Braintree, Canton, Cohasset, Dorchester, Milton, Stoughton, West Roxbury, Weymouth and Holbrook.

Each team will play a 20-game schedule, beginning June 7 and ending July 10, with zone, sectional and state playoffs to follow. The state tournament will begin July 30 in Sandwich.

Beechwood Knoll Runner-Up

Atlantic Repeats As Recreation Basketball Jamboree Champion

Host Atlantic defended its title in the Quincy Recreation Department's recent annual elementary basketball jamboree.

The jamboree brings together boys and girls from recreation centers across the city for a morning of round-robin basketball with all teams playing mini-games and partaking in a skills clinic.

After pool play, the event moves to a single-elimination format for the final four teams. All teams are coached by recreation leaders from various citywide recreation programs.

Atlantic, coached by recreation supervisor Shauna Farren, defeated Beechwood Knoll, 10-8, in the final to recapture the jamboree cup.

Andrew Jaehnig, A.J. Shaughnessy and Steven Roche led Atlantic on offense and defense. Beechwood played hard with Brianna Mullaney, Danielle Mullaney and Brendan Cox playing well.

Atlantic dominated the entire jamboree. It defeated Bernazzani by a wide margin to reach the championship with Matty Donovan and Mike O'Donnell playing well. Atlantic's 16-6 win over Atherton Hough and its 14-6 win over Beechwood would not have been possible without the intense play of Connor McGrath, Billy Campbell, Robert King and Stephen Beaton.

Beechwood, coached by recreation leader Steve Matos, had a long and hard road to the finals, starting with a tough 12-6 victory over Atherton Hough. Andrew Minton led the way with four points. David Lawlor, Jaclyn Merchant and Amelia Wool each scored two and Molly Minton was solid defensively.

Beechwood also beat the combined Squantum-Merrymount team in a hard fought 16-12 victory. Minton again netted four points and was helped out by Lawlor, Merchant, Cox and Jane Minton. It dropped a 14-6 decision to Atlantic in the preliminary round. Emmett Harrow and Simon Chow turned in great efforts.

Atherton Hough, coached by recreation leader Scott Richards, faced a tough schedule throughout the jamboree. It beat Bernazzani, 12-8, as Tommy Wahlberg, Mike Munroe, Mark Munroe, Rob Munroe and Anthony McShane each scored two points.

Difficult losses to Beechwood, 12-6, and Atlantic, 16-6, showed similar team effort with all players contributing offensively and defensively.

Bernazzani, coached by recreation supervisor Meaghan Foley, made its presence known at the jamboree. It won a close game over Squantum-Merrymount with Christine Kelleher and Kayla Sugrue each netting two points.

Bernazzani lost to Atherton Hough, 12-8. Kelleher scored four points and Rachel DeMelin and Shannon Callaghan each had two. It also played well in a loss to Atlantic. Stephanie DiPietro and Emily Picot played hard.

Squantum-Merrymount, coached by recreation leader Taylor Brean, turned in a strong effort in the jamboree. In a loss to Beechwood, Haley McKay led the team with six points and Will Chu had four and Mike Haley two. Alexis McKay, Rudy Tryon and Hanna Donnovan played great defense in a loss to Bernazzani.

Brian Buckley, a 30-year veteran of the recreation staff and college and high school coach, conducted the clinic.

Recreation Director Barry Welch presented championship ribbons to both finalist teams and the jamboree cup to Atlantic. He praised the work of recreation leaders T.J. Bell and Kathleen Shea, who served as officials for the event.

Car Maintenance Tips To Prepare For The Road

(NAPS) Anytime of year can be the right time to get a car in tip-top shape. Experts know that a top-notch pit crew can make the difference between winning or being an also-ran, even when just getting ready for the next family trip. That's why it's important to remember that not all auto repair technicians are created equal.

Just ask Todd Berrier, crew chief for Kevin Harvick, driver of the No. 29 GM Goodwrench Chevy Monte Carlo SS. "It's my job to make sure Kevin (Harvick's) car is in perfect working condition at every race," said Berrier.

He recommends having a trained technician "sweat the details" like he does and inspect the following before hitting the road:

• Tire pressure: About 20 percent of cars inspected in the check lanes during National Car Care Month have underinflated tires, which can result in blowouts and serious accidents. Underinflation is the leading cause of tire failure, according to the Rubber Manufacturers Association (RMA). In addition, low tire pressure can reduce gas mileage by up to 3.3 percent.

• Wipers: Generally, wipers should be replaced every six months, ideally in the spring and fall, making now the perfect time to take a look at them. Also, make sure the windshield washers work properly and keep the washer fluid reservoir full.

• Lubricants and Fluids: Nearly 30 percent of vehicles failed inspections as a result of too little, too much or dirty motor oil, and 26 percent had low, overfull or burnt transmission fluid. Twenty-one percent had low or contaminated brake fluid, and 18 percent failed the washer fluid inspection. Improper fluid levels affect vehicle safety and can damage vehicle components.

• Parts: It is important to have items such as belts and hoses regularly inspected and replaced with the right parts when needed. Genuine GM replacement parts, for example, are manufactured to the same specifications of the company's vehicles. A broken belt or ruptured hose can cause costly engine damage and travel delays.

"Regular vehicle maintenance and inspections can help improve a vehicle's fuel efficiency, achieve peak performance and even help avoid major repairs down the road," said Peter Lord, executive director, GM Service Operations.

Lord also emphasizes the importance of technician training when it comes to getting superior maintenance.

For instance, according to federal statistics and Automotive Service Excellence (ASE), only about half of the 820,000 auto service technicians in the U.S. are certified by ASE, an industry-recognized leader in technician certification.

He points out that not only are GM Goodwrench technicians ASE-certified, and recertified every five years, they receive additional training beyond the ASE requirements.

These technicians are prepped to maintain and repair GM vehicles with a full line of products for one-stop service at over 7,000 GM dealership locations nationwide.

A Job Well Done

On April 15, at approximately 10 a.m., Officer Harry Breen was dispatched to Bersani Circle on a report of a "Person pointing a shotgun" at a Rent-A-Center employee. Officers Breen and Paul Matthews and Sgt. Richard Curran arrived on scene and noticed that several people were leaving from one of the apartment buildings and looked fearful. The officers located three Rent-A-Center employees standing outside and learned that a man in the bottom right apartment had pointed a gun at them through a window.

LT. DAN MINTON

Sgt. Curran immediately ordered all citizens from the street and line of fire. Officers William Mitchell, Steve DesRoche and Detective Dennis Maloney arrived to cover the perimeter. While using cover, wearing bullet-proof vests and with weapons drawn, Officers Matthews and Breen approached the apartment door, knocked and announced "Quincy Police." The officers kept knocking and instructing those inside to open the door.

After about three minutes of knocking, Officer Matthews loudly announced that they would force the door open. A female voice then said, "It's not my house." Officer Matthews reiterated his instructions but the door was not opened.

Due to the exigent circumstances as well as public safety concerns, Officer Matthews made numerous kicks at the door. The door was then opened and the officers observed two females in the immediate room. They also noted that the door had been solidified by pieces of wood. For everyone's safety, the officers, with guns drawn, instructed the two females to face down on the floor.

When asked if anyone else was in the apartment, one female stated that her boyfriend was in another room. Officer Matthews called out to him to come out slowly with his hands over his head and once he emerged, he was handcuffed.

Sgt. Curran then directed a search of the apartment for other suspects. Still with guns drawn, Officer Matthews found a second male hiding in a bedroom and he was handcuffed and brought to the living room area with the three other suspects. The suspects were asked if there was a gun in the apartment and one of the males said that there was a BB gun in the rear bedroom. Officer Matthews found the BB gun in plain view.

One of the male suspects stated that the Rent-A-Center employees came to repossess some property, so they did not answer the door. All occupants denied pointing a gun out the window. Officer Matthews then interviewed the victims/employees of Rent-A-Center and learned that they had knocked on the door but no one answered. As they were leaving the walkway, a male (suspect 1) walked up the street to the apartment building and as the entered, he said that he was "sick" of Rent-A-Center people coming to his house. He also said if they came back he would "punch you in the face."

The workers left the area, contacted their supervisor and then returned with a second truck. The three workers walked around the apartment building and one of the workers saw suspect 1 looking out the window. He asked him to let them in so they could get their property. Suspect 1 then left the window and returned to another window with a gun in his hand.

The victim said that the suspect was pumping the gun, which he believed to be a shotgun. Suspect 1 pointed the gun at the victim and said, "Get out of her (expletive) or I'll shoot you." One of the females inside the apartment then pulled the suspect away from the window.

The victim and his co-workers fled the area and contacted the police. The victim identified the suspect from the group of four handcuffed residents and he was placed under arrest. The three other occupants were no longer suspects and the handcuffs were removed. Upon further inquiry by Officer Breen, the females said that they wanted to open the door but were afraid.

They stated that the front and rear doors were barricaded with wood braces due to a past break-in. The suspect, a 24-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with "Assault by Means of a Dangerous Weapon" and "Disorderly Conduct." A paint ball gun and a battle-axe, which were in plain view in the suspect's bedroom, were also seized for public safety reasons and placed into evidence.

This case shows that the role of the police officer is often reactive – and that we only have moments to respond to an unknown situation. The first action was to ensure that citizens were out of harm and then to secure the area so that any potential threat was confined. The officers were able to defuse a volatile situation quickly and safely.

Nice work!

Q. I have reached my fitness goals and am happy with my body and fitness level. Can I take a break now and exercise just as needed, or will I ALWAYS have to exercise?

A. Yes, you can take a break, but not for long. We would all love to be able to work hard to reach our fitness goals and then just let our bodies maintain that fitness level forever, but it's just not realistic. As the saying goes, "If you don't use it, you'll lose it." When habits of exercise and proper nutrition change, so does your body.

It is understandable that you want to take a break if you've been working extremely hard to achieve your goal. Changing the intensity, frequency and type of exercise can help give you a break while also helping you maintain what you've achieved. The key is to allow exercise to become an imperative part of your lifestyle and to have FUN while doing it.

Reinvigorate your exercise routine by trying something new. Try a new cardiovascular machine, begin to swim, or even try taking a group exercise or dance class — these will allow you to have fun and stay fit. This change can also keep you interested if you're becoming bored with your routine.

The frequency of your exercise programs can also be altered. While you should definitely continue to set aside time to exercise, try exercising at different times of the day or different days of the week. Look for total body workouts that work each muscle group instead of one that works only the upper or lower body and requires you to exercise more often. When changing the intensity of your workouts, remember to continue to give your body a challenge.

As time passes you may find your body requires more to maintain your current fitness level and is looking for a challenge. This is actually a good thing, because it shows your body is becoming more efficient at your current fitness level. This is where you should switch up your workout routines to add different activities to give your body the challenge it desires.

While taking a short break from exercise, meaning one to two weeks, you may find your body welcomes the time to recover from injuries or from being overworked. During this time scale down your exercise routine but stay active. Once you get back on schedule you'll find your body rejuvenated and ready to continue on its lifelong fitness journey.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kfws@hearstsc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Getting Kids To Brush Up On Proper Oral Hygiene

(NAPS) Though parents may have reason to smile at the recent improvements in dental care in the United States, tooth decay is still one of the most common childhood diseases, according to the American Dental Association (ADA). It is five times as common as asthma in 5-17-year-olds, according to the association. And it affects more that one-fifth of American children age 2-4, half of those aged 6-8 and nearly 60 percent of those aged 15, according to the National Center for Health Statistics.

Here are tips from the experts at HealthSaver, an emerging discount health service, and recommendations from the American Academy of Pediatric Dentistry and the ADA:

1. Good Cleaning. Children may think they're old enough to brush their own teeth, but until they reach the age of six, make sure to take command and brush their teeth for them at least twice a day, using a pea-sized amount of ADA-approved toothpaste. After age six, continue to supervise brushing to make sure they reach every tooth and brush properly. Tooth care starts with the first tooth- brush a baby's gums and emerging teeth gently after each feeding with a toothbrush designed for infants and toddlers.

2. Visit the Dentist. Visit a dentist as soon as the baby's first tooth appears and no later than age 1.

3. Drink Fluoridated Water. Water fluoridation can prevent up to 40 percent of tooth decay. Drinking water with fluoride is still the easiest and most effective way to fight tooth decay. The 40 percent of families without optimal levels of fluoridation in municipal tap or well water may talk to their dentists about fluoridation options.

4. Don't Forget In Between. A toothbrush can't get into every nook and cranny so it's important to floss. The only way to reach lingering food particles lurking in children's teeth is to floss for them.

5. Eat Well. Make sure children eat a balanced diet, stay hydrated, and seek healthy options for between meal snacks. Do not put a child to bed with a bottle containing anything but water, and encourage use of a cup as a first birthday approaches.

HealthSaver is joining in the fight against cavities and promoting the benefits of a healthy smile. The health care discount service offers its members discounts of 10 to 35 percent of usual and customary fees for dental care services as well as discounts on prescriptions, alternative health care treatments and vision care. For more information visit www.healthsaver.com or call 1-800-71Health (1-800-743-2584).

Prepare Feet For Sandals

(NAPS) As active adults begin shopping for sandals, embarrassing and uncomfortable foot problems can take center stage. Dry cracking heels, corns and calluses may mean it's time for some foot care before donning new foot ware.

Corns and calluses are the most common conditions on the skin of the foot. A corn, which is a thickening of the outer layer of skin, usually occurs on the tops of the toes and in the areas with increased pressure or frictional forces. Calluses, which are the same condition on the bottom of the feet, can occur around the back of the heels and are generally due to the lack of elasticity and moisture content of the skin. A dry cracking heel (Xerosis) is a condition of thickening and fissuring (cracking) of the skin on the bottom part of the heel.

Like many foot conditions, heel fissures can become more dangerous if they go untreated and become deep or infected. This is especially dangerous for people with diabetes or compromised immune systems. If the problem persists, see a foot doctor.

Over-the-counter items such as an exfoliant cream are also helpful for the prevention of cracked heels. Exfoliants remove dead skin cells on feet, hands and other problem areas, leaving skin feeling smooth and radiant looking. One drugstore classic that has come to the rescue of rough, cracked feet and hands for almost 50 years is Pretty Feet & Hands Rough Skin Remover. To learn more visit www.prettyfeetandhands.com.

Ironically, people want feet to look soft and smooth during sandal season; however, going barefoot and wearing sandals can cause dry, cracked heels and calluses. Thankfully, many foot conditions can be easily prevented or treated by wearing properly fitting footwear or using the right over-the-counter foot care products.

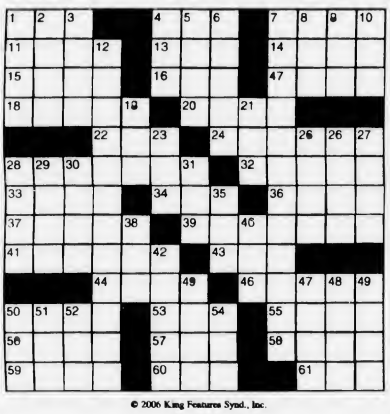
DENTISTRY for the 21st Century
by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.
ARE YOU A GOOD CANDIDATE FOR A DENTAL IMPLANT?

If you have healthy gums and adequate bone to support an implant, you may be a good candidate for this tooth-replacement option. An implant is an artificial tooth root that the dentist places in the jaw, where it fuses to the bone, to accept a replacement tooth or bridge. Because it so precisely mimics a natural tooth, a dental implant is the most secure, comfortable, and natural-looking tooth-replacement option. Once the implant and the prosthetic tooth are in place, they can be treated like the rest of the teeth. Just as importantly, unlike a traditional bridge, implants do not affect the health of adjacent teeth. They are stand-alone replacements that do not need to be anchored to neighboring teeth.

Dental implants provide one of the most valuable and exciting treatment options for today's dental patients. Dental implants have created opportunities that were unavailable in the past. People who have not been to the dentist for many years are often amazed at what can be done to improve their dental health and their smile. You can expect us to give you gentle, comforting care, using the most up-to-date dental techniques and equipment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we offer almost any type of dental treatment you might need. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.



P.S. Dental implants may be placed either in the bone (endosteal) or, in cases where there is inadequate bone, on the bone (subperiosteal).

Admired for its glossy, graceful leaves and its showy, tall-stemmed flower heads, agapanthus africanus make good background plants or edging along a fence, driveway, or wall. Thriving even with neglect, they grow well in many "trouble spots."

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Temper your typical Aries urge to charge into a situation and demand answers. Instead, let the Lamb's gentler self emerge to deal with a problem that requires delicacy.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You are aware of what's going on, so continue to stand by your earlier decision, no matter how persuasive the counter-arguments might be. Money pressures will soon ease.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) By all means, have fun and enjoy your newly expanded social life. But don't forget that some people are depending on you to keep promises that are very important to them.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You need to wait patiently for an answer to a workplace problem and not push for a decision. Remember: Time is on your side. A financial matter needs closer attention.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You now have information that can influence that decision you planned to make. But the clever Cat will consult a trusted friend or family member before making a major move.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Good news: You're finding that more doors are opening for you to show what you can do, and you don't even have to knock very hard to get the attention you're seeking.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your gift for creating order out of chaos will help you deal with a sudden rush of responsibilities that would threaten someone less able to balance his or her priorities.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Congratulations. Your energy levels are coming right back up to normal — just in time to help you tackle some worthwhile challenges and make some important choices.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The sage Sagittarian should demand a full explanation of inconsistencies that might be cropping up in what had seemed to be a straightforward deal.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A conflict between obligations to family and to the job can create stressful problems. Best advice: Balance your dual priorities so that one doesn't outweigh the other.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't guess, speculate or gossip about that so-called "mystery" situation at the workplace. Bide your time. An explanation will be forthcoming very soon.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Boredom might be creeping in and causing you to lose interest in a repeat project. Deal with it by flipping over your usual routine and finding a new way to do an old task.

BORN THIS WEEK: You can warm the coldest heart with your lyrical voice and bright smile. You find yourself at home, wherever you are.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"I'll never forgive you." Why? The scars or hurts, imagined or real, will never heal when or while there is a stubborn refusal to forgive and forget. There is certainly a peculiar quick between our reasoning as individuals and as a nation. During a war, a hatred of the enemy exists. Afterwards, as a nation, we forgive and forget. The scars are removed and our one time enemies can become friends. Yet, in person to person - day by day living - one time friends can become enemies. . .

It is a disturbing reflection that some people, at times, place themselves on a higher level than God. All of us, at some time or another, are guilty of religious infidelities. But, when with humility, in an aloneness before God, we ask forgiveness for our faults, we know He will say, "I forgive." Since this is true, isn't it silly for people to refuse forgiveness to people for far less serious hurts? . .

A very wise man once said that to forgive is the quickest way to end trouble and to have peace and unity. For a forgiving spirit is by its very nature a unifying force. It can remove the barriers of separation between people and nations and weld them together in peace and goodwill. To hate is to die physically and spiritually, but to forgive is to live. . .

In Loving Memory of DENIS P. CRONIN on his Birthday
May 5, 1928 – October 14, 2004

You can only have one father,
Patient, kind and true;
No other friend in all the world,
Will be the same to you.
When other friends forsake you,
To father you will return,
For all his loving kindness,
He asks nothing in return.
As we look upon his picture,
Sweet memories we recall
Of a face so full of sunshine,
And a smile for one and all.
Sweet Jesus take this message,
To our dear father up above;
Tell him how we miss him,
And give him all our love.

"Ar dheis De go raibh a anam"
May his soul be on God's right hand side.

Quincy Family Together At Linden Ponds

When Nancy Fitzgerald, originally from Quincy, starting working at Linden Ponds she just knew this was the place for her parents.

"My parents John and Eleanor Cherry of Quincy had initially come on a luncheon invitation just before I started working at Linden Ponds," said Fitzgerald, home health scheduler, Linden Ponds. "After working here for some time I would always think to myself, I wish Mom and Dad could live here. Eventually I verbalized that to them."

About six months after Fitzgerald started at Linden Ponds, her daughter, Mary Kate Presente, got a job at the campus in the Medical Center. Her parents visited a few more times and soon realized that if they lived at the campus and needed to go to the doctor or take a swim or do a little shopping they could walk to all of them and see their family at the same time.

"This was the best decision we have made in a very long time" said Eleanor Cherry. "I can knit, take a swim and visit with my daughter and grand daughter every single day if I want to at Linden Ponds. I have six children, 16 grandchildren and one great-grandchild and to be able to keep in touch with some in person every single day is a blessing."

"I look forward to gardening as a new hobby," said John Cherry. "I have always used the tread mill and attended art classes but now I am able to do it with much more convenience because of living at Linden Ponds as well as saving on gas for my car."

"My aunt is moving to Linden Ponds very soon too," said Fitzgerald. "My daughter Emily is in nursing school and my fondest hope is that down the road she may have a nice job here at Linden Ponds. It really could become a family affair!"

also support the cleanup effort by providing the necessary tools including rakes, brooms, gloves and other equipment. The Department of Public Works and various private contractors volunteering their services will be on hand to haul refuse and other debris collected throughout the day.

Aviva Life Insurance, based in North Quincy, and Allied Waste (formerly BFI) have signed on as corporate partners for the event. Their logo will appear on the "Cleaner, Greener" T-shirts distributed to all volunteers following the cleanup. In addition, Aviva has assembled a cleanup team of more than 75 members and Allied Waste has dedicated trucks and manpower to assist with the cleanup efforts.

"The residential, municipal and corporate support of this event generates a great sense of community spirit and reminds us of what a special place Quincy is," Phelan said. "I extend my thanks to Allied Waste and Aviva for their support of such an important community event."

Following the cleanup, Phelan will host an appreciation cookout for all volunteers at the Richard J. Koch Park & Recreation Complex, One Merrymount Parkway, at 12:30 p.m. Hannaford Supermarket in North Quincy is donating a portion of the food and paper goods for the barbecue.

For more information on "Cleaner, Greener" or to organize a cleanup site, contact the Park Department at 617-376-1251.

'Cleaner, Greener' Quincy Cleanup Sites For Ward 4

Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis announced a committee of residents has selected the following sites for cleanup during the 17th annual "Cleaner, Greener" Quincy to be held Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon.

The sites are:

Lincoln Hancock Community School at 300 Granite St., Sterling Middle School at 444 Granite St., Grasso Playground on Columbia Street, Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center at 100 Brooks Ave., Tabor Park and the Bryant/Grove/Robertson area.

The Department of Public Works, Park & Forestry Department, Cemetery Department and Recreation Department will assist residents in this beautification effort by providing rakes, brooms, gloves and other equipment.

Coffee and doughnuts will be available. Following the cleanup, from 12:30 to 2 p.m., Mayor William Phelan will host an appreciation barbecue for all volunteers at the Richard J. Koch & Recreation Complex, One Merrymount Parkway. Volunteers will also receive a "Cleaner, Greener" Quincy T-shirt. Rain date is May 13.

Please Pick Up After Your Pooch

Pageant Field Canine Friends Raise 'Pooper Scooper' Awareness

Quincy dog owners, known as the "Canine Friends of Pageant Field" recently gathered at the park for their second annual "Spring Pooper Scooper."

Bags and shovels in hand they raised awareness of the importance of picking up after your pooch.

"We want to do our part to make sure this field is cleaned up for the upcoming sports season," said Judy Krimski, an active member. "The majority of dog owners up here are conscientious about cleaning up after their dogs but we realize it's not 100 percent, so we've decided to become committed to making it 100 percent.

"We want everyone to Paws at Pageant and pick up their poop!"

Besides organizing periodic clean-ups of the ball fields the CFPF is reaching out to inform new-comers to the park about the importance of "picking-up."

"If we notice someone new not 'picking up' we will politely remind them and even offer a bag," Doshie Powers says. "My car is full of them and I always have one handy to give out to whoever needs one."

DAN HERMAN, a member of the Canine Friends of Pageant Field, helped raise awareness of the importance of picking up after your pooch at their second annual "Spring Pooper Scooper."

CFPF members hope to create a positive environment where sports, dogs and dog owners can coexist.

"We have a wonderful community of dog owners who enjoy the park everyday - in fact many view their time up here as the highlight of their day," Powers added.

Tips for other dog owners coming to Pageant Field:

- During the sports season (spring - fall) it's a good idea to try to stay off the ball fields. There are many wooded paths and a beach area adjacent to Pageant that are ideal for frolicking with your pooch.
- Always carry a bag because you never know when you'll need it.
- Pick up your dog's poop no matter where it is. Poop left anywhere on the ground is a contaminant to the environment.
- Finally, if you see a stray poop, go ahead - PICK IT UP - even if it's not yours.

For Outstanding Community Service

George White Honored As Sun 'Citizen Of Year'

George F. White was honored Sunday as The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year for 40 volunteer years as a member of the Quincy Christmas Festival Committee — the past 25 as chairman — bringing holiday joy to many thousands of all ages.

More than 100 guests — including city and state officials, family and members of the festival committee, were present as he received the 21st annual award for outstanding community service at a reception at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center.

A panel of judges selected White for the award from among 35 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers.

"It all makes for a happy holiday season for so many," Sun publisher Henry Bosworth said of White and the festival committee members.

"To George F. White.

"For Outstanding Community Service

"As long-time chairman and member of the volunteer Quincy Christmas Festival Committee that brings joy to so many, and as a dedicated community leader and activist."

Sun editor Robert Bosworth presented him with a framed special Page One of The Sun devoted to his selection for the award and including names of the 34 other nominees and members of the selection panel. Extra copies were presented to those attending.

Mayor William Phelan noted White is a "truly hands-on" chairman who goes over every aspect of the Christmas parade and when it is over, starts going over every aspect of the next one.

"When you want something to be successful give somebody else all the credit," Phelan said. "George is the type of person who doles out all the credit to so many people. But, really, the glue is George. He's such a treasure for the city of Quincy."

Two former mayors, Frank McCauley and James Sheets, attended. McCauley is immediate past recipient of The Sun award and was a member of this year's judging panel.

City Council President Doug Gutro presented White with a citation from the entire City Council, which read in part:

"In recognition of being most worthy of receiving the prestigious Citizen of the Year Award from The Quincy Sun for outstanding community service, most particularly for 40 years with the Quincy Christmas Festival Committee. You are one of Quincy's most respected citizens, having served leadership roles on the First Night, Flag Day and Senior Olympics committees. You are a credit to the city of Quincy."

Gutro also presented White as a member of the

Will Send Appropriation Request To Council Monday

Phelan Seeking $2.2 Million For Sidewalk Repairs

Mayor William Phelan is seeking a $2.2 million appropriation for repairs and other improvements to city sidewalks.

Phelan will submit the appropriation request to the City Council Monday night.

"Our Neighborhoods First! surveys clearly showed that sidewalk repairs are a top priority of our residents," said Phelan. "We hope to continue to work with the ward councilors and our Neighborhoods First! Committees to establish priorities and develop a systematic way to ensure that we are as efficient and effective as possible with the money."

More than 5,000 survey responses were returned by residents and analyzed by city personnel. An overwhelming number of responses highlighted sidewalks and street repairs as the top area that the city needed to address.

"Residents should know that this effort is a direct result of their input," said Phelan. "The survey results were received loud and clear. We hope that residents will continue to partake in the Neighborhoods First! Initiative in an effort to improve the quality of life in our neighborhoods. I hope that this major step is just the first of many that we take with our citizens to improve our great city and its neighborhoods.

Recent sidewalk contracts have fixed sidewalks along Common Street, Forest Avenue, and Malvesti Way. Work is planned around the North Quincy High School once school is out for the summer. In addition, city personnel regularly patch and replace sections of sidewalks throughout our neighborhoods.

Phelan's proposal would utilize money from the city's "Free Cash" account; money that was budgeted but not spent in the prior Fiscal Year.

"We have done a good job budgeting and conserving in the past few years," Phelan said. "We now plan to reinvest some of that money into our city's neighborhoods. I think it makes sense to spend the people's money in the way that they suggested."

City Complies With Affordable Housing Standards

Mayor William Phelan announces a committee of city personnel that he charged with investigating the city's conformity with Chapter 40B of the Mass. General Laws has found the city complies with the standards of affordable housing required by the state.

If Quincy did not meet one of the three thresholds within Chapter 40B, a developer could seek a "comprehensive permit" for a development project and circumvent municipal zoning and ordinances. Compliance with Chapter 40B provides the local community with proper oversight of projects occurring within the community.

"This is great news for Quincy residents and bad news for developers," Phelan said. "The comprehensive permit threat is often used by developers to get a commu-

Liquor Stores, Bars Warned Of Police 'Stings'

City bars and liquor stores are alerted for a possible sting operation during the coming months.

Detective Lt. Peter Turowski, the city liquor inspector and license board agent, said that random compliance checks will be conducted for the city licensing board.

Unannounced visits will be made to check that liquor is not being sold to minors.

Several similar inspections have already been made this year and will be ongoing, Turowski said.

O'Toole Recalls McIntyre Inspiring Her Career

Law Day Awards Presented At Quincy District Court

By MIKAELA SLANEY

"There's unprecedented collaboration" between the police department and social services, said Boston Police Commissioner Kathleen M. O'Toole, reflecting on how policing has evolved since the beginning of her career.

O'Toole, Police Commissioner of Boston, was keynote speaker during the annual Law Day ceremony Friday, at Quincy District Court.

She recounted being inspired as a political science student after hearing a speech by the late James R. McIntyre, former mayor and state senator from Quincy.

She recounted telling McIntyre that he restored her faith in her chosen profession, and how McIntyre arranged for her to complete an internship with Clerk Magistrate Arthur H. Tobin.

O'Toole said she watched the police department change its methods from reacting to crime, to spending equal time striving to prevent it.

As a means of prevention, the police department assisted in the establishment of 108 children's programs that keep children "out of harm's way," she said.

BOSTON POLICE COMMISSIONER Kathleen M. O'Toole was the keynote speaker at the Quincy District Court's annual Law Day ceremonies.

O'Toole is currently being considered for a high-level executive position with the Executive Police of Ireland.

Nine area law enforcement officers, including four Quincy police officers, were honored at the event for efforts in serving their community.

Quincy police officers William Horick, John McIssac (who also received the Dana award in 2002), Lane Watkins, and Lt. Charles Santoro received the Robert P. Dana Distinguished Service Award for Law Enforcement for their collective efforts in retrieving two senior citizens from a burning home on Chick St. May 30, 2005.

The officers responded to an emergency call and were the first to arrive at the scene, said William Keating, Norfolk County District Attorney, who presented the award.

"Without hesitation officers McIssac and Watkins entered the smoke-filled burning building, and headed to the second floor the area of the blaze.

"Officer McIssac, a former Quincy firefighter, crawled through the upstairs rooms to conduct a thorough search inside the rooms, but found no one. Officer Watkins kicked in the door of the bedroom, where the fire was at it's peak. He was met by a wave of intensity, and the shock of the room's windows (which) were being blown out.

"Once the officers returned, when no one was on the second floor, they headed then to the basement. There they found Lt. Santoro and Officer Horick preparing to evacuate an elderly couple.

"Officer Watkins and Horick wrapped the female in blankets and carried her out, while Lt. Santoro and officer McIssac awakened the male in his recliner, and escorted him out.

"All four of these officers entered this burning building without any hesitation, or regard for their own safety. Their efforts undoubtedly saved the lives of two senior citizens," said Keating.

The Dana awards are named for the 29-year-old Metropolitan police officer who was killed in the line of duty more than 20 years ago.

Midwest Media Giant Buys Patriot Ledger

A media giant from the Midwest has reached into New England and picked off some of its brightest flowers, including the Patriot Ledger, the 169-year-old Quincy-based regional daily.

The Ledger, along with the Enterprise of Brockton, the Memorial Press Group weeklies in Plymouth and the Community Newspaper Company's 90 weeklies and four dailies were sold to Liberty Group Publishing of Illinois for an undisclosed sum.

Liberty announced plans to change its name to GateHouse Media and move its headquarters from Northbrook, Ill., to Rochester, N.Y.

"We're delighted to be joining the GateHouse Media family of newspapers," said Kirk Davis, the CEO of Enterprise NewsMedia, owner of the Patriot Ledger, the Enterprise and the Memorial Press Group.

"GateHouse has expressed great confidence in the future of our business and we expect a smooth transition. The Patriot Ledger will be come the largest newspaper in their company so I feel especially good about that.

"Moreover, GateHouse Media, and their CEO, Mike Reed, has put together a great combination of companies between Enterprise NewsMedia and Community Newspaper Company. I'm thrilled to be part of it."

Reed said it was too early to tell how Enterprise and Community would share advertising and editorial content or which papers would survive in places where each group has a weekly paper now.

The Community Newspaper Company was purchased from Pat Purcell, owner of the Boston Herald, and includes four dailies and some 90 weeklies in a ring around Boston, including the Mariner chain on the South Shore.

The Massachusetts acquisitions will give GateHouse 71 daily papers, 114 weeklies and 111 shopping guides. The Ledger, with a circulation of 55,000, will be the largest.

Gutro Calls Meeting About Fenno St. Sewers

Council President Doug Gutro was scheduled to hold a meeting last night (Wednesday) at 7 p.m. in the Beechwood Knoll School, 222 Fenno St., on the results of a sewer investigation affecting nine streets in the Fenno Street area.

The streets include all of Thornton Street, Langley Circle and Meadowbrook, Estabrook and Janet Roads; and part of Sims Road and Fenno, Marlboro, Florence and Greene Streets.

The $73,000 study was done by engineering firm of Wesson & Sampson, using a small camera to videotape sewer lines to determine if sewer repair or replacement is needed.

Gutro said in a letter to neighbors that if sewer work is required on streets recently paved, efforts will be made to use a technology that does not require digging up the streets.

'The Meanest Mother'

It was some 35 years ago that we ran across an article entitled "The Meanest Mother."

We printed it as a Mother's Day tribute that 1971 and for many readers back then it nostalgically hit home. It brought back fond memories of their own mother.

The author, as far as we know, remains anonymous. From time to time we have requests to reprint it.

Times and values have changed since 1971. The article seemed most appropriate back then. But today some might take issue with some of it.

We thought it was a fitting tribute to all the "mean" mothers everywhere. See what you think. It goes like this:

"I had the meanest mother in the whole world.

While other kids ate candy for breakfast, I had to have cereal, eggs or toast. While others had cokes and candy for lunch, I had to east a sandwich. As you guessed, my supper was different from the other kids, too.

But at least I wasn't alone in my suffering. My sister and two brothers had the same mean mother as I did.

My mother insisted upon knowing where we were at all times. You'd think we were on the chain gang. She had to know who our friends were and what we were doing. She insisted that if we said we'd be gone one hour that we be gone one hour or less — not one hour and one minute.

I am nearly ashamed to admit it, but she actually struck us. Not once, but each time we did as we pleased. Can you imagine someone actually hitting a child because he disobeyed. Now you can begin to see how mean she really was.

The worst is yet to come. We had to be in bed by nine each night and up early the next morning. We couldn't sleep until noon like our friends. So, while they slept, my mother actually had the nerve to break the child labor law. She made us work.

We had to wash dishes, make beds, learn to cook and all sorts of cruel things. I believe she laid awake nights thinking up mean things to do for us.

She always insisted upon our telling the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, even if it killed us. It nearly did.

By the time we were teenagers, she was much wiser and our life became even more unbearable. None of this tooting the horn of a car for us to come running. She embarrassed us to no end by making our dates and friends come to the door to get us.

I forgot to mention, while friends were dating at the mature age of 12 and 13, my old fashioned mother refused to let me date until the age of 15 and 18. Fifteen, that is, if you dated only to go to a school function and that was only once or twice a year.

My mother was a complete failure as a mother. None of us has ever been arrested. Each of my brothers served his time in the service of his country.

And whom do we have to blame for this terrible way we turned out? You're right, our mean mother.

Look at all the things we missed. We never got to march in a protest parade, nor to take part in a riot, burn draft cards, and a million and one things that our friends did. She forced us to grow into God fearing, educated, honest adults.

Using this as a background, I am trying to raise my three children. I stand a little taller and I am filled with pride when my children call me mean.

Because, you see, I thank God. He gave me the meanest mother in the whole world."

Happy Mother's Day, all you "mean" mothers.

McGLONE

Celeste, who ran for the school committee last year as a first-time candidate and pulled a good vote, but didn't win, has no political plans for the future.

"It was a good experience," she says. "And fun. But I don't think I'll try again."

Never close the door, all the way, Celeste.

Correction

First Metropolitan Mortgage was erroneously reported in The Quincy Sun April 27 issue as having been founded by Quincy natives Paul and Joseph Marnikovic.

Actually they are the founders of MHC Realty LLC, 859 Willard St., Quincy, with Atty. Courtney Hilliard of Marshfield.

First Metropolitan Mortgage is headed by Jeff, Oliver and Ruben Austria.

The Sun regrets the error.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1906 real photo postcard reproduction of the first Boston Gear Works factory on Hayward Street in Norfolk Downs. In 1905, company owner Frank Burgess, who lived in Wollaston, had moved some of his gear-cutting business from Boston to a small building on what is now Burgess Street. The next year he built this modern wooden factory building and moved the rest of his company into it. The first floor was for metal-cutting machinery and the second floor was the office and engineering laboratory. Then, just three years later, on Thanksgiving evening 1909, this entire building burned to its granite foundation, a complete loss, in what was the largest conflagration in Quincy to that time. Undaunted, Burgess, using his own men, built a new single-floor building on the foundation and had machines back in production in just 75 days. He put a concrete firewall down the middle of the new building just to the left of where the old doorway was. Today, that firewall is the facade of the present building on this site that is the corporate headquarters of Altra Industrial Motion, the company that now owns Boston Gear and several other companies around the world. There still are a few dozen Boston Gear office employees working here 100 years after this building was built, but production ceased here in 1990 and the factory operation is now in Charlotte, N.C. New Veterans' House Right Step, More Needed To Be Done

The welcomed news in last week's Quincy Sun that Father McCarthy's House has now opened on Winter Street to 19 former homeless veterans shows what can be done when government and the private sector work together on common goals.

The fact that America has a homeless pandemic is unnerving. The fact that there are homeless veterans out there is even worse. People fight for their country when called and then have no place to live upon their return. These things happen, but why?

Veterans in my age group fought in Vietnam and now travel from shelter bed to shelter bed. Some get lucky when places like the Winter Street House opened offering housing options to shelter off the streets. Today's soldiers in Iraq, when they come home, how many will end up homeless too?

Quincy does a better job than most communities on the South Shore, but we are far from solving this growing social issue.

When it comes to working families in this city facing escalating rents, how many people must leave the city, or fear going homeless?

We need more real affordable housing for our people. Luxury housing, whether apartments or condos, are making the city less affordable for working families are those on fixed incomes.

Back in the 1940s, my uncle George Harrington from Charlestown moved his family here. In 1947, my grandfather Jimmy Harrington left Charlestown for Quincy. In 1984, I left Charlestown for Quincy.

Today, I live in Quincy with my wife and daughter. My daughter represents the fourth generation of the Harrington family from Charlestown to call Quincy "home."

However, soon more of us will be priced out as Quincy becomes a city of extremes. What about our working families? Where shall they live? Will it be some place other than Quincy?

If City Hall doesn't wake up rather than wait to respond to homelessness, we'll be turning the City of Presidents into the City of Father McCarthy's House.

As I said, Quincy does better than most on this issue, but more could be done.

A Tribute To WJDA

I am writing to wish a fond farewell to WJDA Radio Broadcasting of Quincy for providing nearly 60 years of outstanding programming to its listeners. WJDA has been a stalwart and reliable provider of many fine programs and important announcements in service to the city of Quincy. The station was a true community asset.

I would like to commend Win Bettinson, Herb Fontaine, James D. Asher, Sr., Joe Catalano, Roy Lind, Mike Logan, Charlie Ross, Ken Fallon, John Nicolson, Terry Fancher and everyone responsible for making WJDA such a tremendous success and a valuable resource for the community. It is with deep sadness that we say "good-bye" to WJDA in Quincy and extend our best wishes for the future to all the fine individuals affected by its "signing off." You will be missed.

Germantown Neighborhood Center 'Wonderful'

The Germantown Neighborhood Center is a truly wonderful organization. What they accomplish for our community is amazing.

My children attended summer camp there under the direction of Charlene McDonald. They are 36, 34 and nearly 30. My grandsons, 18 and 14, had the privilege to attend.

This year my granddaughter, Elia, took part in April Vacation Camp. She loved every minute of it and didn't want the experience to end. They had swim every day, arts and crafts, games, a movie trip, clown visit, a play at the Wheelock Theatre in Marshfield and lunch every day.

Kathy Quigly is the director now and she runs things admirably. She's got a wonderful staff and terrific young leaders for her groups. All of the activities keep everyone busy and happy.

Congratulations to everyone involved with their wonderful programs. They sure make a difference!

Freak Storm Short Circuits City

Week of May 11

By FRANK McCAULEY

A freak storm with rain, snow and gale-force winds knocked out electrical power, bringing the city to a virtual standstill and sending police and firefighters scurrying around the city on errands of mercy.

The diesel generator that provides power at Quincy City Hospital kicked out in the midst of surgery in the operating room and a Fire Department rescue unit supplied power to finish the operation.

The power failure extended all the way from Quincy to Cape Cod and Rhode Island; however, the city of Boston was not affected.

Historical Society Meeting To Note Henry Beston's Quincy Years May 18

The Quincy Historical Society will celebrate the life and work of native son Henry Beston at its annual meeting Thursday, May 18, at 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Academy building, 8 Adams St., Quincy Center.

Beston is best known for his 1928 book "The Outermost House," a classic of 20th century American literature, which earned for him the Emerson-Thoreau Medal previously award only to T.S. Eliot and Robert Frost.

The Historical Society program will premiere the society's special exhibit, "Pilgrims of Mortality": Henry Beston and "the Achievement of Form."

The exhibit will feature personal memorabilia from Beston and a series of letters he wrote a Quincy friend, Enoch Doble, during his most creative period.

Among them are letters from the Outermost House on Cape Cod, written during Beston year of living alone there. One contains Beston's own sketch of the house among the dunes.

Society Executive Director Dr. Edward Fitzgerald will tell the story of Beston's life and discuss his writing. Actor Jim Cooke will present passages from his works and letters. Beston's nieces, Marie Sheahan and Joan Schwa, will reminisce about their uncle.

"We aim to do something different on Beston," said Fitzgerald. "Commentators often view him purely as a 'man in nature' and rush past the Quincy years.

"We believe the Quincy story of Beston, his roots, and his family is, first, a fascinating immigrant saga and, second, fundamental to his art and vision. We are doing our best to tell the story."

The meeting and program are free and open to the public.

A discussion period will be led by Christine Holmes, a local fitness expert who was recently featured in Oprah Winfrey's "O" magazine. Holmes will talk about the important role physical fitness plays in a woman's ability to manage a hectic lifestyle and how essential it is to a woman's overall good health.

Other members of the panel include a nurse practitioner, nutritionist, personal trainer, yoga and fitness instructors, an esthetician and masseuse. All panelists are certified and licensed in their field and will demonstrate ways a woman can be fit and feel good about themselves.

50 Truckfuls Of Trash Make For Cleaner, Greener Quincy

Fifty large dump truckfuls of debris were hauled away from the city's beaches, marshes, parks and other open spaces Saturday as some 1,200 volunteers turned to to make Quincy a cleaner, greener place to live.

"Cleaner, greener has become a spring tradition in Quincy," said Tom Koch, whose Park Department provided most of the trucks for the cleanup. "We are truly grateful to all residents and volunteers who participated."

The volunteers attacked the winter's accumulation of trash and other debris from 34 designated sites between 9 a.m. and 12 noon, then adjourned to the Richard Koch Recreation Complex for a cookout provided by Mayor William Phelan.

In addition to the cleanup of rubbish, the volunteers spread more than 200 yards of pine bark mulch for plantings.

Private contractors also provided equipment to haul away the waste.

D & B Tree Service cleaned the oak trees at Sailors' Home Pond; Aronson & Healy Corp. helped out on the beaches; Allied Waste had its packer on hand; and 25 volunteers from Aviva Life Insurance worked around the Lincoln Hancock and Sterling Schools.

Hannaford Supermarket in North Quincy donated the food for the barbeque and Allied Waste and Aviva each donate $250 to the cleanup.

QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER
The Boston Medical Center Alliance For Quality

This is National Nurses Week, and we at Quincy Medical Center (QMC) are proud of the tremendous job our nurses do not just this week, but every single day. Their talents, skills, and compassion are felt by patients throughout the year.

In fact, QMC nurses have provided exemplary care and service to our patients since 1890 -- over 115 years! Over the decades, the commitment and abilities of our past nurses have only been enhanced by the rigorous training and insightful education our nurses possess today. And as their part in QMC providing Tomorrow's Care Today, those nurses now pass on their knowledge and skills to our future nurses, through clinical education and mentoring programs we have established with local schools. We hope you will join us in saying, "Thank You."

To contribute to The Nurses' Appreciation Fund, perhaps to honor nurses who cared for a loved one while supporting nurses' ongoing professional growth through scholorships and more, call 617-376-5493 today. Because providing Tomorrow's Care Today begins with great nurses.

Quincy Medical Center Clinical Services Laboratory Earns Accreditation

Quincy Medical Center's Clinical Services Laboratory recently was recently granted a two-year accreditation by the College of American Pathologists (CAP).

The distinction places QMC's Clinical Services Laboratory in a select group of laboratories nationwide that have been evaluated and designated in compliance with CAP accreditation standards.

During the biennial CAP re-accreditation process, a team of nine inspectors from other CAP-accredited programs visited QMC and examined the education and qualifications of QMC lab staff and management, the facilities and equipment and the records and quality control measures in place for the preceding two years.

In addition to onsite survey, QMC clinicians and staff continually perform self-inspections of the Laboratory, according to CAP guidelines.

"CAP accreditation is the gold standard of lab accreditation processes," said Tony Richard, director of the Clinical Services Laboratory and Cardiopulmonary Services at QMC. "Quincy Medical Center's continued standing as a CAP accredited facilities is a tribute to the staff's diligence and commitment to quality standards every day."

Quincy Medical Center is a 232-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center, formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community.

At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, emergency medicine, and psychiatry. Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work side-by-side community physicians to ensure the continuity of patient care.

Quincy College Holds Line On Tuition Hikes For 2006-07

Fall registration begins Monday, May 15, at Quincy College and, for the first time in more than a decade, students will not see an increase in the rate of tuition.

A three-credit course will still cost under $500, including liberal arts and sciences, fine arts/music and fire science classes but not allied health or computer classes.

President Sue Harris called it a "college-wide commitment to keeping education affordable at Quincy College."

"The Board of Governors and the College administration are aware of the financial difficulties involved with both the cost of housing and gas prices in our local area," she said.

'We worked hard to have a balanced budget without raising tuition so that our students' access to higher education would not be any greater a burden."

Quincy College offers associate degree programs in nursing, liberal arts and business and, in partnership with Cambridge College and Excelsior College, it is now providing Baccalaureate degree completion programs.

For more information, call the Office of Enrollment Services at 617-984-1650.

Which Of These Costly Home Seller Mistakes Will You Make When You Sell Your Home?

Boston South Shore – A new report has just been released which reveals 7 costly mistakes that most home owners make when selling their home and a 9 Step System that can help you sell your home fast and for the most amount of money.

This industry report shows clearly how the traditional ways of selling homes have become increasingly less and less effective in today's market. The fact of the matter is that fully three quarters of home sellers don't get what they want for their home and become disillusioned and – worse – financially disadvantaged when they put their home on the market. As this report uncovers, most home sellers make 7 deadly mistakes that cost them literally thousands of dollars.

In answer to this issue, industry insiders have prepared a free special report entitled "The 9 Step System to Get Your Home Sold Fast and for Top Dollar."

November Start To $4.5M Fore River Dredging Job

The Fore River, all but choked with silt after 20 or more years of neglect, is about to undergo four months of dredging by the Army Corps of Engineers that will open up a nettlesome bottleneck to traffic on both land and sea.

Congressman Bill Delahunt called a news conference on the bank of the river Monday to announce that Congress has approved $4.5 million for the project which will begin in November when it will cause the least disruption of wildlife.

The dredging will not only make it easier for ships carrying 60 per cent of the petroleum products used in Massachusetts to negotiate the waterway but will ease vehicular traffic due to frequent openings of the Fore River Bridge during rush hours.

"Maintaining the depth of these waterways is crucial to the viability of our company, Citgo, Sprague and to commerce and residents of this enter region and the country," said Paul Angelico, president and COO of Twin Rivers Technologies.

"This region's heating oil and gasoline needs are dependent on these rivers as well for bulk deliveries to Sprague and Citgo. The redevelopment of the shipyard, believe, is reliant on the viability of ship transit on these rivers."

Twin Rivers, a bio diesel producer, is at the confluence of the Fore and Town Rivers; the Sprague Energy Corporation is on the bank of the Fore River; and the Citgo Oil Terminal is inside the bridge on the river in Braintree.

"After two decades of neglect," said a release from Delahunt's office, "shoaling has reduced the depths of the Fore River Channel so seriously that commercial vessels experience significant delays.

"As a result, ships can only navigate the channel during high tide. This can cause the Fore River Bridge to be raised during the height of the rush hour commute, contributing to the region's traffic congestion problems."

The depth of the channel is also critical to the redevelopment of the old Fore River Shipyard and the Harbor Express passenger ferry.

Angelico, who was the main speaker at the Delahunt news conference, emphasized the importance of rivers to his company and its continental commitments.

"I am often asked," he said, "'How can a refinery business such as this compete in today's global economy by manufacturing products in Massachusetts and servicing customers throughout North America?'

"There are three key reasons: 1) the talent and leadership demonstrated by our workforce, educated and skilled in this region, 2) direct rail access to the national rail distribution systems and 3) direct access to world markets through these rivers."

Delahunt's office said some $500,000 more will be needed to finish the project that is scheduled to begin in November and end in February, which is the dredging season in New England when fish spawnings are over.

Joining Delahunt and Angelico at the news conference were Mayor William Phelan, Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi; Colonel Curtis Thalken, regional director of the Army Corps of Engineers.

Also Michael Glinski, director of Environmental and Safety Systems for Twin Rivers Technologies; Robin T. Burn of the Army Corps of Engineers; Corinn Young of Delahunt's office; and representatives of the industries on the river.

Flag Day committee with a lapel pin from Fort McHenry where Francis Scott Key wrote the Star Spangled Banner. He said he also brought back from his visit there lapel pins for other members of the Flag Day committee.

State Rep. Bruce Ayers, noting that one of the most important things that makes a community special is its people, said:

"People who get involved. The people who care. The people like George White. George, your contribution to the city of Quincy has been most outstanding. The contribution to First Night, Flag Day, Senior Olympics and all your work with the Christmas parade are second to none. It is really people like you that make it a great city."

Ayers presented White with a citation from the House of Representatives on behalf of himself and Reps. Ron Mariano and Steve Tobin. He also pinched-hit for Sen. Michael Morrissey, presenting a Senate commendation to White for Morrissey, who was attending a family wedding anniversary.

Santa Claus, an old friend, made a surprise visit to congratulate White on being selected as the Citizen of the Year.

And added: "I want to thank you for the many years of devoted service to the parade. I do appreciate it and I wish you many more years."

Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Business Council and a member of the judging panel, presented White's wife, Dorothy, with a bouquet of flowers.

Bosworth said that although the reception is a happy occasion, there were sad notes this year.

"George was nominated by a good friend of many of us here — John Noonan, chairman of the Quincy Council on Aging, who died suddenly in April," Bosworth said. "He was looking forward to participating today."

In his nomination, he called White "the sparkplug that ignites the Christmas spirit, climaxed by the Christmas parade."

White was also nominated by Patricia Downey, a 1949 graduate of North Quincy High School now living in New York City.

She said he was long deserving of the award for his dedication to the parade "that thrills so many year after year." She came up from New York to see him receive the award.

Bosworth said another sad note was the passing of three past recipients.

Mary Vallier, 1993 recipient, and Frank Kearns (1991) both died last August and Ruth Wainwright (1986) this past March.

Members of the Wainwright family, including children Laurel, Holly, Stephen, Paul, David and Richard Wainwright Jr., attended representing their mother.

White, retired retail and national advertising director of the Patriot Ledger and who served in Korea with the Army, said he was honored to receive the award.

"It is a prestigious award when you look at the people in the past who have won it. You are proud to be a part of the past nominees and winners and the present nominees.

"The Christmas Festival Committee . . . the highlight happening of my lifetime — 40 years and 25 directing the activities of the committee."

White thanked members of the Christmas Festival Committee and paid tribute to John Noonan, who was a member of the committee.

"John Noonan, his personal participation in numerous areas of activities appeared endless. I don't know of anything that I had any knowledge of that he wasn't involved in."

IT WAS A proud day for George and Dorothy White's family. Major Doug Jones, commander of the Salvation Army Quincy Temple Corps, and judge, was unable to attend. Quincy Sun photo/Robert Bosworth

"They also know that it's a safe-haven, for victims of crime, and it's due to all the people who work in this court.

"The difference between Quincy District Court, and many other courts is that there's a real high degree of compassion. People that do their work, care about their work, care about the people that they're serving, and they like to come to work.

"They enjoy being here, because they feel like they're making a difference," said Phelan.

Tips For Saving On Utility Bills

(NAPS) Besides staying cool when the warm weather rolls in, not getting hot under the collar when the utility bills arrive can be a challenge. The goal is to find an air-conditioning system that looks nice, feels good and operates efficiently.

How To Measure Cooling Efficiency

Recently enacted federal legislation helps with the efficiency issue. All central air conditioners manufactured after Jan. 23, 2006 must have a seasonal energy efficiency ratio (SEER) of at least 13 SEER. This increase in the measure of cooling efficiency from 10 to 13 SEER means savings on utility bills.

As manufacturers of air-conditioning systems work to meet this new efficiency standard, some are also incorporating improved comfort features in their designs. For example, the Acclimate® Series of air conditioners from Luxaire® Heating and Cooling, a brand of the Unitary Products Group of York, a Johnson Controls company, meets or exceeds the efficiency challenge with 13 and 15 SEER units that also address important comfort issues.

These air conditioners are available with two-stage compressor technology to reduce operating cost without sacrificing comfort. On-off cycles are kept to a minimum for even, quiet and more comfortable cooling.

Cool And Quiet

The unit's exclusive SilentDrive® System further reduces sound. A sweptwing fan design enables air to flow smoothly off the blade, reducing air turbulence and significantly reducing noise. The system also incorporates an isolated compressor compartment and a composite base pan for more quiet operation.

An Acclimate air conditioner records sound levels as low as 69 decibels (dB). This is quieter than competitive units and much quieter than a typical hair dryer, which operate in the range of 76 dB.

To learn more, visit www.luxaire.com/acclimate or call 877-874-7378.

Deck Repair And Maintenance

(NAPS) For many American homeowners, warm weather is an invitation to take the party out to the backyard patio or deck. Before hauling out the grill and lighting the tiki torches, take some time to do a little preventive maintenance.

"This is the time to do a few simple things that will make your deck last for years," said home repair expert, Jim Rocchetta. "Plus, you'll have your outdoor environment looking great before you and your friends head outside for those backyard get-togethers."

The first step is a thorough inspection of the entire structure to ensure that it is safe and secure. Check for loose nails and screws, and either replace them or retighten them. Tighten any railings that have become loose. Then, look beneath the deck to confirm that beams and support poles remain in good working order. "If you find structural components that are loose, rotten or out of position, for your own safety, quit using the deck and call a pro to fix the problem," said Rocchetta.

As an additional safety precaution, replace broken or rotten deck boards before they break through completely. Boards that have become bowed or warped will also need to be replaced because they hold water and make the deck surface uneven, and create another potential safety hazard. When replacing boards with pressure treated lumber, maximize the life of the deck by using stainless steel or high-grade galvanized fasteners designed to combat the corrosive effects of modern lumber treatment chemicals.

Once everything is secure, clean the deck boards with a biodegradable deck cleaner to remove dirt, mildew and algae. These environmentally friendly solvents are now commonly available and actually perform better than previously popular outdoor wood cleaners such as bleach. Even if the deck is made from a composite material, most manufacturers still recommend a thorough annual cleaning. During the cleaning process also take a little time to sand down any spots that have become rough or splintered.

Finally, ensure the deck looks great by protecting it from mildew and water damage with a high-quality finish and preservative. There are many good products on the market. "The best preservative products contain UV-resistant compounds which will really liven up the deck surface and add a high-degree of protection from the elements," said Rocchetta.

Spring Cleaning, Bathroom-Style

Don't forget to add your toilet tank to your spring cleaning list. This type of cleaning need only be done about two or three times a year, depending on the mineral content of your water (or the amount of "gunk" that builds up on the moving parts inside the tank).

Buildup on the ball cock, flapper valve, connecting parts and washers can compromise the tank's purpose, which is to be a watertight storage compartment, ready for the next flush. For example, heavy mineral or "slime" buildup on the flapper valve (which covers the flush outlet to the bowl below) can keep the valve from closing completely, resulting in a slow leak. A symptom of such a leak is periodic refilling of the tank between flushes (the occasional soft hissing of water you often hear from the toilet).

Water with a heavy mineral content leaves more deposits; these mineral deposits can build up and eat away at the rubber seals in the bottom of the tank, or break down the metal parts that open the flush valve or keep the float ball floating.

So regular cleaning is important. How do you do it? First, get your cleaning equipment together: rubber gloves; a stiff, nonmetallic brush (along with an old toothbrush); a cleaning cloth; a pitcher of fresh water; and a solution of half-water, half vinegar.

Drain the tank by turning off the water valve behind the toilet, then flushing once; the tank will empty and not refill.

Put on your rubber gloves, dip the cloth in the vinegar solution, and gently scrub the tank and everything in it. Lift the flapper valve at the bottom and wipe off the edges, underside and the mouth of the outlet.

Use the brush or toothbrush to scrub away stubborn deposits. When you're done scrubbing, rinse the tank with fresh water so that the loosened deposits fall to the bottom; then scoop out as much of the sediment as possible and throw it away.

Jiggle the handle a few times to make sure the valve mechanisms are all working smoothly. If any parts have deteriorated, don't work or are frozen in place, replace the assembly (kits and advice can be found at your home-improvement store).

Refill the tank by turning the water valve back on, and flush three or four times to completely rinse it.

(A note of caution to zealous cleaners: never use bleach or lime-dissolving products in the toilet tank, even in diluted form. These chemicals will break down the rubber seals quickly, leading to expensive repairs. Stick with a mild vinegar solution.)

Tips For Eliminating Lawn Pests

(NAPS) Why share a home and lawn with destructive pests?

"Your yard shouldn't be a place where you have to deal with destructive bugs or worry about the diseases they may carry," said Bayer Advanced® garden expert Lance Walheim, the author of "Lawn Care for Dummies."

But there are really two types of destructive pests: those that damage the lawn or affect people by attacking aboveground, or those that attack a lawn by chewing on the grass roots. It is important to treat for the right pests.

A few pests that can be roaming above or below the lawn:

• Chinch Bugs- In Southern states, the chinch bug is the most destructive pest of St. Augustine grass lawns. Consumers spend more than $50 million annually trying to control them.

• Mole Crickets- This is the #1 lawn pest on the Gulf Coast. The bug damages lawns two ways: by feeding on the roots and through significant tunneling.

• Ticks- Lyme disease and Rocky Mountain spotted fever are two illnesses transferred by ticks. Lyme disease is concentrated in New England and the mid-Atlantic states and may cause chronic arthritis if left untreated. RMSF tends to occur in the Southeastern states and causes severe headache, tiredness and other ailments.

• White Grubs- The larvae of certain beetles, grubs are the most notorious of all turf-damaging soil insects. In late summer, fall and next year's spring, grubs live in the top few inches of soil, feeding on the roots of lawn grasses and destroying the turf above. In early summer, grubs transform into adult beetles that emerge from the soil. Some, like Japanese beetles, become leaf-feeding adults that damage roses, trees and other plants aboveground.

• Fire Ants*- Have infested over 275 million acres within the United States over the last 76 years. As they spread, the number of mounds reaches densities of up to 1,000/acre, with each containing several hundred thousand stinging ants.

Bayer Advanced® Complete Insect Killer for Soil & Turf, which is available in granular and spray formulas, combines two unique Bayer active ingredients that work together to control both aboveground and belowground pests. One ingredient is targeted to kill surface-feeding insects on contact while the other ingredient is systematically absorbed into plants and grass roots to control and prevent insect infestations underground for up to three months. Rain or water cannot wash off this protection!

All Bayer Advanced products carry a money-back guarantee. Visit www.bayeradvanced.com or call 1-877-BAYERAG for more information.

It's That Time Of Year: Spring Cleaning

(NAPS) Many people choose spring time to get rid of dust and grime. While cleaning is never the most glamorous task, it can help to bring freshness into a home as well as create a healthy environment for a family. Duck® brand products offers these tips for spring cleaning:

• Dust and vacuum corners and crevices from high points to low. Dust falls downward, so a room should be cleaned from top to bottom. Vacuum everything, from the floor behind and under the bed, to carpets, lampshades, mattresses and couch cushions.

• Dirt and dust always seem to accumulate on kitchen, bathroom and linen closet shelves. Empty shelves and wipe out dust and crumbs from those hard-to-reach corners. Clean the surface thoroughly and line each shelf before putting away dishes, silverware and towels. If already using a nonadhesive shelfliner, wash it in the gentle cycle of the washing machine before replacing it on the shelves. Not only does shelfliner protect against dirt but it also prevents nicks and scratches on surfaces. (Duck® brand Smooth Top® Easy Liner (www.duckproducts.com) is advertised as machine washable, nonadhesive and easy to install.)

• Take the time to deep clean the tub and shower. It's easy for mold and mildew to build up in these constantly steamy environments. Remove shampoo and conditioner bottles, as well as soap and other bath products. Wear gloves and use a good detergent and scrubber to remove all of the buildup and grime.

• While in the bathroom, the toilets may be cleaned as well. Use a deep cleaning toilet bowl cleaner and a bowl brush that incorporates a rim brush for cleaning in all the hard-to-reach and unseen places. (One option is Duck® brand Double-Scrubber® bowl brush.)

• After a winter's worth of dirt and grime, windows may be due for a good cleaning. Clean like the pros, using a window cleaning solution and some crinkled-up newspaper. Besides being easy to find, newspaper is also affordable.

• Defrost the freezer and give it a good cleaning. Get rid of old foods and expired condiments, and use a cleaning solution to thoroughly disinfect the inside of the fridge. Don't forget to clean the outside, too. Many dirty hands have opened the refrigerator.

By taking the time to do a thorough cleaning, newness can be felt throughout the house.

Quincy Defeats North For Fifth Straight Win

SOFTBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

Prior to the start of the season, head coach Mike Sedar said he'd be happy if his Quincy High School softball team played .500 ball through the first half of the season.

The Presidents have gone beyond those expectations, winning their last five games to improve their overall record to 7-3 and their Atlantic Coast League mark to 5-1, tied for first place with Whitman-Hanson.

"I thought we'd be 0-20 before the season started," Sedar joked. "I said if we were 5-5 that would be good. I wasn't even close. I'm glad I'm wrong. We're playing 10 times better.

"It looks like we have a good shot at making the playoffs and we're going to contend with Whitman-Hanson. We've won five in a row. We're playing great defense and we're hitting the ball one through six. I'm very happy."

Quincy extended its winning streak to a handful when it knocked off North Quincy, 4-1, last Friday night at Mitchell/McCoy Field.

The Presidents will host Randolph today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. and will play Nauset Saturday in a doubleheader at Mitchell/McCoy Field with games beginning at 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

North Quincy (2-5, 0-4) traveled to Sandwich Monday, hosted Winthrop Tuesday and headed to Nauset Wednesday. Next Monday, it hosts Dennis-Yarmouth at 4 p.m.

Against the Red Raiders, senior pitcher Theresa MacConochie turned in another strong performance, allowing the one run on just four hits.

"Theresa MacConochie just keeps the ball down low," Sedar said. "She's a smart kid. She's been around softball a lot of years. She works the corners very well; just lives on them."

The Presidents grabbed a 2-0 lead in the first inning off North Quincy freshman pitcher Brittany Folkins, who also pitched well as she scattered six hits.

Senior tri-captain Leanna Lam led off with a single, moved to second on a groundout and to third on senior tri-captain Kim Lebel's single. Senior tri-captain Courteney Hall brought Lam home with a groundout and junior Brighid Kyle stroked a double to score Lebel.

Quincy manufactured a run in the fourth frame when Hall reached on an infield single, stole second and third base and scored on freshman Alyssa Mullen's squeeze bunt.

It added an unearned run in the fifth when freshman Elisa Lam reached second base on an error, stole third and scored on another miscue.

The Red Raiders ruined MacConochie's shutout bid in the sixth when sophomore Simone Leary singled, moved to second on a groundout and scored on senior captain Kelly Barden's single.

"It's a good solid win for us," Sedar said. "It's always a tough game for us. We didn't hit that well, but we played great defense and pitched well."

"I have to tip my hat to Quincy," Connor said. "Quincy played outstanding defense. We put the ball in play a lot and they didn't make any errors. That was the difference. My team played great. I think we came out in the first inning with some jitters. We tossed the ball around and made some mental errors in field."

North Quincy entered the game coming off a thrilling, 4-3 win in 10 innings over Hull last Thursday.

In the 10th, sophomore Kasey O'Connell singled home freshman Katherine O'Connell (two hits) with the tying run. And with the hit-and-run on, Folkins ripped a double into the right-center field gap to plate O'Connell with the game-winning run.

Sophomore Paige Bonanni tossed all 10 innings, giving up five hits while striking out seven and walking three.

The Red Raiders tied the game at 1 in the second inning when Barden (3-for-4) singled, moved to second on a passed ball and to third on a sacrifice, and scored on a wild pitch.

They took a 2-1 lead in the fourth frame when Simone Leary (two hits) singled home Barden (double).

Hull tied the game with two outs in the top of the seventh and went ahead, 3-2, in the 10th.

"What a great game," Connor said. "I'm just happy for the girls, especially the seniors. I think we're going to see a lot more come from this, for the next couple of years down the road and even the second half of the season."

STUDENTS FROM LAST summer's Future Captains Basketball Academy in Braintree receive instruction before hitting the court. Applications are currently being accepted for the second season of program. The first of six, four-day sessions will begin July 10.

Sheriff's Office Sponsoring Summer Basketball Academy

After last summer's successful debut of the Future Captains Basketball Academy, the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office in conjunction with the Massachusetts Basketball Coaches Association is getting ready for another slam-dunk season.

Applications are currently being accepted for the educational basketball program that promotes youth leadership both on and off the court. The first of six, four-day sessions will begin July 10.

The Future Captains Basketball Academy in Braintree is a unique opportunity for Norfolk County eighth-grade boys and girls with at least a C+ average who are starters on their school basketball team.

Both individual and team instruction will be given by coaches and counselors who are varsity student athletes and former captains. Drills, scrimmages, lectures and film sessions are designed to prepare students for high school.

Additionally, staff from the Sheriff's Office will meet with participants to discuss the value of good decision-making and responsible citizenship.

"Our goal is to make this an exciting athletic and academic experience that will help the student athlete improve both on the court and in the classroom," Sheriff Michael Bellotti said.

The basketball academy is being offered free of charge through Sheriff Bellotti's Youth Programs Division, which also operates the Youth Leadership Academy and the After School Program.

For more information about the Future Captains Basketball Academy or to receive an application, contact Youth Officer Larry Feeney or Program Coordinator Richard Kelly at 781-751-3516.

Central Girls' Basketball Team Repeats As City Champions

The Rams posted a 6-0 record heading into the playoffs, where they defeated Sterling, 26-12, in the first round and Atlantic, 31-19, for the title.

Led by a well-balanced offensive and defensive attack, Central outscored its opponents by a 28-12 margin. In a non-league game, Central cruised to a 44-26 victory over Pierce Middle School in Milton.

Rendle Named New Quincy Athletic Director

Longtime high school head coach Jim Rendle will no longer need a volleyball or basketball.

He's been named the new Quincy public schools athletic director to succeed Ed Miller, who is retiring at the end of the school year after six and a half years on the job.

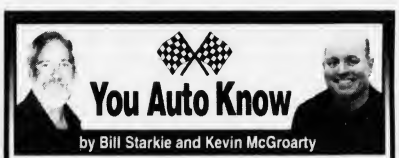
Rendle, 58, who has coached 31 of 34 teams to the postseason, was picked from among a group of in-house applicants.

"I'm pretty excited about it. I'm very excited about," said Rendle, who was informed of the decision last Wednesday and will officially start in August. "I have mixed feelings. I'm certainly going to miss coaching. I had a lot of success with it. I want to try to spread that around to some of the other programs."

JIM RENDLE

Rendle has been in charge of four programs between the two high schools, North Quincy High and Quincy High. He enjoyed the most success as the NQ girls' volleyball coach, where he won six state championships in 21 seasons.

He coached the North Quincy boys' basketball team the past four seasons and currently is in his third season as coach of the North Quincy boys' volleyball squad. He was also the coach of the Quincy boys' volleyball team from 1995-1998.



"I'm going to miss the relationships with the kids, without question," Rendle said. "You build up some strong relationships with the kids in coaching as well as teaching. You have an impact on them. You can see and feel your impact on many

POWER UP!

If you like to drive with your A/C on, the stereo cranked up, and the DVD player on, it should be clear that today's nominal 14-volt DC electrical systems and 12-volt batteries are barely keeping up with the increased demand. With the plethora of new electronic devices on the market, it is not hard to see a day soon when vehicles' electrical systems will strain to keep up. In addition, car manufacturers are increasingly using electric motors rather than belts to drive components such as the water pump. With this in mind, a consortium sponsored by the Society of Automotive Engineers has advocated introduction of a 42-volt system with a 36-volt battery, which we may see within a few years.

As it becomes more common for more electrical devices to be used in your car, serious attention must be paid to your electrical system. The experts at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, can take a look at your car, and ascertain whether or not your battery and electrical system are up to par. By doing so now, you can prevent car problems in the future. Questions? Stop by 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, or call 781-843-1550. Sunoco and most major credit cards honored.

Raiders' Pitching Solid In Win Over Sandwich

BASEBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

Senior tri-captain John Allen pitched the North Quincy High School baseball team to a 5-3 victory over Sandwich Monday afternoon at Adams Field.

Allen overpowered the Blue Knights, striking out nine and allowing one earned run on five hits and three walks.

"That's the John Allen I know," said head coach Rick Beach. "He pitched a gem. He throws hard and when he's on, he's on."

The Red Raiders rebounded nicely from a pair of losses last week, a 17-8 home setback to Hingham last Tuesday and a 13-5 defeat at Brockton last Friday. Last Wednesday's game at Falmouth was postponed due to rain.

North Quincy (3-9 overall, 2-3 Atlantic Coast League) was scheduled to play Nauset Wednesday and is slated to host Brockton today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. at Adams Field in a makeup game.

Sandwich got on the board first in the second inning. An infield error and two walks loaded the bases with two outs. Allen yielded an RBI single and the Blue Knights could've had another run, but junior right fielder Dave Guerriero gunned down a runner at the plate to end the inning.

The Red Raiders answered with a pair of runs in the bottom half. Junior Steve Matos reached on an outfield error and Guerriero singled to right. The fielder tried to throw him out at first base but threw wildly, putting runners on second and third.

After an out, junior Brendan Carnell made them pay when he lined a two-run single to center field.

Sandwich pulled even in the next inning. After two quick outs, Allen gave up a walk and an RBI triple to deep center field by the cleanup hitter.

Allen settled into a groove after the three-bagger, retiring eight straight hitters which included a dominant fourth frame when he fanned the side.

North Quincy broke the deadlock in the fifth inning. Senior tri-captain Tom Power (2-for-4) singled to left and junior Joe Lousararian (3-for-4) singled to right to put runners on the corners.

The Red Raiders added an insurance run in the sixth when Lousararian singled to center field to score junior Pat Totten, who reached on error.

Sandwich closed out the scoring with a run in the final inning. Allen gave up two singles and error in the outfield put runners on second and third. The runner came home on a passed ball before Allen smoked a fastball by the No. 2 hitter to cement the win.

"We've been hitting the ball well," said Beach, whose team racked up 11 hits. "It was a nice win. We've been in games. We're playing hard and not giving up. We're still trying to get to the tournament."

Presidents Post 2nd Win

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School baseball team picked up its second win of the season last Friday when it edged King Philip Regional, 2-1, at Adams Field.

The Presidents, whose other win was an 8-1 triumph April 21 over O'Bryant, rebounded from a 12-4 loss earlier in the season at KP. They also bounced back from last Monday's 16-2 drubbing to Falmouth.

Quincy (2-9 overall, 0-5 Atlantic Coast League) traveled to Nauset Monday and will host Dennis-Yarmouth tomorrow (Friday) at 4 p.m. at Adams Field in a makeup game.

Junior Dan Myers, the team's most consistent arm this season, allowed just one hit with three strikeouts in a complete-game effort against KP.

"It was a real good outing," said head coach Mike Draicchio. "They got their hit in the sixth inning. I think he's been pretty much the most consistent guy we've had. He had a great outing against Milton in the tournament. He's been doing the job pretty much all long."

The Presidents scored both of their runs in the second inning. Sophomore Ricky Salvucci walked, stole second base and scored on sophomore Mike Lebel's single. Lebel scored when Myers reached on an outfield error.

KP scored its lone run in the third inning on a fielder's choice with the bases loaded.

Quincy junior Steve Kussman went 2-for-3 with a double and junior shortstop Steve Connolly anchored a strong defensive showing.

of your athletes and students. Those positive impacts really refuel and energize you."

Rendle said he would like to try to continue to be close to the students when he begins his new position.

"I'm going to try to be as hands-on as possible," he said. "I want to be as close to the kids as possible. Sometimes in an administrative job you get so busy and bogged down you don't know the kids. I want to have contact with the kids at both schools. I know it's a tall task. I know my way around the city pretty well so I think I can cover a lot of territory."

On Tuesday, Rendle experienced a hectic day working alongside Miller in the AD office with all the rainouts.

"It was a great day to watch all the action that was going on, the rain-outs, rescheduling and busing," Rendle said. "To be able to learn from Ed Miller for the next month or so is a tremendous help."

Rendle graduated from Quincy High School in 1966, where he starred in football, basketball and track. He's a member of the Quincy football and basketball hall of fames and won back-to-back state championships in track as a long jumper.

He earned a football scholarship to the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, where he played strong safety.

After college, he was the physical education instructor and program director at the Quincy YMCA for eight years, and then opened his own business, the Quincy Lobster Co. on Granite Street, for nine years.

Rendle started his career with Quincy publics schools in 1989 as an elementary physical education teacher and was the health instructor for the middle schools for five years.

He's been on Hancock Street in North Quincy the past eight years, the first five in the classroom as the full-time health teacher and the past three inside the gym as the physical education instructor.

Atlantic Middle School Runner-Up

Point Webster Wins Recreation Basketball Crown

The Jonathan Brillo-coached team rolled through the three-week tournament with ease, knocking off Atlantic, 76-37, in the championship game.

Throughout the tourney, Joe Bushfan led Point Webster and all scorers. He had 25 points in the final, 22 against Sterling and eight second-half points in his tourney debut against Atherton Hough.

Bushfan also had plenty of help as three other players were in double figures in the final. Seamus McKenna had 15, Brian Repetto 13 and Danny Andrade 12. Tim Sullivan had five points and Matt Kelly four.

Atlantic, coached by Joe MacRitchie, used a variety of defenses to challenge with a younger squad. Paul Reamer led the team with 10 points and Danny Chen followed with eight, including two 3-pointers.

Kevin Hill had seven while Pablo Quinones had six and led the team in rebounds. Mike Morrison added four and Dylan O'Neil two. A.J. Morfe played strong man-to-man defense.

In advancing to the championship, Point Webster defeated Atherton Hough, 42-10, and Sterling, 49-33. Against Sterling, Andrade had nine points, McKenna eight while Repetto and Sullivan had five apiece.

Sterling beat Montclair, 47-17, and Snug Harbor, 37-23. Kory Hill had 19 points against Montclair and 14 against Point Webster. Jonathon Coates also led the team. Arnold Pena scored 10 against Montclair and Gerald Santana had eight first-half points. Sterling coach Mike Curtin praised Chris Connolly and Lamar Matthews for their solid, all-around play.

In Montclair's opening-round loss to Sterling, Tom Cooper had nine points, Ed Costello six and Chaz Waterman two. Evan Bean led the Dean Zoia-coached team in rebounds.

Snug Harbor exited the tournament despite a six-person scoring attack. The Matt Lavery-coached team got five points each from Ryan Forte and Chad Hanlon. Jessie Collins had six in the second half while Mike Ryan added four and Justin Nguyen three.

On the other side of the bracket, Atlantic defeated Merrymount, 38-32, and Wollaston, 48-6. Merrymount beat Squantum, 34-21, before bowing out.

Merrymount's Corey Award-coached team went on the offense early against Bernazzani with Zachary Tucker netting 12, Enis Liagami eight, Jonathon Mullin, Paul O'Rourke and Flynn Donovan all with six and Chris Mariano with two.

Coach Meghan Foley had a young but enthusiastic Bernazzani squad. Tom Cooper and Dan Messing each scored five points. Ed Safwan had four, Bill Tinney hit a second-half 3-pointer and Owen Kilcullen added two.

In the Merrymount-Squantum game, Colin McCarthy joined his Merrymount teammate, Mullin, to lead all scorers with 10 points. Austin Tobin had five and Terrence Rooney four.

For Squantum, coached by Taylor Brean, Pat Oullette tallied eight, Bobby Lawless five, Wesley MacDonald four, and Ryan Boyle two.

In the closest contest of the tournament, Atlantic's Danny Chen joined Hill in scoring 14 points each. Reamer had a big 3-pointer and six points and Mike Morrison had an early layup. For Merrymount, Tobin had 11, O'Rourke 10, Mullin six, McCarthy three and Rooney two.

The tournament, held for more than 40 years, concludes the supervised winter gym program. Participants from 13 gym locations are coached by Recreation Department staff. Director Barry Welch presented trophies to Point Webster and certificates to Atlantic.

SPRING CAR CARE

Tips For Caring For High-End Automobiles

By TOM DUPONT

(NAPS) As publisher of Celebrity car magazine, I see the specs for some of the world's most desirable automobiles. The celebrities that appear in the magazine know how to be seen, and nothing grabs attention like a high-powered vehicle. But owning a cutting-edge vehicle does more than add another accessory to a portfolio of luxurious items. It inducts you into an elite club, complete with the privileges and responsibilities of maintaining a vehicle that needs "special attention."

For celebrities and amateurs alike, here are a few expert tips to keep these beauties purring for years to come:

1. Preventive Maintenance.

Every month, check key fluids such as oil, coolant, power steering and transmission. Use high-quality products such as recommended by the manufacturer for any top-up or fluid replacement. Also, make sure to follow proper OEM recommendations and visit a specialist for a tune-up, replacing spark plugs, changing oil and lubricating your engine as needed. Don't forget to regularly change your wiper blades, too. If Mother Nature rains down on your joyride, you want to be ready and safe.

2. Build a Relationship with a Good Mechanic.

You own a specialty car-it's time to find a specialty auto mechanic. Don't be afraid to ask your specialist about the causes of problems you notice, either. It makes you a better owner and helps build rapport.

Owners of classic cars especially need to do this. When parts that operate perfectly for 40 years begin to break down, it's vital that your mechanic is familiar with your golden oldie.

3. Use Top Tier, High Octane Fuel.

Pay attention to the gasoline your high-performance engine is burning. All gasoline available today should meet minimum detergency requirements set by the Environmental Protection Agency, but according to some automakers, that is not enough to keep critical engine parts free of carbon deposits.

Recognizing that a cleaner engine performs better, BMW, GM, Honda and Toyota developed a Top Tier Detergent Gasoline standard that exceeds the EPA standard and raises the bar on fuel quality. Fuels meting this standard can enhance your engine's performance because they're designed to keep intake valves and fuel injectors free of deposits. Shell V-Power actually surpasses that standard with two times the amount of detergency required by the Top Tier Detergent Gasoline standard. These cleaning agents actively clean carbon deposits that low-quality fuels leave behind, giving your car better performance.

4. Invest in Quality Tires.

Your tires are the only part of your car that touches the ground, so they're one of the best ways to give your car added performance. Every product has a class, from engines to gasoline, and tires are no different. Make sure your wheels have an optimum strength-to-weight ratio and minimal rotational inertia.

Find a tire brand you trust and make sure the speed rating gives you freedom on the open road. Also, be sure you check the tire pressure on a regular basis in order to get the best performance and mileage. Improperly inflated tires can be dangerous.

To find the proper pressure for your tires, check the number on the inside of the gas door or on the inside of the side door, not the number that appears on the tires themselves. Remember, your vehicle manufacturer always knows best.

5. Detail on a Regular Basis.

Last, but certainly not least, maintain the form of your car as well as its function. Having your beauty detailed regularly by an expert is a no-brainer. Like at the pump, the car wash is not the place to start being frugal. Protect your dashboard from sun damage with a sun shield or a protective polish, like Black Magic Pro Shine Protectant. Other motorists are watching, so make sure to give your car a good cleaning at least once every two months.

Whether you're a first-time high-end owner or a sharp-eyed collector, treat your ride right, because your high-performance automobile is a powerful machine that makes driving more adventurous and luxurious.

Spotlight On Health & Fitness

When Workouts Don't Show Results

Q. Although I make regular visits to the gym, I've noticed that my midsection continues to grow. I've cut back on sweets and have increased my weekly gym appearances, but I still haven't made much of a dent in the tummy spread. Any suggestions?

A. Your concerns are shared by many exercisers who try to eat well and work hard in the gym but don't always see the results they desire. There are several factors that could be keeping you from seeing your "handles" shrink.

• Use your time wisely. The time you spend in the gym should be effective, efficient and fun. Just showing up at the gym is not going to give you the results you desire.

• Develop a balanced fitness program that you enjoy. A balanced exercise program includes cardiovascular, strength and flexibility exercises that will continue to progress as you become stronger.

• Vary your workout routine. Completing the same cardiovascular workout for weeks at a time will not produce the same results at Week 4 as it did in Week 2. As your body gets stronger and adapts to your workout routines, it is necessary to continue to challenge your body by progressing your workout intensities or adding variety.

If you are accustomed to using the treadmill every time you work out, try the bike, elliptical trainer or rower to increase your heart rate. In addition, completing a comprehensive strength-training program will not only make you stronger, but will increase your lean muscle mass, which helps reduce fat throughout your body, including your stomach.

As with cardiovascular training, completing the same strength-training routine day after day will not allow you to progress. Find new exercises, take a group exercise class or hire a personal trainer to add variety. Consulting a fitness professional is a great way to find ways to modify your workouts and help push past training plateaus.

• Take charge of your nutrition. The key is to take responsibility for what goes into your body. Without the proper nutritional plan, you can be sabotaging your potential for great results. Changes such as drinking water or working on portion control could be the piece that is missing. If you are unsure how to start, consult a nutritionist or registered dietician.

Keep working hard and keep your workouts fresh and new, and your hard work will pay off.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. E-mail Andrea at letters.kfws@hearstsc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Ways To Save And Shape Up

(NAPS) Shaping up does not have to cost a lot of money. It can be as simple- and inexpensive- as making small lifestyle changes.

Here are a few tips to help get started:

1. Why not skip watching TV for one night and go for a walk with a friend? Walking is one of the best forms of exercise and one of the easiest to do.

2. Do yard work. Pushing a manual mower and raking leaves burns hundreds of calories and can save $100 or more every month.

3. Wash and wax a car to save dollars and burn calories.

4. Do housework. It burns between 140 and 400 calories a day and can save the money that would be spent by hiring help. Thirty minutes of window washing burns 100 calories.

5. Consider a health care discount program like HealthSaver, which has teamed up with Jenny Craig to offer great savings on a variety of weight loss programs.

Members can save money on sensible weight loss programs, which focus on a healthy relationship with food, an active lifestyle and a balanced approach to living, commonly referred to as food/body/mind.

The programs offer planned or personalized menus, a personalized activity and motivational plan, one-on-one consultations, weight loss success manuals and tools and 24-hour support. Plans include:

• TuneUp: A 30-day introductory program (plus the cost of food) that's free with HealthSaver membership. It offers a quick shape-up for people who already have a healthy diet, exercise and want to lose 10 lbs. or less.

• On Track: A six-month plan to help get back OnTrack with consistent healthy eating and physical activity. Membership earns a 50 percent discount.

• Jenny Rewards: A yearlong plan in which food discount rewards grow from 10 to 35 percent with continuation. This earns a 20 percent discount.

HealthSaver offers discounts of 20 percent on vision care, prescriptions and alternative health care treatments. For more information, visit www.healthsaver.com.

The free program features cosmetologists leading group sessions, providing tips and practical techniques for coping with hair loss and changes in the skin that often result from chemotherapy or radiation therapy.

There will be a Look Good...Feel Better session Monday, May 15 from 6 to 8 p.m. at the South Suburban Oncology Center, 700 Congress St., Quincy.

To pre-register, call Colleen Whitehouse at 617-376-6435. For additional information, call 1-800-ACS-2345.

"Look Good...Feel Better is as much about improving and maintaining self-image and confidence as it is about appearance " said Gayle Bagley, American Cancer Society Area Director for Cancer Control. "Patients enjoy the opportunity to spend time in a relaxed, non-medical setting with others in the same situation. And the free make-up and instruction from professionals helps them look and feel better."

The American Cancer Society estimates that approximately 662,870 American women will develop some form of cancer this year. The good news is that, thanks to advances in medicine, the five-year relative survival rate of all cancers is 65 percent.

A variety of patient services, support programs and comprehensive cancer information are available through the Society's toll free 1-800-ACS-2345 number, which operates 24 hours a day, seven days a week, in both English and Spanish and its Web site at www.cancer.org.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

ROOT CAUSES

Endodontic therapy, or root canal treatment, has an undeserved reputation for being a very painful procedure. The fact of the matter is, however, that while the infection or trauma that makes root canal therapy necessary can be exceedingly painful, the treatment itself is not more painful than having a filling put in. Granted, endodontic treatment is more complicated than simply filling a decayed portion of the tooth. Root canal treatment involves removing the pulp tissue in the root of the tooth, which contains nerves. This is why degenerative changes in this area are so painful. It is not until the dentist removes the pulp tissue and replaces it with an inert material that the patient experiences relief.

With today's modern dental equipment root canal therapy can be very comfortable. We offer high quality dentistry for all family members. We are a highly qualified and experienced team of professionals, thoroughly trained, skillful, and sensitive to your individual needs. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our goal is to make each visit a comfortable and positive experience. We are sensitive to the needs of all age groups, giving everyone the patience and empathy they require. For superior quality dental care, call 617-479-6220 today to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

A Job Well Done

On April 1, at approximately 3:30 p.m., Detectives William Ward and Karyn Barkas, both in plain clothes, were conducting an interview at Dunkin' Donuts on Centre Street in West Quincy.

As they were exiting the building to the rear lot, Detective Ward noticed a male and female sitting inside a parked red Chevrolet Cavalier, facing away from the building. The detectives took up a position where they could watch the couple and observed both occupants turn their heads to look at each and every vehicle that entered the parking lot. In their report, the detectives related training and experience to show that people often wait in parking lots to meet up with narcotics dealers to purchase drugs.

LT. DAN MINTON

At approximately 3:50 p.m., Lieutenant Tom Corliss of the Special Investigations Unit and Detectives Edward Ryan and William O'Brien arrived in the area to provide assistance. The surveillance team observed a brown Chevrolet Blazer, occupied by a female, pull inside the parking lot.

They watched the female scan the parking lot and drive off with the Cavalier following. The surveillance team briefly lost sight of the vehicles but found them seconds later. The two vehicles drove together for a few blocks and separated. The detectives believed that a drug transaction might have occurred during the brief period of time out of surveillance.

The Cavalier drove to the expressway and headed southbound and the Blazer traveled northbound on Centre Street. The detectives followed the Blazer to the area of Crescent Street, where a red Dodge Caravan, occupied by two males, pulled out of the Copeland Package Store parking lot and began to follow the Blazer.

Detective Ryan observed the two vehicles pull up side to side in the parking lot of St. Mary's School. Detectives Barkas and Ward took up a position and observed the male Caravan driver (suspect No. 1) exit his vehicle, approach and lean into the Blazer. The suspect got back into the Caravan and drove away.

Having reason to believe that an exchange had been made, Detective Ryan followed the Caravan northbound on Crescent Street while Detectives Barkas and Ward drove into the parking lot to stop the Blazer.

The operator of the Blazer, upon seeing the detectives, sped away from the lot, over the curb, heading northbound on Crescent Street. As the Blazer approached the Hall Place intersection, Detective O'Brien stopped it.

The detectives removed the driver from the vehicle and as she stepped onto the sidewalk, she dropped $110 from her clenched fist. Inside the Blazer, Detective O'Brien found a black plastic bag with $800 and 20 plastic baggies of powdery substance believed to be cocaine.

Suspect No. 1 was placed under arrest and a subsequent search revealed a total of $966 and one additional baggy of a powdery substance in the console. The Blazer was towed to the police station.

Meanwhile, the Caravan headed south on Route 3, followed by Detective Ryan, who requested assistance in stopping the suspects' vehicle. Assistance came from State Trooper Brian Dunn and Weymouth police officers Sean Murray and Tim Browning.

As the female passenger (suspect No. 2) was removed from the Caravan, Trooper Dunn observed her place something in the front of her pants. Once the male driver (suspect No. 3) was removed, officers found three small children were also in the van.

Detective Karyn Barkas arrived on the scene and after searching the female passenger, she found two plastic bags of a substance appearing to be cocaine. Suspect No. 2 and No. 3 were placed under arrest.

Fallon Ambulance responded to the scene and transported three children to South Shore Hospital for evaluation. Detective Ryan located a relative to take temporary custody of the children and Fallon Supervisor Diana King filed an abuse/neglect report on behalf of the children.

DSS was also notified. Suspect No. 1, a 30-year-old female from Boston, was charged with "Trafficking Cocaine," "Possession of Class B with the Intent to Distribute," "Possession of Drugs in a School Zone" and "Conspiracy to Violate the Controlled Substance Act."

Both suspect No. 2, a 39-year-old female from Plymouth, and suspect No. 3, also from Plymouth, were charged with "Illegal Possession of Class B (cocaine)" and "Conspiracy to Violate the Controlled Substance Act."

When Workouts Don't Show Results

Q. Although I make regular visits to the gym, I've noticed that my midsection continues to grow. I've cut back on sweets and have increased my weekly gym appearances, but I still haven't made much of a dent in the tummy spread. Any suggestions?

A. Your concerns are shared by many exercisers who try to eat well and work hard in the gym but don't always see the results they desire. There are several factors that could be keeping you from seeing your "handles" shrink.

• Use your time wisely. The time you spend in the gym should be effective, efficient and fun. Just showing up at the gym is not going to give you the results you desire.

• Develop a balanced fitness program that you enjoy. A balanced exercise program includes cardiovascular, strength and flexibility exercises that will continue to progress as you become stronger.

• Vary your workout routine. Completing the same cardiovascular workout for weeks at a time will not produce the same results at Week 4 as it did in Week 2. As your body gets stronger and adapts to your workout routines, it is necessary to continue to challenge your body by progressing your workout intensities or adding variety.

If you are accustomed to using the treadmill every time you work out, try the bike, elliptical trainer or rower to increase your heart rate. In addition, completing a comprehensive strength-training program will not only make you stronger, but will increase your lean muscle mass, which helps reduce fat throughout your body, including your stomach.

As with cardiovascular training, completing the same strength-training routine day after day will not allow you to progress. Find new exercises, take a group exercise class or hire a personal trainer to add variety. Consulting a fitness professional is a great way to find ways to modify your workouts and help push past training plateaus.

• Take charge of your nutrition. The key is to take responsibility for what goes into your body. Without the proper nutritional plan, you can be sabotaging your potential for great results. Changes such as drinking water or working on portion control could be the piece that is missing. If you are unsure how to start, consult a nutritionist or registered dietician.

Keep working hard and keep your workouts fresh and new, and your hard work will pay off.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. E-mail Andrea at letters.kfws@hearstsc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Ways To Save And Shape Up

(NAPS) Shaping up does not have to cost a lot of money. It can be as simple and inexpensive- as making small lifestyle changes.

Here are a few tips to help get started:

1. Why not skip watching TV for one night and go for a walk with a friend? Walking is one of the best forms of exercise and one of the easiest to do.

2. Do yard work. Pushing a manual mower and raking leaves burns hundreds of calories and can save $100 or more every month.

3. Wash and wax a car to save dollars and burn calories.

4. Do housework. It burns between 140 and 400 calories a day and can save the money that would be spent by hiring help. Thirty minutes of window washing burns 100 calories.

5. Consider a health care discount program like HealthSaver, which has teamed up with Jenny Craig to offer great savings on a variety of weight loss programs.

Members can save money on sensible weight loss programs, which focus on a healthy relationship with food, an active lifestyle and a balanced approach to living, commonly referred to as food/body/mind.

The programs offer planned or personalized menus, a personalized activity and motivational plan, one-on-one consultations, weight loss success manuals and tools and 24-hour support. Plans include:

• TuneUp: A 30-day introductory program (plus the cost of food) that's free with HealthSaver membership. It offers a quick shape-up for people who already have a healthy diet, exercise and want to lose 10 lbs. or less.

• On Track: A six-month plan to help get back OnTrack with consistent healthy eating and physical activity. Membership earns a 50 percent discount.

• Jenny Rewards: A year-long plan in which food discount rewards grow from 10 to 35 percent with continuation. This earns a 20 percent discount.

HealthSaver offers discounts of 20 percent on vision care, prescriptions and alternative health care treatments. For more information, visit www.healthsaver.com.

"Patients enjoy the opportunity to spend time in a relaxed, non-medical setting with others in the same situation. And the free make-up and instruction from professionals helps them look and feel better."

The American Cancer Society estimates that approximately 662,870 American women will develop some form of cancer this year. The good news is that, thanks to advances in medicine, the five-year relative survival rate of all cancers is 65 percent.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

ROOT CAUSES

Endodontic therapy, or root canal treatment, has an undeserved reputation for being a very painful procedure. The fact of the matter is, however, that while the infection or trauma that makes root canal therapy necessary can be exceedingly painful, the treatment itself is not more painful than having a filling put in. Granted, endodontic treatment is more complicated than simply filling a decayed portion of the tooth. Root canal treatment involves removing the pulp tissue in the root of the tooth, which contains nerves. This is why degenerative changes in this area are so painful. It is not until the dentist removes the pulp tissue and replaces it with an inert material that the patient experiences relief.

With today's modern dental equipment root canal therapy can be very comfortable. We offer high quality dentistry for all family members. We are a highly qualified and experienced team of professionals, thoroughly trained, skillful, and sensitive to your individual needs. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our goal is to make each visit a comfortable and positive experience. We are sensitive to the needs of all age groups, giving everyone the patience and empathy they require. For superior quality dental care, call 617-479-6220 today to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

A Job Well Done

On April 1, at approximately 3:30 p.m., Detectives William Ward and Karyn Barkas, both in plain clothes, were conducting an interview at Dunkin' Donuts on Centre Street in West Quincy.

As they were exiting the building to the rear lot, Detective Ward noticed a male and female sitting inside a parked red Chevrolet Cavalier, facing away from the building. The detectives took up a position where they could watch the couple and observed both occupants turn their heads to look at each and every vehicle that entered the parking lot. In their report, the detectives related training and experience to show that people often wait in parking lots to meet up with narcotics dealers to purchase drugs.

LT. DAN MINTON

At approximately 3:50 p.m., Lieutenant Tom Corliss of the Special Investigations Unit and Detectives Edward Ryan and William O'Brien arrived in the area to provide assistance. The surveillance team observed a brown Chevrolet Blazer, occupied by a female, pull inside the parking lot.

They watched the female scan the parking lot and drive off with the Cavalier following. The surveillance team briefly lost sight of the vehicles but found them seconds later. The two vehicles drove together for a few blocks and separated. The detectives believed that a drug transaction might have occurred during the brief period of time out of surveillance.

The Cavalier drove to the expressway and headed southbound and the Blazer traveled northbound on Centre Street. The detectives followed the Blazer to the area of Crescent Street, where a red Dodge Caravan, occupied by two males, pulled out of the Copeland Package Store parking lot and began to follow the Blazer.

Detective Ryan observed the two vehicles pull up side to side in the parking lot of St. Mary's School. Detectives Barkas and Ward took up a position and observed the male Caravan driver (suspect No. 1) exit his vehicle, approach and lean into the Blazer. The suspect got back into the Caravan and drove away.

Having reason to believe that an exchange had been made, Detective Ryan followed the Caravan northbound on Crescent Street while Detectives Barkas and Ward drove into the parking lot to stop the Blazer.

The operator of the Blazer, upon seeing the detectives, sped away from the lot, over the curb, heading northbound on Crescent Street. As the Blazer approached the Hall Place intersection, Detective O'Brien stopped it.

The detectives removed the driver from the vehicle and as she stepped onto the sidewalk, she dropped $110 from her clenched fist. Inside the Blazer, Detective O'Brien found a black plastic bag with $800 and 20 plastic baggies of powdery substance believed to be cocaine.

Suspect No. 1 was placed under arrest and a subsequent search revealed a total of $966 and one additional baggy of a powdery substance in the console. The Blazer was towed to the police station.

Meanwhile, the Caravan headed south on Route 3, followed by Detective Ryan, who requested assistance in stopping the suspects' vehicle. Assistance came from State Trooper Brian Dunn and Weymouth police officers Sean Murray and Tim Browning.

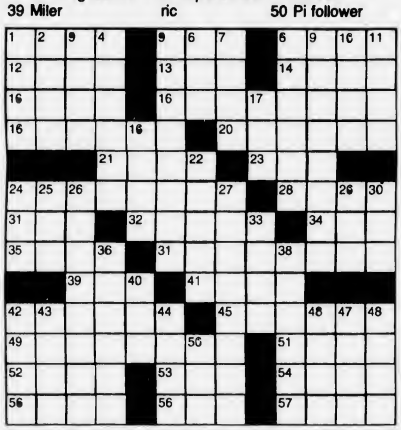
As the female passenger (suspect No. 2) was removed from the Caravan, Trooper Dunn observed her place something in the front of her pants. Once the male driver (suspect No. 3) was removed, officers found three small children were also in the van.

Detective Karyn Barkas arrived on the scene and after searching the female passenger, she found two plastic bags of a substance appearing to be cocaine. Suspect No. 2 and No. 3 were placed under arrest.

Fallon Ambulance responded to the scene and transported three children to South Shore Hospital for evaluation. Detective Ryan located a relative to take temporary custody of the children and Fallon Supervisor Diana King filed an abuse/neglect report on behalf of the children.

DSS was also notified. Suspect No. 1, a 30-year-old female from Boston, was charged with "Trafficking Cocaine," "Possession of Class B with the Intent to Distribute," "Possession of Drugs in a School Zone" and "Conspiracy to Violate the Controlled Substance Act."

Both suspect No. 2, a 39-year-old female from Plymouth, and suspect No. 3, also from Plymouth, were charged with "Illegal Possession of Class B (cocaine)" and "Conspiracy to Violate the Controlled Substance Act."



Nice work!

FREIBERG'S INFRACTION

Freiberg's Infraction occurs when an inadequate blood supply causes the head of the second toe bone to die. This condition strikes most often between the ages of 11 and 17, and it affects girls more than boys. The genetic difference is explained by the fact that girls' second metatarsals are typically longer than their big toes and therefore bear more weight and pressure. Repetitive stress on the area may lead to injury and tiny breaks between the bone and the growth plate. The fractures compromise blood flow to the area, which leads to the death of the cells. Symptoms include localized swelling and tenderness, pain in the toe, and limited ability to bend the toe.

Proper care of toe and other foot conditions is vital to your program of overall good health. Our office provides comprehensive care in managing foot and ankle problems as well as helping prevent them before they occur. We specialize in the evaluation and treatment of many problems affecting the lower extremities. For your feet's sake and your well-being, call us at 781-986-3668 for an appointment for leading-edge, compassionate foot care. We're located at 999 North Main Street, Randolph, in the MEDICAL OFFICE BUILDING. Office hours are now also available at Quincy Medical Center and Milton Medical Building.

HINT: Treatment for Freiberg's Infraction may involve immobilizing the toe, orthotics, or surgery to remove bone debris.

Quincy Beaches Commission Seeking Sponsors For Guide

The Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission is inviting local businesses and residents to sponsor the seventh annual edition of the popular Quincy Beach Guide.

A $25 donation will feature the name of the business or resident on the sponsor's page on the 5,000 copies that are printed annually and distributed around the city.

Last year's guide had 47 pages, including two pages of sun safety tips, a list of what types of sunglasses best fits the shape of your face as well as a summary of Quincy beaches and tide charts.

The Beaches and Coastal Commission was formed, with Ward 1 City Councillor Leo Kelly, a Houghs Neck resident, as chairman, to oversee improvements to the city's 27 miles of coastline.

Sponsor donations will be used by the commission to advance those improvements.

Send donations, including name, address, telephone number and e-mail address, to Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, One Merrymount Parkway, Quincy 02170. Deadline is Friday, May 19.

For more information, call 617-773-1534.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Once a year a day is set aside for the special purpose of honoring mothers. It is a day dedicated to honor all mothers for their devotion, guidance, sacrifice and love.

Great philosophers, churchmen, writers and sociologists through the ages have long agreed that the role of a mother is as demanding, and exemplary, as any human endeavor. A mother's influence is unexcelled.

Many of today's modern mothers have a two-fold job. To "make ends meet" financially, many modern mothers have to work outside the home. In many other cases, modern mothers choose to continue business careers.

And so, on this special day let us take the time to think hard upon how much Mother means to all of us. Let us renew our determination to express our feelings throughout the year, and not just on this single day. Let us find a way to let her know how we feel... how important she is every day of the year...

nity to accept a project that it otherwise would not. Our compliance in providing an appropriate amount of affordable housing ensures that Quincy residents will have proper representation and input in the project that affect their neighborhoods."

The committee, comprised of members of the Solicitors' Office, Planning Department, Engineering Department and Board of Assessors, determined the city was well in excess of one of the three criteria provided for in Chapter 40B.

"We will continue to support affordable housing opportunities for our residents, but we will do so in a manner that properly involves the community," Phelan said. "The 40B threat was used effectively by the developer at Highpoint and I am pleased to announce that our hard work ensures that Quincy residents will not see an 'end-run' around local controls concerning development."

Escapes Severe Flooding

Despite Heavy Rains City 'Fares Well'

By TOM HENSHAW

While the worst flooding in 70 years devastated the North Shore of Boston, Quincy and the South Shore appeared to have escaped virtually unscathed from nearly a week of unrelenting rain.

"Except for some water in basements and yards, we seem to have escaped serious flooding," said Tom Gorman, the city's emergency management director Tuesday morning.

"We fared very well," said Mayor William Phelan, who toured the city during the storm checking out the "hot spots" that traditionally have given problems in the past.

The sun came out briefly Tuesday afternoon, then ducked back behind the clouds and the weather forecast for the rest of the week was gloomy, although the worst had apparently passed by already.

The Weather Bureau called for 30 or 40 per cent chance of showers for the remainder of the week with not much chance of seeing the sun for any length of time until sometime after the weekend.

Gorman said, quoting National Weather Service figures, that 9.35 inches of rain fell on Quincy during the five days of storm and below normal temperatures.

"It was certainly not as serious as the storm last October," said Gorman. "A lot of preparation work was done by the Public Works Department. We were ready for anything."

The DPW sent several large pumps to flood prone areas around Stedman, Ballou and Connell Streets in West Quincy where Furnace Brook has a tendency to overflow its banks.

Phelan also praised the work of Commissioner Steve O'Donnell and his DPW crew who went without sleep for much of the storm.

"The DPW did a great job of keeping the brooks free of debris, cleaning drains and pumping out problem areas," the Mayor told his weekly Tuesday news conference on Quincy Access Television.

"We also were very fortunate. The tides weren't high. Things worked out very well."

The problems on the North Shore came from the extensive watersheds of its rivers which swelled to the bursting point, caused the worst flooding since 1936 and threatened the many dams in the mill towns.

"We have no big rivers that are prone to flooding," said Gorman. "Furnace Brook is one that has given us problems but it stayed pretty much within its banks.

"There is a dam on the reservoir in the Blue Hills but the reservoir has been drained by the MWRA to prepare for an underground water tank.

"It was a big help. The reservoir became a holding basin for the water that flowed out of the Blue Hills."

As the storm began to ease on Tuesday afternoon, the MWRA sewage treatment plant on Deer island was pumping a capacity 1.3 billion gallons a day and still holding.

Last fall, at the height of the flooding, the plant suffered a power failure and dumped 25 million gallons of raw sewage into Quincy Bay.

Phelan Sends $237M Budget To City Council

By MIKAELA SLANEY

"We're going to continue as long as I'm the mayor, to invest in our future by investing in our schools," Mayor William Phelan told the City Council Monday night, as he submitted his proposed budget for fiscal year 2007.

The proposed budget for FY07 is $237,502,017, an increase of $10,719,712 from FY06.

Under the proposed budget for FY07, education funding will increase by five percent education accounting for 31 percent of the expenditures. This is the second largest expenditure, under fixed-costs, which accounts for 44 percent.

Allowances in state funding for education in Quincy is $1,512 per pupil, compared to $3,069 per pupil in Weymouth, said Phelan.

"It's truly not fair. I suggest we contact our delegation," he said.

Phelan's proposal will be reviewed by the Finance Committee at a public hearing Monday May 22 at 6:30 p.m. at the council chambers, followed by a Finance Committee meeting at 7 p.m. Five follow-up sessions are scheduled.

"We'll give the budget a very close review," said Councillor John Keenan, chairman of the Finance Committee. "The mayor has suggested this will bring a one percent increase in the tax rate, and we'll look at those numbers as well."

"One... two... three percent, in that area is what I predict the increase (in taxes) to be," said Phelan.

"Do we just want to survive? Do we just want to maintain? Or do we want to improve?" he asked the council.

Phelan's FY07 budget proposal includes:

•An increase of five percent in the Education budget for Public Schools.

•$1 million appropriation to continue the efforts of the Pavement Management Plan.

Dedicated To John Noonan

Senior Olympic Games Underway

The 24th annual Quincy Senior Olympics got underway Monday evening with the opening ceremony and the one-mile walk event.

Mayor William Phelan and Warren Kirkland, 94, the eldest Olympian, together lit the Senior Olympic Torch to launch the Games.

This year's Senior Olympics is dedicated to John Noonan, who died in April. He was chairman of the Council on Aging and a member of Beechwood's Senior Advisory Council, the Christmas Festival Parade Committee and other community events.

Noonan, who participated in all the Senior Olympics since 1982, registered for this year's Games three days before his death.

"His spirited involvement will be long remembered," said Sharron Beals, executive director of Beechwood on the Bay.

The Senior Olympics began 24 years ago as an afternoon of sports activities. Today, it spans 10 days and includes 17 events at 10 sites throughout the city.

The Recreation Department, Council on Aging, Quincy Police Department and North Quincy High School Honor Guard all assist during the Games.

"This is a unique community event," Beals said. "Support for the Senior Games is widespread. Guidance and support begin with Mayor Phelan and his staff. City departments team with Beechwood and participate enthusiastically."

"Again this year we proudly acknowledge with gratitude our primary sponsors," she added. "Quincy Medical Center and Boston Medical Center, Quincy Rotary, the Riverbay Club and Marina Place are long-standing friends of the Senior Games."

On Tuesday, the bowling event was held at Olindys Lanes and on Wednesday, billiards and darts were held at Club 58 and swimming at Lincoln-Hancock School.

Phelan Tells Council:

Costs Up But City Can Still Afford New High School

By MIKAELA SLANEY

"We're looking for help to get this built," Mayor William Phelan told the City Council Monday night, as he brought the council up to date in cost estimates for construction of the new high school.

He told the council that despite increases in building costs estimates from $80 million in 2003 to between $120 and $130 million, Quincy can still afford to build the new school.

The city will receive a 60 percent reimbursement of $72 million from the state, a reimbursement that was decided from 2003 estimates.

The reimbursement rate is "subject to change," said Phelan,

No further vote has been taken by the council since their 2004 acceptance of the figures of 2003. Councillor John Keenan suggested that the council take a new vote on the new proposal.

"We don't have any objection to a new vote," said Phelan.

The high school proposal includes an entrance on Coddington Street, a courtyard, surface parking, a cafeteria or commons, a science and technology wing, as well as theater and athletic departments, both of which will be publicly-accessible.

Under guidelines of the School Building Authority, the high school will be a new facility that does not include portions of the old one, said Alex Pitkin, associate principal of Symmes Maine & McKee Associates, the architecture firm that designed the plan approved by the School Committee.

Phelan expressed concerns over this issue, but said, "if we stop to dispute that issue, we'll likely jeopardize the whole school (construction)," said Phelan.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee expressed concerns that plans for a new Sterling School are not included in the construction of the new high school.

"Those parents have been promised a new school. This was a tripod proposal. I need to see a commitment," said McNamee.

"They've waited too long. Why they're not totally frustrated is beyond me. It's time they take center stage," he said.

"This high school is just one aspect of an extremely important plan," said Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi.

"We don't know what projects, and when, they're going to be accepted by the School Committee," said Phelan.

McNamee suggested that some of the budget increases in building the school were due to project managers' leniency on workers, who may have overly-personal relationships with their employers.

"I don't want to be over budget because of a job ownership issue," McNamee said.

"We only hire city employees if they show the same capacity as professional project managers," said City Solicitor Monica Conyngham.

"We have a responsibility to tax-payers and to neighbors," said Council President Douglas Gutro. "We understand that everyone wants a school built, and there are constraints to strike a balance. We're taking this seriously. We're not going to rush through the responsibilities."

North Quincy High School Students Learn Self-Defense Techniques

The Quincy Police Department Crime Prevention Unit recently sponsored a 10-week RAD (Rape Aggression Defense) program at North Quincy High School.

The program's goal was to provide self-defense techniques to female students who are going off to college next year. The students were selected by their guidance counselors.

This is the first time this course has been offered to high school students.

Detective Karyn Barkas, who created the certificate program, put the students through various role play scenarios to see how they would react.

The highlight of the course was the attack simulation. Students had the opportunity to defend themselves and fight off an attacker, played by Police Officers certified in the RAD program. The attacker is dressed up in a padded red suit so that the student can use the learned tactics against him.

The course also taught "Awareness," so that the student can reduce the chances of being in a situation where they would need to use their newly acquired skills.

Flynn, Curtis & Flynn

Flynn, Curtis & Flynn.
Sounds like a law firm. Or, maybe a new singing trio.

RAY FLYNN

CHET CURTIS

DAN FLYNN

But, no, it's Ray Flynn, Chet Curtis and Dan Flynn.

They teamed up in what turned out to be the highlight of the evening at the recent Spring Fundraiser dinner-auction celebrating the 25th anniversary of the Beechwood Community Life Center at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

Ray Flynn, of course, is the former Ambassador to the Vatican and former mayor of Boston. Curtis, a Marina Bay resident, is a familiar news host on New England Cable News. Dan Flynn is a well-known Quincy real estate developer-manager and auctioneer extraordinare.

They took the spotlight during the live auction, but sharing it with bidders.

There were some 25 items up for bid. Among them:

A lottery board containing 270 scratch tickets which went for $1,000. Two sets of two Red-Sox Yankee tickets which drew $500 for each set. A one-week stay for two at the Falls at Ogunquit with in-room jacquzzi, indoor pool, fitness room and other frills, taken for $500.

That was good for a little action.

But then came item No. 24: a "Celebrity Lunch Package" for two hosted by Ray Flynn and Curtis.

And Dan Flynn rose to the occasion.

The package includes traveling to Martha's Vineyard in Curtis' plane. Or somewhere else, winner's choice. Curtis is a veteran, experienced pilot.

Dan Flynn wasn't going to let this one go easy. He soon had the crowd's enthusiasm whipped up and the bids flying: $500, $1,000 . . . $1500, . . . $1800 . . . $2000 . . . $2500 . . . and so on until Donna Jean Sanderson of Marina Bay topped it off at $3,100.

"It's the highest auction bid we have ever had on any item," smiled happily Sharron Beals, executive director of the Beechwood Center.

Dan Flynn, of course, was pleased. It was the highest bid ever for a Beechwood auction. And how often do you get a chance to auction off an ambassador and TV personality? And at the same time.

Ray Flynn, incidentally, has another title around the Beechwood Center besides Mr. Ambassador and Mr. Mayor: "Papa."

His grandson, Matthew Foley, four-year-old son of his daughter, Maureen and Michael Foley, attends Beechwood's pre-school. And Papa takes in the various activities.

Flynn, who wrote a book about his ambassador experience at the Vatican and his friendship with Pope John Paul II, is writing another.

This one will be about his South Boston roots and political career.

Sounds like interesting reading.

McCAULEY

He's quite qualified for the job. He knows his Quincy history. And you might say, he's had quite a few yesterdays. (Just kidding, Frank.)

You'll have to excuse him when you see his own name in the column. He had a distinguished political career spanning 32 years as mayor (four terms), council president, ward councillor, councillor at large and school committeeman.

So, he's made some history himself which can't be overlooked in the column. Frank will mention a little of it now and then.

Quincy's Yesterdays was originated by the late Paul Harold in the early 1970s and was followed by Tom Henshaw.

Both did a good job. Frank would like you to let him know how you think he's doing. And years you might be particularly interested in.

It was the drawing for prizes in the Quincy Business Association's Quincy Center landmark identity contest for students from kindergarten to grade 8.

To be eligible for prizes contestants had to correctly identify 10 Quincy Center buildings through partial photos.

Rachel McIver, Squantum School student and one of the contestants, was invited to draw a couple of names.

She drew the name of Joseph Crisiani of the Marshall School for the top prize of $100.

Then she dipped into the basket and pulled her own name out for a $50 prize.

There is a petition campaign underway to place the CPA on the ballot for the November election in Quincy.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS OLD POSTCARD is a view of the first Metropolitan Sewerage Plant on Nut Island at the end of Houghs Neck. Built in 1901, this facility served as a screen house at the end of a new 17-mile long sewer pipe. Towns from Framingham to Quincy fed raw sewerage into the pipe; debris caught in the screens here was burned. The rest emptied into the harbor through an underwater outfall pipe. The result was a harbor filled with floating sewage and an obnoxious stench. After 50 years of this intolerable situation a new plant was built here to treat the sewerage with chlorine before discharge. Other than its benefits to the flounder fishing industry that solution was also a disaster. Fifty more years later there is again a new facility at this location, but the sewerage now is passed on to a high technology treatment plant at Deer Island where it is discharged nine miles out as almost pure water. And, although there are some structures here, after 100 years Nut Island has become a landscaped park for joggers, strollers and fisherman. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Charlie Ross Thanks Loyal WJDA Listeners

I would like to take this opportunity to say thank you to all of the loyal WJDA listeners who allowed me into their homes, cars, offices, earphones or wherever over the years.

I worked there for 33 years and like you, there is now a hold in my life that I don't know how I will fill in the future. The Friday nights during the high school football season and Thanksgiving morning will be as hard for me as they will be for you.

I also want to thank Henry and Bob Bosworth and the entire staff at The Quincy Sun. Every time I asked them to run something in the paper about WJDA's high school football coverage, they did. I will always be grateful for the support that this paper has provided to my career at WJDA.

Supports BC's Invitation To Rice As Speaker

When Governor George W. Bush during his presidential campaign, declared that Jesus Christ is his model in life, I voted for him. But after he became the President, and declared Winston Churchill his model in life, and invaded Iraq, I did not vote for him again. Because Senator John F. Kerry also supported the war on Iraq, having previously supported the war on Serbia, I could not vote for him either.

However, the American people re-elected President Bush, after he invaded Iraq. Secretary of State Condoleeza Rice represents that government that the American people re-elected.

When I have the right to criticize the American government for the war on Iraq, as I previously criticized President Clinton for the war on Serbia, how much more does Condoleeza Rice as a government representative have the right to speak representing the American people and the American government?

Boston College President Rev. William Leahy is fully entitled to choose anybody of his choice to receive an honorary doctorate and be a graduation speaker.

Do I still live in the United States of America?!

City Council Passes $80.6 Million Budget

Week Of May 15
1985
21 Years Ago

By FRANK McCAULEY

The City Council, by a vote of 8 to 1, passed a municipal budget in the amount of $80, 621,255 for fiscal 1986.

The budget was up 5.48 percent, $4.2 million over the FY1985 budget. Council President James Sheets, while expressing concern that there was not "more public safety in the budget," said it was a reasonably lean budget. Mayor Francis McCauley said he hoped to set a tax rate by August or early September.

Freemasonry, Da Vinci Code Topics At Library June 4

Was the Knights Templar founded to find and then preserve a history changing secret?

Is the world's oldest fraternity, the Freemasons, a direct descendant of the Knights of the Crusades? Discover the truth behind the fiction Sunday, June 4 at 2 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

Graeme Marsden of Quincy's Rural Lodge of Freemasons will shed light on Dan Brown's controversial novel, The Da Vinci Code, and its claims about the Freemasons and the Knights Templar. While Brown's book is fiction, based on the premise that a secret order exists to protect an "earth shattering" secret, the author purports much of it to be true.

Because the book touches on some of the most basic beliefs of the Christian church and history, it has caused excitement and controversy. Marsden's slide presentation will take those attending behind the closed doors of Freemasonry, including its history, aims, and symbols, and will also include information about the medieval knightly orders such as the Knights Templar.

Following the presentation, those attending will be invited to a guided tour of the Quincy Masonic Building, 1170 Hancock St. See inside this building which was designed by architects Beale & Co. in 1923. Beale was inspired by the discovery of ancient Egyptian King Tutankhamun's tomb the previous year, and the Quincy Masonic Building combines Roman and Greek architecture with Egyptian elements. Light refreshments will be served after the tour.

This free presentation for adults and teens is sponsored by the Thomas Crane Public Library and Quincy's Rural Lodge of Freemason, www.rurallodge.com.

For more information, call 617-376-1301 or visit thomascranelibrary.org.

•$200,000 for neighborhood tree-planting; the first budget appropriation of it's kind.

•$50,000 to study safety improvements along Sea Street, the first step in a major effort to redesign this important yet dangerous roadway.

•Funding for a new Code Enforcement Officer position.

•Restoration of a Heavy MEO/Tree Climber position in the Park and Forestry Department.

•Funding to ensure compliance with State-mandated requirements for handicap accessibility for all polling stations.

Phelan also highlighted a reduction in state aid from $43,922,614 in FY02 to $39,207,442 in FY07.

However, state delegation has enabled the city to postpone the payment on the Quincy Medical Center loan which provides time to seek a more permanent solution, he said.

Employee benefits in 2002 were close to $18 million. In 2007, employee benefits will total $37,820,329, an increase of $19,820,329 in expenditures.

Phelan also attributed budget increases to health care costs, pension obligation, escalating water and sewer costs, and the overall cost of energy and gasoline.

Fixed costs continue to grow, from $94,738,963 in FY06 to $104,458,675 in FY07, an increase of $10,474,898.

Fixed costs for FY07 are comprised of:

•$37,820,787: Employee benefits.

•$17,256,365: Retirement pension contribution.

•$11,336,278: Debt service.

•$27,329,071: MWRA assessment.

•$6,682,600: Waste collection.

•$2,512,630: Energy.

•$2,520,944: Other.

Despite rising expenses and reduction in state aid, Quincy has remained deficit-free since 2001, which Phelan attributed to thrifty expenditure.

"We see spending trends in our city that we should be proud of," said Phelan.

FY07 revenue ($238,860,942) is comprised of:

•$3,642,308: tax increase of 2.5 percent, the permitted increase under Proposition 2 1/2. (Increase of $3,642,308 from estimates of FY06.)

•$1,266,414: school building assistance.

•$3,000,000: new growth. (Remained the same.)

Ten months into FY06, expenditures are consistant to spending slightly less than the proposed budget, according to Richard Fitzpatrick, city auditor.

"I anticipate we will close out this year on budget, if anything, with a small amount of savings, but nothing substantial," said Fitzpatrick.

First Seasonal Open House May 27 At Dorothy Quincy Homestead

Recently designated a National Historic Landmark, the Dorothy Quincy Homestead, at the corner of Hancock St. and Butler Rd., will open to the public on Sat., May 27 between 1 and 4 p.m.

Tours will be offered on the hour and half hour beginning at 1 p.m. The last tour begins at 3:30 p.m. All tours are free of charge, but a voluntary contribution is suggested.

This is the first of five general house openings this season.

Dating from 1686, the house is 320 years old. During the 17th and 18th centuries, this mansion was considered the grandest estate in Quincy. It was a childhood home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, the wife of John Hancock.

The Homestead is nearing the completion of an extensive restoration which included painting the exterior. The project was funded by a combination of public and private sources, including the Massachusetts Colonial Dames and the Commonwealth. The DCR (former MDC) oversaw the work through its public-private partnerships office under the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs.

For more information, visit the Dorothy Quincy Homestead's website:

Quincy Girl Scouts Brownie Level Workshop

Quincy Girl Scouts recently held its Spring Brownie Level Workshop in Wollaston where older Girl Scouts helped younger ones learn how much fun math can be since so many girls shy away from the benefits of math.

For this event more than 100 girls participated. The older girls created stations for the younger girls to visit and work towards completing a math project.

A Senior Scout is high school level; a Junior Girl Scout is 4th-6th grade; a Brownie Girl Scout is in the 1st -3rd grade; and a Daisy Girl Scout is in kindergarten.

The 55th annual Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration will honor the servicemen and women who have returned home from serving in the Iraqi War.

They together will be designated Grand Marshal of the parade.

"It is necessary and appropriate to honor the dedication and sacrifices made by our servicemen and women from the city as well as those of the 102nd Army National Guard based in Quincy who have safely returned home after proudly serving our country," said Mayor William Phelan.

The city's Department of Veteran's Services is seeking the servicemen and women who have returned home from duty. Veterans who would like to participate but have not been contacted may call Veteran's Services at 617-376-1194 for more details.

The Flag Day Parade and Celebration will be held Saturday evening, June 10. The event, including the parade, flag raising ceremony and fireworks display is sponsored by the City of Quincy, the Quincy Partnership and the Koch Club.

The parade steps off on Coddington Street in Quincy Center at 7 p.m., proceeds down Hancock Street, and disbands at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park. Featured participants include marching bands, drum corps, color guards, military vehicles and, the perennial highlight, more than 1,500 flag-waving youngsters.

The parade was originated in 1951 by the late Richard J. Koch and the Koch Club, and focused on honoring our flag and teaching youngsters to take pride in our country.

"Even in it's 55th year the basic foundation this event was built upon, instilled patriotism and pride in our youngsters and honoring Old Glory, continue to endure," said Thomas P. Koch, Flag Day Committee Chairman and son of the Koch Club founder.

"Flag Day will always remain unique to Quincy because of the so many families who come out each year to watch the parade and participate in the celebration, and that's what makes it such a success," he said.

The parade culminates into a celebration at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park which will include a flag raising of a massive 30 foot by 60 foot version of Old Glory, patriotic music and a sing-along, fly-over, and howitzer salute by the 102nd Battalion of the Army National Guard climaxed by a fireworks display.

For more information, contact the Quincy Park Department at 617-376-1251.

Insurance Against Rising Mortgage Payments

(NAPS) There's good news for those shocked by rising payments on interest-only and adjustable-rate mortgages. It's possible an insurance product may help eliminate some of the stress.

Interest-only loans and adjustable-rate mortgages, made popular when interest rates dipped below five percent, made low monthly payments possible even when borrowers put little or no money down.

However, many homeowners are now seeing payment increases as low introductory rates increase and interest-only periods end.

Experts believe the increases are contributing to rising foreclosures, up 45 percent in January, according to foreclosure listing service RealtyTrac.

"One trillion dollars worth of mortgages will reset to new interest rates next year, we should be facing a major crisis," said Bill Ruh, Government Affairs Director of the California-based Citrus Valley Association of Realtors.

"Buyers may think they can only purchase a home using a short-term or fancy combo loan, but the reliable 30-year fixed mortgage is an attainable and secure option," he said.

While may have tried to avoid it in the past, new types of private mortgage insurance (MI) offer that secure option, providing a lower monthly payment than many combo loans.

One type of mortgage insurance, called "single premium", lets buyers borrow the full amount needed, with no added monthly fees because the one-time premium is financed within one loan. And if the value of the home appreciates enough to cancel the insurance within the first five years, buyers receive a partial refund. In today's real estate environment, mortgage insurance sometimes cancels in as little as two to three years.

Compare the savings on a "single premium" loan to a "piggyback" mortgage on a $175,000 home purchased with a five percent down payment.

The single premium loan has a $1,076 monthly payment, while the piggyback is $1,142 per month. If the mortgage insurance were canceled after three years, the single premium loan holder would receive a one-time refund of $1,630.

Said Kevin Schneider of Genworth Financial, Inc., "With single premium products, monthly payments are among the lowest, and homeowners have peace of mind knowing that payment will not fluctuate."

Buyers can compute monthly payments on different loan options using a loan calculator at www.SmarterMI.com.

Safeguarding A Home

(NAPS) What can someone do to safeguard a home when house keys end up in the wrong hands? That's a question nearly two out of three American homeowners should consider closely, according to a new study.

The study, Danger at America's Doorstep: Who Has Keys to Your Home?, looked at how homeowners protect, or fail to protect, their house keys and safeguard their home.

The survey found that a majority, 64 percent, of American homeowners have knowingly circulated their house keys outside of their immediate family and nearly one in three, 27 percent, of American homeowners have given out a key three or more times.

Every 15 seconds a burglar breaks into a house, apartment or condo in the U.S. Burglars are often quick to attack a home's easiest point of entry, and nothing's easier than unlocking a front door with a set of keys. According to John Heppner, President and CEO of Fortune Brands Storage and Security, including Master Lock Company L.L.C., "Too many Americans underestimate the potential risks they invite to their homes when they let their house keys wander."

Fortunately, there are ways to prevent strangers from entering a home, even if they have the key. For example, the Master Lock NightWatch® Deadbolt looks and works just like a standard deadbolt lock, but it offers a powerful new security feature: a patent pending blocking function that locks out all keys.

To activate, owners simply lock the deadbolt as they would a standard deadbolt and then pull the lever towards them. This simple motion locks the deadbolt into an "engaged" position that blocks out any key. The lock can only be engaged or disengaged from indoors and can be easily installed in any standard entry door, replacing any other standard deadbolt.

To safeguard their homes, homeowners should:

1. Keep keys secured where they won't be forgotten or left behind.

2. Don't hide keys in "secret" places outside the home, experienced burglars can usually find them.

3. Never attach keys to anything that lists a name, address or phone number, and never leave them behind in a locked (or unlocked) car.

4. Always separate house keys from car keys each time every time the car is valeted, or dropped off for service.

5. Only give keys to someone who will watch over them as if they were their own.

Five Century 21 Agents Senior Real Estate Specialists

The number of "seniors" who are looking to purchase and/or sell real estate is growing, as they choose to "downsize" from their current home, move into an active adult community or locate closer to family and friends.

In order to better serve their mature client base, several Realtors at Century 21 Annex Realty have obtained the Senior Real Estate Specialist (SRES) designation. The SRES professional designation was introduced in 1997 as a nationally recognized way to meet the growing market needs of American seniors.

Currently, the following Realtors have attained the SRES designation: John Balzano, Mary O'Brien, Theresa Repoff, Mitchell Rudnick and Phyllis Rudnick.

According to the Senior Advantage Real Estate Council (SAREC), nearly 80% of today's seniors in the U.S. own real estate and/or are buying new properties. And, there will be more than 65 million Americans over the age of 60 in just 15 years. Realtors who achieve the SRES title can help these clients make wise decisions about: selling the family home; buying rental property; managing capital gains and estate tax implications; obtaining a reverse mortgage; moving to a senior community and other relevant issues.

"Servicing the senior market brings some unique challenges," said Art Foley, Broker/Owner of Century 21 Annex Realty. "These customers can often afford to be highly selective, because they are making a voluntary move. Seniors can also have a very strong emotional attachment to their homes, as some have been in the same place for 20, 30 or even 40 years."

To learn more about the SRES designation, or to speak to an SRES sales associate, call Century 21 Annex Realty at 617-472-4330.

Tips To Spruce Up A Home's Exterior

(NU) When a home's exterior needs some fixing up, it can be an overwhelming task. But there are some steps that can quickly improve the look of a home.

The experts at Nailite, a manufacturer and distributor of premium residential and commercial siding, provide the following tips:

• Give the home a "facelift". Re-siding a home can dramatically change its appearance. There are innovations in siding that can transform a home from ordinary to extraordinary. For example, Nailite offers high-definition polypropylene siding that replicates the beauty of real cedar, brick and stone, yet requires less maintenance.

• Remove unwanted foliage. Clear the yard of weeds, sticks and other debris, and clip shrubs and bushes.

• Give the home a shower. A yearly cleaning with a garden hose should be sufficient. If mold is a problem in the area, use a mixture of two-parts water and one-part bleach to eliminate any traces of mold or mildew.

• Repave the driveway. A smooth, repaved driveway can easily spruce up the overall look of a home. For a more drastic change, replace the concrete driveway with slate driveway.

• Clean the windows, screens and gutters. Clean the windows on both the inside and outside, as well as the screens. There are cleaning products that can attach to an ordinary garden hose to make the task of window washing a bit easier.

• Spruce up the yard. Set the yard apart with outdoor decor such as bird feeders, sundials and fountains. Wipe off the outdoor furniture and clear patios, decks and walkways of debris. Also, remember to replace welcome mats that have worn down.

• Give the yard some flower power. Flowers bring color and aroma. Arrange them throughout the yard, near entrances and even on the mailbox.

For more information on Nailite's siding panels, call 888-300-0070 or visit www.nailite.com.

HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

Cost-Effective Ways To Cool A Home

(NU) As the temperature rises, so does the cost of cooling a home. But a new federal law may help keep the home both cool and cost-effective.

In January, the U.S. Department of Energy raised the minimum efficiency standards for air conditioners and heat pumps from 10 to 13 Seasonal Energy Efficiency Ratio (SEER). Although homeowners aren't required to replace systems that are less than 13 SEER, doing so could save 23 percent off energy bills.

Think of SEER ratings like gas mileage: The higher the SEER or miles per gallon, the more energy "mileage" a person gets. So as SEER levels rise, cooling and heating products use less energy, giving "more bang for your buck" while providing real environmental benefits through decreased energy consumption.

"The new 13 SEER standard not only conserves energy but it also reduces associated carbon dioxide emissions," said Rick Roetken, director of product marketing at Indianapolis-based Bryant Heating & Cooling Systems.

Bryant recently introduced a new line of 13 SEER models that provide savings, efficiency and comfort. The improved top-of-the-line Evolution System reaches levels of up to 20 SEER while allowing users to control heating, cooling, humidity, indoor air quality, schedules and maintenance reminders from a single, navigational source.

To keep a home cooling system at peak efficiency, Roetken recommended having it inspected at least once annually by a trained service technician.

Here are some tips to cool a home:

• Install more attic insulation. Upgrading from three inches to 12 inches can cut cooling costs by 10 percent.

• Plant a tree. One well-placed shade tree can reduce cooling costs by 25 percent. Place leafy shade trees to the south and west and evergreens to the north.

• Use ceiling and box fans to help circulate air throughout the house.

• Set the fan on a central air conditioner to "on" rather than "auto." This will circulate air continuously, keeping the temperature constant throughout the house and aiding in dehumidification.

• When using a window air conditioning unit, make sure it's the proper size. It's better to get one that's too small rather than too large. A larger unit will start up and turn off more frequently and won't do as good a job dehumidifying the air.

• Invest in a programmable thermostat.

• If the home isn't equipped with central air conditioning, try a whole-house attic fan. This device pushes hot air though the attic vents, lowering the temperature throughout the home by about five degrees in less than 10 minutes.

For more information and to find a local Bryant dealer, visit www.bryant.com or call 888-999-BRYANT. For energy cost-saving tips, visit www.epa.gov.

THIS IS A HAMMER

By Samantha Mazzotta

A Concrete Solution

Q: After reading your column about oil stains on a concrete driveway, I thought I would send you my solution. I keep a bucket of dry cement in the garage. Every time someone parks on my driveway and their car leaves a few spots of oil, I sprinkle a few spoonfuls of the dry cement on top of the oil to soak it up. After a couple of hours, I gently remove the glob, or whatever you want to call it, and sprinkle more of the cement on the spots that are left. I brush this in with a broom and leave for a couple of days. If it rains, the rain washes the remainder away, or it can be swept up and removed. I have tried them all, but this seems to be the best and the easiest solution. — Walter B., via e-mail

A. Walter, this is a great idea that I hadn't heard of before. It's important to note that the cement should be picked up within a couple of hours so that it doesn't adhere to the concrete or brick. The oil itself will help prevent the cement from adhering, but any water in the area (from high humidity, morning dew, snowmelt or lawn sprinklers) could wet the dry cement. So clean up the cement after a couple hours. If needed, apply a new coating of dry cement and pick up again, or follow Walter's advice and brush a thin layer into the stain.

As always, it's advisable to test this method on a small or inconspicuous area of the driveway before tackling larger stains. All stains should be addressed as quickly as possible to reduce the possibility of the stain becoming permanent.

MORE CONCRETE: Spring is the best time to go out and check the concrete surfaces outside your home. This includes your driveway, exterior walls, sidewalks and any other masonry out there.

Driveway and sidewalk cracks are fairly common and are caused by any number of stresses, including heat, freezing, impact and movement of the subsoil. They are relatively easy to repair.

Smaller cracks — those less than one-half-inch wide — can be fixed with vinyl-reinforced patching compound. After prepping the crack (including an application of bonding adhesive), trowel the compound into the crack and feather it even with the surface. This type of compound also works well when patching vertical surfaces, like walls or steps. Just apply the compound in layers and feather smooth with the old surface.

Presidents In Postseason For First Time

By CHRIS POISSON

BOYS' LACROSSE

The Quincy High School boys' lacrosse team has evolved from a green group to a seasoned squad heading to the postseason for the first time in the program's three-year existence.

The Presidents created history last Wednesday when they routed New Bedford, 12-1, at Varsity Field to earn a berth in the Division 1 Eastern Mass. tournament. They followed that performance with an 11-5 victory over Nauset last Friday at home.

"We won one game our first year, to 8-10 last year and right now we're 10-3 and in the tournament," said head coach Kevin Orcutt. "Pretty much 90 percent of the kids never played lacrosse before."

"We just keep the game simple," he added. "We work hard in practice and the kids take a lot of pride in that. The biggest thing is the parallels from the other sports they play. We have a lot of hockey players and football players."

Six players have been with the program since its inception: Seniors Chris McDonald, Steve Bythrow, Brian Smith, Alex Mendez and Timur Amerikhanov and junior Jonathan Conso.

"They're the founding fathers," Orcutt said.

An independent team, Quincy (10-3 overall) squared off against rival North Quincy Tuesday and will host Medford today (Thursday) and Sandwich Friday, both games starting at 4 p.m. at Varsity Field.

Against Nauset, Bythrow, an attacker, netted five goals with a pair of assists and Conso, an attacker, tallied three goals with two assists. McDonald recorded eight saves in goal.

In the New Bedford game, second-year defensemen Chris Pratt, Jimmy Aikens and Steve Graham played well in front of McDonald.

"Our defense is the core of the team right now," Orcutt said. "Those three are in their second year and they started from the get-go last year."

Offensively, Bythrow netted five goals with three assists and sophomore attacker Marty Bowes tallied three goals with three assists.

"The kids are doing very well," Orcutt said. "We have a great group of new kids this year. We have 29 kids in the program and 17 freshmen and sophomores."

North Quincy Splits Pair On Cape

SOFTBALL

The North Quincy High School softball team split a pair of games on the Cape last week in the Atlantic Coast League.

The Red Raiders cruised to a 12-5 win at Sandwich last Monday and dropped a 9-3 decision at Nauset last Thursday.

NQ (3-5 overall, 1-5 Atlantic Coast League) played Madison Park Wednesday, and will host Falmouth today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. and travel to Plymouth South Friday at 4 p.m.

Against Sandwich, the Red Raiders erupted for seven runs in the first inning. Freshman Siobhan Carnell powered the offense, going 3-for-5 with five RBI and three runs scored. Her bases-clearing triple in the seventh inning broke open a 7-5 game.

Sophomore Simone Leary had a hit, walked three times, scored three runs and knocked in a run. Sophomore Kasey O'Connell had two RBI and sophomore Paige Bonanni added a two-out, two-run single.

Bonanni also picked up the win on the mound, allowing four earned runs on five hits in a complete-game performance.

"It felt good," said head coach Mike Connor. "We had a great game. Everything game together. We had good pitching, great defense and strong hitting."

In the Nauset game, the Red Raiders were undone by a handful of mental errors. The Warriors pushed across six runs in the third inning, five of those runs coming with two outs.

"We really could've won that game," Connor said. "We had 16 hits and only scored three runs. Our hits weren't timely and they made big plays when they had to. We hit the ball great, but we had a lot of mental errors."

Carnell had an RBI single that scored Leary, senior Jessica Mann a two-out RBI single and sophomore Kerry Coughlin went 3-for-4.

Quincy Falls To Nauset, 5-2

BASEBALL

The Quincy High School baseball team suffered a 5-2 loss at Nauset last Monday in its only game of the week.

The Presidents (2-10 overall, 0-6 Atlantic Coast League) played Plymouth South Wednesday, and will host Dennis-Yarmouth today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. in a makeup game and will head to Whitman-Hanson Friday at 4 p.m.

Monday's home game against Sandwich was rescheduled to Tuesday on the Cape or possibly Saturday.

In the game against the Warriors, junior Steve Connolly made his first start of the season and turned in a strong outing, giving up just one earned run as the defense committed several costly errors behind him.

"He pitched well enough to win," said head coach Mike Draicchio. "We made a few mistakes and they capitalized by scoring runs on our errors. He had very good control and kept them off-balance. He pitched as well as anyone has for us all year."

Sophomore Mike Lebel started his second game behind the plate in place of junior John Alexander, who is out for the season with an injury.

Lebel banged out two doubles and scored a run and Connolly also had two hits. Steve Kussman had an RBI single and senior Joe Griffin had a hit and is one of the top hitters in the ACL with a .424 batting average.

"The younger guys are coming through for us at the moment," Draicchio said. "We played well. We had an opportunity to win the game."

Tiant Golf Tourney For Diabetes At Granite Links May 22

The American Diabetes Association will host the first annual Luis Tiant Swing for Diabetes Golf Tournament Monday, May 22, at Granite Links Golf Club.

Shotgun start begins at 10 a.m. followed by a cocktail reception and honor ceremony for Luis Tiant, former Boston Red Sox pitching legend who has type 2 diabetes.

Several past and present sports celebrities and legends, including Jim Rice, Sam Horn, Jim Corsi, Jerry Moses, Andre Tippett, Lyden Byers and many more, will be on the fairway with Tiant to chip in the fight against diabetes.

"This tournament celebrates sportsmanship and recognizes all people touched by diabetes," said Tiant's son, Luis Jr. "The team spirit displayed at this event will represent a larger group effort to fight the disease and find a cure."

Diabetes is a chronic disease that has no cure. There are an estimated 20.8 million children and adults in the United States, or 7 percent of the population, who have diabetes. While an estimated 14.6 million have been diagnosed, unfortunately, 6.2 million people are not aware that they have the disease.

To sign up a foursome or join as a corporate sponsor, call Joanne Bean at 1-800-676-4065, ext. 3455. The American Diabetes Association is the nation's leading voluntary health organization supporting diabetes research, information and advocacy.

The association's mission is to prevent and cure diabetes and to improve the lives of all people affected by diabetes. For more information, visit www.diabetes.org or call the American Diabetes Association at 1-800-DIABETES (1-800-342-2383).

IS THERE A HYBRID IN YOUR FUTURE?

High fuel prices and federal government tax incentives have given a real boost to interest in hybrid vehicles, which combine an electronic motor and battery pack to a gasoline engine. With the added power provided by the electric motor, the hybrid's gasoline engine does not have to be as large as its conventional counterpart. The electric motor supplies considerable low-end torque for acceleration, and the batteries charge while driving or during "regenerative braking" (which converts the vehicle's kinetic energy into electric energy). Because a hybrid does not rely solely on the gasoline engine for acceleration, it can be temporarily shut off to conserve fuel at stops. The gas engine can also be optimized to work more efficiently at higher speeds.

Today's informative column on Hybrid technology is brought to you by the automotive experts at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, we are proud of our outstanding reputation serving the community, and their automotive needs. You can trust us, and we guarantee your satisfaction with any service we provide. Call 781-843-1550 with any questions. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: Because a hybrid vehicle largely relies on its electronic motor for city driving, its EPA fuel economy estimates are likely higher for city driving than for highway driving.

Quincy Youth Hockey Kids Attend Marine Mammal Safari

A group of young players and their coach from Quincy Youth Hockey's Rep. Bruce Ayers team recently attended the annual Marine Mammal Safari trip sponsored by Save the Harbor/Save the Bay.

They joined more than 500 people who ventured to Outer Brewster Island in the Boston Harbor Islands National Park to see the seals and porpoises that mark springtime in Boston Harbor.

"I commend Save the Harbor/Save the Bay for inviting my office to help coordinate the participation of Quincy students and their families in the Marine Mammal Safari," Ayers said. "The students from the hockey team that I sponsor very much enjoyed the trip."

"It's great to be able to provide so many different kids with recreational opportunities on our harbor," said Lauren Thirer, Save the Harbor's Youth Program director. "There are just so many kids that don't have the opportunity to take advantage of this great place, and we're trying to fix that."

Alysia DiMuzio On Softball All-Conference Team

Alysia DiMuzio of Quincy earned second team all-conference honors as a freshman designated hitter on the Curry College softball team.

The Quincy High School graduate finished sixth in the Commonwealth Coast Conference in batting (.388), second in hits (54), second in home runs (12), second in RBI (36), first in total bases (100), sixth in on-base percentage (.433) and second in slugging percentage (.719).

Curry finished the season with a 26-19 overall record, losing to Endicott College in the league championship game, 7-4.

John Fidalgo Baseball Standout For Johnson & Wales

North Quincy High School graduate John Fidalgo enjoyed the best season of his career, and one of the best in recent school history, for the Johnson & Wales University baseball team.

A unanimous selection to the all-conference first team, Fidalgo led the team and was at the top of the Great Northeast Athletic Conference (GNAC) in nearly every offensive category this season.

He finished the year with career highs in every offensive category. He was in the top five in the conference in batting average (.359), RBI (35), runs (37), hits (56) and on-base percentage (.433).Fidalgo was also selected to the GNAC All-Tournament team. He went 6-for-15 in the conference tournament with six RBI and seven runs scored. He belted the game-winning single in the 12th inning of the semifinal contest against Suffolk University. He also added a home run and three RBI in the championship game.

In his fours years with the program, the team posted a 101-44 record. The Wildcats reached the conference championship game in 2004 and 2006, and captured the ECAC championship in 2004.

Fidalgo played high school baseball under coach Larry Taglieri and Legion ball for coach Mark Jaehnig of Quincy Legion.

He will be graduating this month with a bachelor's degree in sports management. Following graduation, he will be interning with the Mahoning Valley Scrappers, Single A affiliate of the Cleveland Indians.

Bernazzani Bests Montclair In Dunn Tournament

Retired North Quincy High School boys' basketball coach Ted Stevenson returned to his roots to guide Bernazzani to the city championship in the Quincy Recreation Department's recent annual George Dunn Basketball Tournament for high school participants.

Bernazzani defeated a strong Montclair team, 39-29, in the final, which featured well-played defense with only two players reaching double figures.

Michael Horgan scored 10 points to lead Bernazzani, which used a balanced attack and looked for high-percentage shots. It did not make a 3-pointer as it spread Montclair's defense.

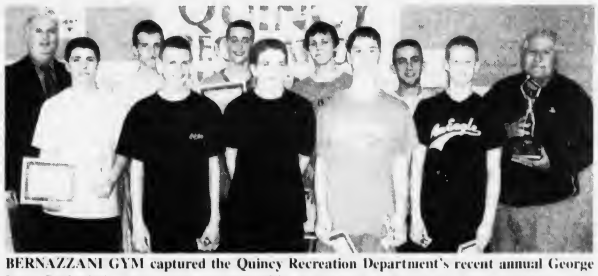
Stephen Barry, Kyle Tobin and Sean Pekinnen each had six points. Nick Mullaney had four first-half points, Jason Stearns had four and Tyler Costa three. Stevenson praised David Atkins' rebounding and Tim Brown's defense.

For Montclair, Raymond Fang netted 10 points, Billy Constanapoulas eight, Chang Zeng seven and Andy Ng two.

Coached by veteran Dean Zoia, the young squad couldn't take advantage of its size but got strong rebounding from Adam Huang and Alex Huang, solid playmaking from Kirakos Kalapakidlis and outstanding man-to-man defense from Simon Yeung.

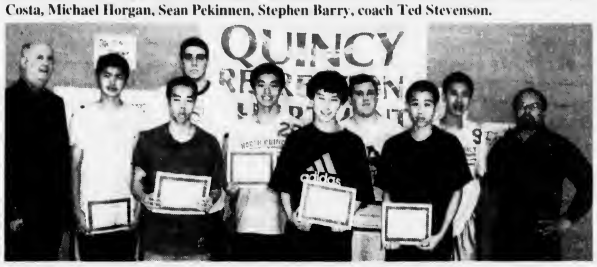
TED STEVENSON (right) accepts the Quincy Recreation Department's George Dunn Basketball Tournament Trophy from Recreation Director Barry Welch as coach of Bernazzani, champion of the high school division.

In games advancing to the final, Montclair knocked off Squantum, 48-29. Constanapoulas scored 16 points and Zeng buried four 3-pointers. Adam Huang had eight first-half points.



For Squantum, Rob Dolbec poured in 21 points. Matt Gibson and Nick Couture each had 3-pointers and Brian McLean added two points. James Flaherty and Jonathan Brooks led the Mike Curtin-coached team in rebounds with Zack Deegan and Dylan Thorton playing strong defense.

Bernazzani survived to advance by beating Atlantic, 48-44, on its home court as Horgan and Mullaney each scored 15 points.



For Atlantic, Phi Nguyen scored a game-high 16 points, including four 3-pointers. Albert Luv had nine points, including two 3's, Phuoc Nguyen and George Ryan six apiece, Ray Selazar five and John Kurpeski two.

Sterling coach Pat Dooley saw his team fall behind early to Montclair in a 41-29 loss. James Wilson had 10 second-half points and Dannell White had three 3-pointers to keep Sterling alive until late in the game. Anthony Martins and Steven Shattuck each had two while Steve McNally and his brother Shane each canned a 3-pointer.

The annual tournament marked the end of the Quincy Recreation Department's winter gym program, which has been conducted for more than 40 years. Participants come from recreation programs throughout the city and are in grades 9-12 and can not have played for a high school varsity team.

In 1997, the tournament was named by the Park and Recreation Board for George Dunn, a loyal and dedicated member of the recreation staff who was stricken with cancer. Dunn presented the first Dunn championship in 1998 and died later that year.

In making the presentation to Stevenson, Recreation Director Barry Welch recognized that Dunn and Stevenson were good friends who worked together with Quincy youth in both basketball and baseball for many years.

Welch presented trophies to Bernazzani and certificates to Montclair. During the winter program, Stevenson was assisted by Meghan Foley and Katherine Shea while Zoia worked with Caitlin Foley, Andrew Dwan and Jerry Pratt.

SPRING CAR CARE

Keeping A New Car Look

(NAPS) One of the best things about owning a new car is its smooth, shiny "showroom" look. Maintaining that look, by washing and waxing a car regularly and touching up any scratches, can keep it looking new longer.

Fortunately, the latest cars are finished with a high-tech process that makes it easier for car owners to maintain that new-car look. Many cars on the market today have a powder coated finish that helps protect them from chips and scratches, as well as damage caused by UV rays, harsh weather, salt spray and acid rain.

A clearcoat can protect the car's high-gloss finish, which keeps a car looking new longer.

Several of America's can manufacturers have discovered that this technique offers man advantages over liquid paint. The environmentally friendly finishing process eliminates the need for costly waste-disposal equipment and oversprayed powder particles can be recovered and reused.

Some of the manufacturers using this process include GM, Chrysler, BMW, Volvo, Lincoln, Chevrolet, Mercedes-Benz and Dodge. Every bit of exposed metal in DaimlerChrysler's European Smart Car has been power coated.

It's not just the outside of the cars that benefits from powder coating. As well as having an exterior clearcoat, many new cars also have powder coated decorative wheels, hubcaps and trim. It's even used on truck beds, door handles and engine parts.

It isn't only car manufacturers that have discovered the process. It's found on thousands of home and garden products, as well as sporting goods, recreational vehicles and office furniture and equipment.

It has become a universally preferred method of finishing for all the same reasons it has been so enthusiastically adopted by car manufacturers.

Repowering Rather Than Trading

(NU) Although car trouble and maintenance costs may make it tempting to get rid of a vehicle in favor of a new car, repwowering the original set of wheels may make much more sense in the long run, according to the Engine Repower Council and the Car Care Council.

"When a car or truck suffers major engine damage, often the first reaction of most consumers is to buy a new or used vehicle," said Rick Miller, ERC chairman. "In some cases that might make sense, but often it's simply not necessary. And it's a very expensive proposition compared to repowering your car or truck's worn-out engine with a rebuilt/remanufactured engine."

A rebuilt engine has been remanufactured to prescribed specifications by highly skilled machinists using state-of-the-art equipment and components. During this process, may new components are installed that meet or exceed original equipment performance standards. Frequently, rebuilt engines are better than the engines installed in a new vehicle because better parts are used, or design changes are made to correct problems with the original engine.

If concerned about how a recycled engine will affect gas mileage, know that not only do rebuilt engines get better gas mileage than a worn-out engine, but they emit fewer pollutants. Engine repowering also saves the tremendous amount of energy used in processing discarded engines and vehicles. It also saves raw materials that would have been used in building a new engine.

The savings from engine repowering are especially evident when comparing against the prices of new vehicles, which have an average sticker price of $27,958. A rebuilt/remanufactured engine purchased and installed at an average cost of $2,500 to $3,500 can be a good investment.

A professionally rebuilt engine is typically guaranteed for at least one year or 12,000 miles, with some remanufacturers offering warranties as long as 36 months or 36,000 miles.

Check with local service providers for information on their rebuilt engines and warranty programs.

For more information on the ERC and where to find qualified rebuilt engines and installation providers, visit www.enginerepower.org.

FROM START TO FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Short Workout Is Better Than None

Q. Due to my unpredictable schedule, I often have only 30 minutes for my exercise routine, which is supposed to take an hour. Sometimes I don't even bother to exercise because I don't think 30 minutes is enough time to really do anything. Is there a workout I can finish in just 30 minutes?

A. Thirty minutes of exercise is better than no minutes of exercise. Although you may have an exercise routine that should take one hour, condensing your workout to 30 minutes when necessary is possible and can keep you on track toward your fitness goals. Try to stay active and on a schedule, even if it is for a shorter amount of time.

For starters, commit to exercising three days a week. Not only will it keep you on track, but it can keep you motivated to continue to exercise instead of waiting until you have an hour to commit to your workout.

A great way to condense your workout is to complete a true circuit, which incorporates back-to-back weight training and cardiovascular exercise. For example, after a short warm-up, you can complete a leg press for one set and 12 repetitions, then between sets when you would normally be waiting to start the next set, you can complete two minutes of cardio, such as the bike or treadmill, at a high intensity. While your heart rate is still raised, continue to the next set on the leg press. Move from exercise to cardio and back until you have completed your entire weight circuit. Do this two out of the three days a week you are exercising. (Also, remember to allow muscle groups to rest a day in between workouts.)

Make the remaining day of exercise an all-cardiovascular day. Use your 30 minutes to complete an aerobic workout, either by a machine such as the treadmill or bike, swimming, or walking, running or cycling outside. Try interval training, which varies your heart rate throughout your workout to make it more difficult. Challenge yourself to work hard for the entire 30 minutes.

It may take a few workout sessions to master completing a circuit in 30 minutes, but it can be done. During the three days you work out, stick with exercises you are comfortable with, and use great form and technique. Don't compromise safety just to complete your routine. When you have the time for your full one-hour workout, do it. But on the days you're pressed for time, use the condensed 30-minute workout to keep moving toward your fitness goals.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kfws@hearstsc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

THE NEED FOR ANTIBIOTICS

If you are about to undergo certain dental procedures, patients with prosthetic joints may need to take antibiotics. While patients may not immediately see any link between the two, it needs to be understood that bacteria from the mouth may migrate through the bloodstream and take up residence near artificial joints. For this reason, antibiotics may be needed in conjunction with any dental procedure that causes bleeding. This includes such procedures as tooth extraction, root-scaling procedures, and even the injection of anesthetics. Please make your dentist aware that you have undergone joint-replacement surgery, so that a proper determination about antibiotics can be made. Patients should volunteer this information if they are not asked.

Have you undergone joint replacement surgery? Are you taking antibiotics? We believe in preventive dentistry. We know that you wish to receive your general dental care from a highly trained, caring staff; therefore, professionalism is very important to you. Our promise to you is that our office will provide you with dental care of the highest quality available, utilizing the most modern procedures and an extremely qualified staff. Please call 617-479-6220 today to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Talk to your dentist about the possible need for antibiotics if you have undergone heart-valve surgery.

A Job Well Done

On May 10, Officers Matt Tobin and A.J. Carthas were dispatched to the 7-11 Store on Copeland Street to investigate a report of an unruly customer who spit in the clerk's face.

As the officers responded, they learned the suspect, described as a male with a red hooded sweatshirt, left the store on foot towards Buckley Street.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Tobin located the suspect about 50 feet away from the store. He asked the suspect if there was a problem with the clerk in the store and he replied there was an argument after the clerk refused to sell him cigarettes without identification.

The suspect denied spitting in the clerk's face and agreed to return to the store so the matter could be straightened out. As soon as they entered the store, the clerk exclaimed the suspect was the man who spit in his face.

Officer Carthas interviewed all parties involved and the clerk decided he did not want to press charges on the assault and battery, which was good news for the suspect, who was ready to walk away.

Unfortunately for him, Officer Tobin learned the suspect had an outstanding warrant from Brockton District Court. The suspect was placed under arrest for the warrant and then searched.

To compound matters for the suspect, Officer Carthas found a white plastic bag with approximately a half an ounce of marijuana-like substance in the suspect's sock. The suspect, a 19-year-old Quincy male, was charged with "Possession of Class D Drug" and the outstanding warrant. Nice work!

Parents Responsibility For New Teen Drivers

By CAITLIN POWERS

With the end of the school year rapidly approaching, many new teen drivers are on the road. A driver's license comes with great responsibility. Here are some tips to assure your teen driver is as prepared as possible:

• When teaching your teen how to drive, remember to point things out as they happen and make sure your teen understands. Remember to stay relaxed when giving instructions and pointing out faults. After all, we don't want the driver to feel any more tension than necessary.

• Instill safety belt use in your child throughout their life and by the time they are ready to drive alone, using their safety belt will be a habit. Parents can also link belt use to graduated driving privileges and make the teen pay any fines they incur as a result of not using safety belts.

• Remind your teen to always keep both hands on the wheel while driving. Avoid using a cell phone while behind the wheel. Change the radio at stop lights. It only takes a split second for an accident to occur.

• Driving education is a continuous process. It is important to continue follow-up ride-a-longs to assess their driving skills.

• Teach your teen to drive defensively, anticipating conditions and situations that increase risk.

• Above all else, remind your teen that driving is a privilege and not a right.

Following such guidelines and tips will help to assure that your teen is ready to drive on their own. Additional information and assistance for preparing your teen driver can be found online at www.cartips.com.

Franchisees Kick-Off First Food Drive

Dunkin' Donuts To Help Collect Donations For The Germantown Neighborhood Center Food Pantry

Dunkin' Donuts Franchisees Victor and Octavio Carvalho are teaming up with the Germantown Neighborhood Center (GNC) to collect non-perishable food items for the local GNC Food Pantry.

From Memorial Day, May 29 through Labor Day, Sept. 4, all Quincy Dunkin' Donuts will offer its patrons a free Dunkin' Smoothie, the newest beverage debuting this summer, in exchange for each donated non-perishable food item. With the need for food at its highest in Massachusetts, the Carvalhos hope to collect enough donations to replenish the supply in the GNC Food Pantry.

"Last year my brother and I read an article that named the Germantown area of Quincy one of the hungriest in Massachusetts," said Victor Carvalho. "Once we had that information, we immediately began planning a food drive for the area with the hopes of keeping their names off that list for good."

The Germantown Neighborhood Center is a private, non-profit organization. The programs spearheaded by Kathy Quigley, director of the Germantown Neighborhood Center supports families of low to moderate income who are in need by providing nutritious meals and gifts, as well as confidential advocacy, crisis intervention and counseling services to area residents.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A once-harmonious relationship appears to be hitting some sour notes. Spend some time together to see why things have gone off-key. What you learn might surprise you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You feel a need to make some changes. Good — you can do it on a small scale (some new clothes, for example), or go big and redecorate your home and/or office.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Control your tendency toward early boredom. A situation in your life might be taking a long time to develop, but patience pays off. Stay with it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might feel that you're on an emotional roller coaster this week. Don't fret; just ride it out and let things settle down. A Pisces shows understanding.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Do something different for once — compromise. A stubborn stand on an important issue proves counterproductive. You need to be open to new ideas.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A friend offers advice that you perceive as an act of betrayal. But before you turn against the messenger, pay attention to the message.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A year of riding an emotional pogo stick finally settles down. Use this calmer period to restore frayed relationships and to pursue new opportunities.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your words can sting, so be careful how you respond to a friend's actions. A calm approach could produce some surprising facts.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Be careful about whose secrets you're being asked to keep. They could impose an unfair burden on a straight arrow like you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) While you prefer taking the tried-and-true course in life, be adventurous this week and accept a challenge that can open new vistas.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your strong sense of justice helps you deal with a job- or school-related situation. Stay with your principles. A Sagittarius emerges as a supporter.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You need to build a stronger on-the-job support system to convince doubting colleagues that your innovative proposals are workable.

BORN THIS WEEK: You might not say much, but you're capable of extraordinary achievements. You are a loyal friend and a devoted family person.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

RELIGION

Covenant Congregational Organ Concert Sunday

The Covenant Congregational church of Quincy will hold its second annual Memorial Organ Concert Sunday, May 21 at 2 p.m., in the church sanctuary, 315 Whitwell St., Quincy.

The concert is in memory of W. Richard Smith. This year's selections will be played by Joel Davidson, Peter Krasinski and Edwin Leach.

Davidson, a Quincy resident, studied piano and organ under many teachers, including Mildred Zucker. Since 1977, Davidson has played for many churches and synagogues in the Boston area. Currently the organist at St. Brendan Catholic Church in Dorchester, he previously served a summer organist at Covenant Congregational Church.

Krasinski is a conductor, organist, and music educator. For 12 years he was the organist and music director at United Parish in Brookline. He is currently director of Choral Arts at Beaver Country Day School in Chestnut Hill and artistic director of Youth pro Musica, the Greater Boston Youth Chorus.

Krasinski is organist at First Church of Christ, Scientist in Providence, and Beth El Temple Center Synagogue in Belmont. He holds a bachelor of music degree in music education and organ performance, and the master of sacred music degree from Boston University.

Leach has had an avocation of church service playing for about 45 years. He has been engaged as an organist and music director in a number of churches – many on the South Shore. His training has come through experience and private lessons on piano and organ.

In the late 1960s, Leach contacted Richard Smith for instruction in organ playing. Mainly because of the ease in practicing, he switched after a while to the piano. He studied with Smith for at least a decade.

Leach served as interim organist and choir director for two years at Covenant.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

PERSONALITY TIP: Let's start today to change our lives by doing something different or something thoughtful for others each day. Look for a smile - and return it. You'll never know how far this one little gesture may travel . . .

Some people have personalities that spread greeting all over the place. The smile they give us as we pass them on the street, the wave of the hand as their car passes our house. The way they walk into a group - say something with a smile, pat somebody on the back. . .

Granted, sometimes a backslapper can become a nuisance. The guy that's always grinning can make himself tiresome. But the person who has the art of dispensing greetings and making everybody feel cheerful if only for a few moments is a person we never get tired of meeting.

Some people don't take life seriously enough, and some people take it too seriously. But if we can dispel a little of the world's gloom we are making ourselves useful and beloved. We sure could use more of the wide grin!

'Mock Drunk Driving Accident Scenario' At QHS

The Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit recently held a "Mock Drunk Driving Accident Scenario" at Quincy High School.

The scenario is part of the departments' ongoing "Consequences" program aimed at high school students, underage drinking and driving while intoxicated. The Quincy Fire Department and Fallon Ambulance joined the Police Department in the simulation.

After the scenario was completed, the students were brought into the auditorium, where a Norfolk County Assistant District Attorney spoke about the penalties and consequences of drunk driving/vehicular homicide offenses.

Lynn CiPullo, a Victim/Witness Advocate and graduate of Quincy High School, then spoke about the impact vehicular homicide has on the families of the defendant and the victim.

The third prong of the "Consequences" program was a guest speaker who was directly involved in a drunk driving incident. The Norfolk County Sheriff's Office arranged to have an inmate, serving time for vehicular homicide, transported to the high school, where he spoke of his incident and how drastically "the one bad decision"

Woodward Avenue Focus Of QHS Meeting Tonight

By MIKAELA SLANEY

A meeting to update neighbors on construction plans for a new Quincy High School on Faxon Field at Woodward Avenue will be tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. in the Quincy High School auditorium.

"The meeting was called by City Council President Douglas Gutro and Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly.

The design, which was recently approved by the School Committee, will necessitate closing the portion of Woodward Avenue between Huntley Road and Coddington Street. The School Committee has petitioned the City Council to discontinue the use of this section of Woodward Avenue for construction purposes.

The meeting will answer questions relating to traffic, parking, drainage, lighting, green space and more, with most questions pertaining to the effects of closing Woodward Avenue, said Gutro.

Representatives from the administration and project consultants have been asked to make a presentation at this meeting. Members of the School Committee will be invited to the meeting.

"This is the first time the neighbors received an architectural design (of the new school)," said Gutro.

The body of the 43-year-old Quincy City Hall custodian was found behind the Thomas Crane Public Library by a man who was walking his dog on the morning of Aug. 3, 2002.

225 Graduate At Commencement

Quincy College Honors Regan, White, Delahunt, Bellotti

Quincy College graduated 225 students from more than 60 Massachusetts communities and 27 countries Saturday, heard an address by publicist George K. Regan Jr. and received an unheralded visit from former Boston Mayor Kevin H. White.

Regan, a Quincy native and a graduate of Quincy College, Class of 1970, was given the first annual Distinguished Alumnus Award and White, Congressman Bill Delahunt and former Attorney General Frank Bellotti were presented Distinguished Service Awards.

Regan, who served as press secretary for White before founding his own public relations firm, told the graduates. "It takes a lot of hard work," then noting the Boston skyline from the clubhouse at Granite Links Country Club, he pointed to White, saying, "He built that."

Theresa Lord-Piatelli, chairwoman of the Board of Governors, applauded the graduates for their persistence and reminded them of the impact their hard work has had on the entire college community. "You have inspired us," she said.

President Sue Harris, in turn, praised Lord-Piatelli as "a tireless leaders who has brought stability back to the college."

The student speaker, Christian de Torres, noted that "the diversity here — not just of age or ethnicity, but of ideas and perspectives — that are shared in the classroom is something I will truly miss."

The list of the 225 graduates appeared in last week's edition of The Quincy Sun.

Landmark Alfredo's Restaurant Has New Owner

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

One of Quincy's landmark restaurants has been sold.

Alfredo's Restaurant on Franklin St., one of the favorite Italian eateries in the city, has been sold to Ellen Ventouris, who with her family, hopes to continue the fine tradition.

The License Board Tuesday voted unanimously in favor of the sale of the restaurant from Christos Chronos, who has owned it since 1978, and whose sister Ekaterini "Katrina" Koumentakos will remain as manager as she has for the past 26 years.

Ventouris told the board that her family has owned Emilio's Pizza in Boston for more than 25 years. She said nothing will change - the name of the restaurant and the hours of operation as well as the menu will remain the same.

Atty. Mark Gildea, counsel said when asked about the menu said, "if it ain't broken, don't fix it." He said it would take between five and six weeks before receiving approval from the Alcohol Beverage Control Commission, (ABCC).

Chairman Joseph Shea said we've all had an "excellent relationship" with Alfredo's and the family. He said they have always done a "terrific job" and has always been consistent with their great food. He said they have never had any problems with he serving of alcohol.

When asked how he felt about selling the restaurant after almost 30 years, Chronos said "it's very hard, but added he did it for "health reasons."

Ventouris said she hoped to open immediately upon approval from the ABCC.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On May 28, 1902, Owen Wister's "The Virginian" is published by Macmillan Press. It was the first "serious" Western and one of the most influential in the genre. The book became a sensation almost overnight, selling more than 1.5 million copies by 1938.

• On May 27, 1927, production of the Ford Model T officially ended after 15,007,033 units had been built. The Model T sold more units than any other car model in history, until the Volkswagen Beetle eclipsed its record in the 1970s.

• On May 23, 1934, famed fugitives Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker are killed in a police ambush near Sailes, La. Officers from Texas and Louisiana set up along the highway, waiting for Bonnie and Clyde to appear, and then killed the couple during a two-minute fusillade in which 187 bullets were fired at their car.

• On May 24, 1941, Germany's largest battleship, the Bismarck, sinks the pride of the British fleet, HMS Hood, northeast of Iceland in the North Atlantic. Only three British sailors survived out of a crew of some 1,500.

Same-Sex Marriages On Decline?

There was a rush to city and town clerks offices two years ago when same-sex marriages were legalized.

In Quincy, 17 same-sex couples applied for wedding licenses on the first day of eligibility.

On that same day, just two heterosexual couples applied.

SHEA

City Clerk Joseph Shea noted that it was the most license applicants he had seen in a single day since taking office in 1992. Previous high: 11.

By the end of that first year – 2004 – 47 same-sex couples had applied for licenses: 26 male and 21 female.

That's 47 in seven months.

But are same-sex marriages now on the decline?

Figures compiled by Brenda Fernandez and Carol Damiano of Shea's Vital Statistics Department would seem to indicate so. At least in this area.

In 2005 – for the full 12 months – there were 24 same-sex applications, a drop of 23 from the seven months in 2004. Seventeen of those were female and seven male.

The number appears to be still dropping.

Going into May of this year, there have been only eight same-sex marriage applications: five female and three male. That's half as many as the same period last year, when there were 16: 10 female and six male.

Total applications so far since that official first day in 2004: 79. Forty-three female and 36 male.

Not all of the applicants are Quincy residents but most seem to be. Anyone from Massachusetts can apply in Quincy. And anyone from Quincy can apply anywhere in Massachusetts.

There appears to be no favorite month for same-sex marriages. The months seem pretty much scattered in popularity. June, a traditional heterosexual favorite, seems to be just another month.

Although the numbers are down here in Quincy, the enthusiasm of same-sex couples and supporters i not.

A Second Anniversary Celebration of same-sex marriages in Massachusetts was held last week at historic United First Parish Church.

The event was sponsored by South Shore Marriage For All, advocates of gay marriage and an affiliate of Mass Equality.

The celebration included an anniversary cake, coffee and anniversary gifts.

Can't help but wonder what Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, Abigail and Louisa, who are entombed in the crypt of the church, would think if they were living today.

But, we do know where Rev. Sheldon Bennett, minister of the church, stands on the issue.

BENNETT

"It was a joy to celebrate the anniversary," he says. "We celebrate the marriage equality that we have today and recognize the importance for all couples to have their commitment to each other recognized and protected by the state."

Bennett adds:

"We're concerned about the effort to amend the constitution to deny marriage equality."

Meanwhile, the 34-by-4 foot banner proclaiming "People of Faith For Marriage Equality" remains displayed on the front of the church.

The city approved a 60-day display period which will expire at the end of May.

Opponents of same-sex marriages are pressing for a constitutional amendment to ban such marriages. Proponents are pressing back to keep them.

State legislators are scheduled to vote July 12 on whether to advance the proposed amendment.

At least 50 lawmakers have to approve the amendment in the current legislative session and again the next before the proposal can go on the ballot in 2008.

Same-sex marriages became legal on a 4-3 vote by the Supreme Judicial Court.

That's a one-vote margin squeaker.

It would be interesting to see how the people of Massachusetts would vote – to ban or not to ban.

And, by what kind of margin.

Blood Drive June 1 At Beechwood Center

The Beechwood On The Bay Community Center will host its second annual blood drive with Brigham and Women's Hospital, Thursday June 1.

The blood drive will be from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the gymnasium at Beechwood Community Center, 440 East Squantum St. Call 617-471-5712, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. for information or to book an appointment to donate. For questions pertaining to eligibility in donating blood, call the Brigham and Women's Blood Donor Center at 617-732-6620.

One in three people in their lifetime will require a blood transfusion. Cancer patients, newborns in the intensive care unit, and trauma victims are just a few examples of who relies on blood donations from healthy volunteers.

The Brigham and Woman's Blood Donor Center is a member of the Joint Program in Transfusion Medicine. This is a unique blood donor program shared by Brigham & Women's Hospital, a whole blood collection facility and the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute's Kraft Family Blood Donor Center, a platelet collection facility. Together they provide essential blood products for patients cared for in both institutions. The need for donors is great, and there is no substitute for human blood.

THIS IS A 1920's trade card used by the Merrymount Company, the real estate developers of the 200-plus acre Mount Wollaston Farm that was the estate of John Quincy Adams II and his wife, Fanny Crowinshield. He was the son of Ambassador Charles Francis Adams and the grandson of President John Quincy Adams for whom he was named. Abigail Adams had inherited this land from her uncle Norton Quincy in 1800, and it was passed down to her heirs. J.Q. Adams II built his sprawling home here in 1872. After he died, the developers bought the land from his heirs just as WWI began. They started building houses in the spring of 1920 offering the first 25 at $5,500 to $6,000 each. Houses and lots sold fast; they tore down the Adams' house in 1925. Today, there are hundreds of nice houses in this very desirable section of Quincy. Pilgrim Boulevard, mentioned on the card, was the section of Quincy Shore Drive between Black's Creek and Sea Street that was built through the estate. The original state highway plan for this road called for a bridge over Sea Street connecting the Boulevard through the edge of Broad Meadows to Field Street continuing south on the path of today's Southern Artery. The bridge was too expensive and was never built. The house shown here was built in 1920 on the corner of Quincy Shore Drive and Samoset Avenue. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Hancock St. Park Gets Favorable Reaction

Week of May 25

By FRANK McCAULEY

A national urban park proposal by businessman and candidate for mayor Peter O'Connell received mainly favorable reactions when presented for input to some 50 persons following a meeting of the Quincy Historic District Commission.

The $10 million proposal calls for a park to include City Hall, the First Parish Church, McIntyre Mall and the Hancock Cemetery with trees, ornamental lighting along with grass areas and flower beds.

Streets and sidewalks in the area would be upgraded while Hancock Street between City Hall and the First Parish Church would be closed and landscaped. Joyce Baker, chairperson of the Historic District Commission, noted the commission was "impressed" with the park proposal by O'Connell.

SLUDGE TREATMENT PLANT DISCUSSED

The pros and cons for construction of a sludge treatment facility at the Fore River Shipyard was discussed by all five mayoral candidates at a Candidates Night held at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School.

Attending were Councillors Stephen McGrath and James Sheets, former Mayor Joseph LaRaia, Quincy businessman Peter O'Connell and political newcomer William Jensen.

$12 MILLION COMMERCIAL PROJECT PLANNED

Quincy developer Richard Buccheri announced he would seek to build a $12 million commercial project on the Southern Artery site of the former Duane salvage yard.

As part of the project, Buccheri agreed to put the 77-year-old carousel, formerly located in the rear of Houghs Neck, later occupied by the Great Hill School and operated by the DeAngelis family of Houghs Neck between 1940 and 1956, in one of the buildings on the eight acre site that borders the Town River. Restoration of the carousel is expected to take up to one year at a cost of $175,000.

Cross The Affordable Housing Threshold

According to a recent news report, a study commissioned by City Hall states the city of Quincy has reached the state's affordable housing threshold and the mayor says developers can no longer use 40B projects as threats against the city to get their way.

According to the city, a review by administration officials has found that Quincy has affordable housing on a 2.8 percent of its buildable land and meets a standard set by Chapter 40B which promotes affordable housing.

Quincy has affordable housing on 143 of the available 5,100 acres of land. Nothing surely to brag about.

This means that Quincy can now encourage luxury housing, oops, isn't that a reason that affordable housing occupies 2.8 percent of the city's buildable land?

Rather than fear Chapter 40B and for that matter Chapter 40R as well, shouldn't Mayor Phelan be encouraging more mixed housing in the city? Highpoint wasn't caused as much by a developer as it was by a mayor and city councilors that acted like apparent mere bystanders?

No one lives in a threshold. To feel great about reaching a state threshold is rather a sad commentary from City Hall.

Homeless people don't need a threshold. Working families don't need thresholds. We need real housing that is affordable. If we don't, we can reach all the thresholds we desire and families will continue to flee Quincy in search of affordable housing.

Developers aren't bogeymen unless you want them to be. Encouraging developers to help Quincy become more livable for all should be a mutual idea for developers and the city.

The fact that Quincy seeks to use the lower state standard rather than the 10 percent rule sounds like Barry Bond's babble to me. It needs an asterisk too!

Tired Of The MBTA

Would you believe that even though I daily use the "T" and sometimes get a seat, I'm "tired" of the MBTA?

I'm tired of listening to its officials pleading for more money. I'm tired of their whining. I'm tired of the poor service under current conditions. We, it's patrons, will never get our money's worth.

The "T" should not raise fares again, but instead:

Cut top executives' salaries.

Lay Off personnel. I've seen too many doing too little.

Force personnel to pay for their health insurance and not pay nothing, as they currently do.

Stand up to the Carmen's Union and tell it "we will take no more" of their perks and ridiculous demands.

We, the patrons, should stop thinking of the "T" as a necessary evil, and start making it work for us and for all other taxpayers.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Anita's Colossal Appetizer

Last week our niece Anita called from her new home in Arizona with some great ideas on appetizers. She had guests for dinner, and her contribution to the dinner was to prepare the hors d'oeavres.

Today's recipe is for one I had never done before with chicken. I'm always looking for something new with chicken and this recipe is so delicious and easy to prepare.

Nutty Chicken Strips

1 cup bread crumbs
1/2 cup chopped almonds
2 tablespoons minced cilantro (or parsley)
1-1/2 teaspoons curry powder
1/4 cup flour
1 egg
1/2 cup milk
1-1/2 pounds chicken tenders (or chicken breasts cut into one inch strips.
1/4 cup vegetable oil

Combine the bread crumbs, almonds, cilantro and curry. Place flour in a bowl (I use a paper plate). In another bowl beat the egg and milk together.

Dip the chicken in flour and egg mixture and then the dry mixture.

At this point, instead of frying the chicken, I place them on a greased cookie sheet and bake in a 350 degree oven for about 15 minutes, turning them once.

If you want to use a dipping sauce, mix a cup of plain yogurt, with one tablespoon honey and 2 tablespoons fresh cilantro or parsley.

70 Parishioners Walk Five Miles For Medical Volunteer Services Organization

Sacred Heart Parish Good Friday Walk For Por Cristo

On Good Friday approximately 70 parishioners of Sacred Heart Parish walked five miles to raise funds for Por Cristo.

Por Cristo is a non-profit, medical volunteer services organization in the field of international health. It was founded by the Catholic Archdiocese of Boston in response to the 1979 visit to Boston of Pope John Paul II, who challenged the people of Boston to share their abundance with those in need, particularly in Latin America.

For the past 20 years, Por Cristo has been working to meet that challenge.

Father John O'Brien began the walk by speaking of how this act of walking as group, behind the cross on Good Friday, was a means to bear witness to our faith. Dr. Mark Jaehnig led all the walkers and he carried the cross throughout the entire five mile route.

The dean of the walkers was Rosemary Feeney. She is a long time supporter of Por Cristo. She has participated in the walk for many years. She spoke of how important it was to her to know that of all the money she raised (and this year she raised over $500 herself) that 92 percent of those funds would be used to help people in need.

FATHER JOHN O'BRIEN (left) with Matthew Hannon, Eileen O'Conner, and Mark Jaehnig.

Other long time parishioners who made the walk were Virginia Moore and Rosemary Cleary. Mrs. Moore is another long time Por Cristo supporter who raised well over $200 for this very worthy group.

Students from Sacred Heart School participated in the walk as well. Many seventh and eight graders completed the walk as part of their service commitment. Danielle Shea, Michael Wong, Dennis Liang, Kelli McGuinness, Kaycee Mark, Angelica Luy, Andrew Beaton and Emily Hannonare a few of this year's class of 2006 who walked for Por Cristo. Matthew Licari, Eileen and Catherine O'Connor, Siobhan Deasy and Amanda Brandi are some of the sixth graders who participated.

Two of the youngest walkers were Grace Kelliher and Matthew Brandi. Both are kindergarten first grade students who walked four of the five miles. Grace was accompanied by her younger siblings Charlotte and Liam (who covered the course in their stroller) and her mother Abby.

It was a beautiful day for a walk and everyone was quite pleased to be out raising money for Por Cristo, an organization that does so much good for so many people.

Additional information on Por Cristo:

• More than 30,000 people have received attention from Por Cristo medical volunteers.

• Over 500 medical volunteers have traveled to Ecuador as part of Por Cristo projects and they have provided more than $6 million in donated professional services and donated medical supplies.

• Por Cristo helped build a new neonatal care unit in the third largest maternity hospital in the world.

• A pediatric intensive care unit funded by Por Cristo has significantly lowered the death rate at a children's hospital in Guayaquil, Ecuador.

• A pediatric burn unit provides hope for severely burned children in a country where burns are all too common and hope all too scarce.

• A Nutrition Center on the Isla Tnnitaria, staffed by five full-time Ecuadorean medical professionals, educates and cares for mothers and children, eliminating malnutrition as a cause of death in that area.

• Por Cristo simultaneously treats children and provides professional training so that Ecuadorean medical professionals are able to provide quality treatment after Por Cristo teams return home.

• Por Cristo leverages each dollar donated to provide over two dollars worth of donated medical services, supplies and equipment.

DNA Trail Leads To Murder Arrest

(Cont'd From Page 1)

Quincy District Court Tuesday.

Seino is due back in Quincy District Court for a pre-trial conference June 19.

District Attorney William Keating said DeCosta had just cashed checks totaling several hundred dollars when he met Seino in Sully's Bar on Chestnut Street in Quincy.

DeCosta left the bar on foot to go to his rooming house home on Francis Avenue when he was attacked on the Spear Street side of the library, slain with a blow to the back of the head and robbed.

"There was an extensive investigation, many interviews, no witnesses," said Keating, "no evidence except for a trace of blood in the left inside pants pocket of the victim."

The investigation by Quincy Police and State Police from Keating's Office was stymied for two years until Aug. 11, 2004, when Seino was convicted in Hingham District Court for assault with a dangerous weapon (a machete).

A sample of Seino's DNA was turned over to CODIS (the state's Combined DNA Index System) but, due to the tremendous backlog, it was not until late March, 2006, that there was an initial finding.

"Late Thursday or early Friday," said Keating, "the State Police Crime Lab confirmed the identification and told us. Seino was arrested at 11 p.m. Monday at his home in Randolph."

He said investigators plan one more test of Seino's DNA to make sure.

"The State Police detectives in my office and Quincy Police have worked tirelessly on solving Daniel DeCosta's murder since it occurred on Aug. 3, 2002," said Keating.

"We have been working closely with the State Police Crime Lab and cannot thank them enough for their assistance in making this connection between our evidence and the profile of an offender recorded in the CODIS DNA databank."

Star Of Sea Finds Funds To Appeal To Vatican

Friends of Star of the Sea in Squantum, the little Catholic church that refuses to die, announced Monday that they have raised the $6,000 needed to fund an appeal to the Vatican's Apostolic Signatura to be reopened as a full-fledged church.

Star of the Sea was suppressed as a parish by the Boston Archdiocese in the fall of 2004 but relentless efforts on the Part of the Friends have led to its partial reopening as a chapel with one Sunday mass a week but no weddings, baptisms or funerals.

"We have been working with our advocate in Rome to finalize the document to be presented to the Vatican Tribunal in the next week," said Sean Glennon, co-chair of the Friends along with Maureen Mazrimas.

"We are humbled that so many people have shown through their generosity just how important the existence of the Star of the Sea as a faith community is to the residents of Squantum," said Mazrimas.

Glennon and Mazrimas said that the draft brief to be filed by the Friends advances some "compelling" arguments for reversing the decision of the Archdiocese to suppress Star of the Sea.

"Much like civil litigation," said Mazrimas, "our brief will be presented, and then the Archdiocese will have an opportunity to file their response and so on.

"This is not a process that moves swiftly. In the meantime we will endeavor to update everyone as quickly as possible as the process unfolds."

The last mass at Star of the Sea as a parish was celebrated Oct. 24, 2002, and parishioners directed to join worshippers at Sacred Heart Church a couple of miles away in North Quincy.

One mass was permitted at Easter in 2005 after former parishioners threatened to hold one of their own with a married priests in a nearby Congregational Church.

The onetime church was finally accorded mission status on July 17, 2005, with a priest for Sunday mass provided from Sacred Heart Church and other Catholic churches in Quincy.

Commencement Speaker: 'Our Lives Are Full Of Defining Moments'

461 Graduate At Eastern Nazarene College

"Our lives are full of defining moments," David Bergers told 461 Eastern Nazarene College graduates as their commencement day speaker.

Bergers is the District Adminitrator for the Boston District Office of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and ENC graduate of 1989. His May 13 address focused on how the decisions that graduates make in the future will mold their character and integrity.

"It starts with little things. One wrong choice leads to another one and before long, it's impossible to get out of the deep hole we've dug ourselves.

"These are the decisions that define us as men and women, the decisions that change who we are and determine who we will be.

"As you leave Eastern Nazarene College, ask yourself these questions: What are you willing to do to get a job? What are you willing to do to keep it? Whom or what will you serve? Be strong. Be courageous. Choose wisely.

"Remember that your choices will begin to reveal the content of your character, and then be resolute, unflinching, and unwavering in your decision.

"You will never regret it."

Same-Sex Marriage Anniversary Celebrated At First Parish Church

A celebration of the second anniversary of same-sex marriage in the Commonwealth was held recently at United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St.

The celebration was sponsored by South Shore Civil Marriage for All, advocates of gay marriage on Boston's south shore, and affiliates of MassEquality.

United First Parish Church displays 34 foot by 4 foot banner proclaiming "People Of Faith For Marriage Equality."

Rev. Sheldon Bennett, minister of the historic church where Presidents John and John Quincy Adams are entombed, told The Sun, "It was a joy to celebrate the anniversary. We're concerned about the effort to amend the constitution to deny marriage equality."

"We ask the legislators to vote no on the anti-gay marriage amendment July 12," said Paul Meoni, chairman of the South Shore Civil Marriage for All.

"We celebrate the marriage equality that we have today, and recognize the importance for all couples to have their commitment to each other recognized and protected by the state," said Bennett.

Celebration activities included anniversary cake, coffee and gifts.

"The second anniversary gift is cotton, so we gave little cotton napkins with our logo on them," said Meoni.

The logo includes two wedding bands intertwined with a rainbow.

An estimated 70 people were in attendance with 15 couples, said Meoni.

Bruce Leaver and Sara Lavanchy from the Best Western Adams Inn in Quincy hit the road to thank some of their customers in true New England style.

The Best Western Adams Inn delivered an authentic New England clambake to the offices of Housing Management Resources (HMR) at Marina Bay in Quincy. Associates from HMR enjoyed lobsters, clams, clam chowder, corn bread, baked beans and cole slaw.

"We appreciate all of our clients and the World's Largest Thank You is a great opportunity to show it," said Bruce Leaver, general manager of the Best Western Adams Inn. Woodward Avenue Focus Of QHS Meeting Tonight

"The New Quincy High School is a comprehensive facility that combines the educational programs of the Quincy High School and the Center for Technical Education vocational high school located in the heart of downtown Quincy.

"The new structure will replace the 1921 historic high school building at the corner of Coddington Street and Woodward Ave. The high school will be renovated for future use in accordance with plans to be developed by the Quincy School Committees and the city. Additions to the QHS structure and the four story 1965 CTE building will be demolished to allow for the phased construction of the new QHS facility.

"The new QHS is planned to be a three and four story building organized around a central courtyard at Woodward Avenue. The courtyard scheme requires that Woodward Avenue be closed to auto traffic between Huntley Road and Coddington Street.

"Pedestrian access and pathways shall be provided around the building for neighborhood connection to downtown. Initial design discussions have included a yellow brick and stone masonry facade with metal panel and window wall components sympathetic to the existing historic high school, but conductive to a modern educational facility.

"Future design discussions will investigate all parking options at the new high school site, including an option to place staff parking below the new QHS, depending on cost, environmental and security considerations.

"All surface parking shall be improved and upgraded with new landscaping, lighting, seating, paving etc. to integrate with the urban fabric of downtown Quincy. It is the intent of the design to maintain the existing tennis courts for high school and public use. Primary access to the facility shall be at the main entrance off Coddington Street.

"The new QHS will serve as an important community use resource for the city, with a new gymnasium, auditorium, and adult education extension use available. SMMA and the city are committed to working closely with the neighborhood to solve all lighting, safety, and security issues typical for an important modern civic building.

"Full traffic analysis surrounding the site shall include both auto and pedestrian movement and safety and may recommend new or redesigned traffic signals.

"The new school complex shall be planned for 1,500 pupils for grades 9-12, (approximately the same as current enrollment) and will maintain both the academic and vocational components of the current school.

"The clear goal for the new school is to ensure that, despite its substantial projected size and broad age span, all students have some sense of "place" within the school, a sense of purpose to their education, and a familial interaction with faculty and staff.

"The synthesis of the vocational programs into a comprehensive educational facility will allow for the broadest possible range of exploration to the individual student.

"Ultimately, the final projected floor area of the new school will be decided by the Quincy School Building Committee, which is responsible for balancing the program needs of the school against the project cost. For initial programming purposes, we have assumed a projected floor area of 350,000 square feet."

Flag Day Committee Seeks Veterans' Memorial Flags

The Quincy Flag Day Parade Committee is seeking veterans' flags for display during the 55th annual Flag Day Parade to be held Saturday evening, June 10.

Families of deceased veterans may drop off their flags at the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston. The memorial flags will be placed on the "Quincy Salutes in Veterans" float in the procession.

Edward Keohane, chairman of the Quincy Partnership, one of the organizations sponsoring the parade, assures all flags lent for display will be well cared for while in the parade committee's possession.

"Families who choose to display their loved one's flag in the parade give us all an opportunity to pay homage to their memory and the sacrifices they made to honor and protect the freedoms our flag represents," Keohane said.

The Flag Day Parade will step off from Coddington Street in Quincy Center at 7 p.m. and will proceed down Hancock Street before turning down Merrymount Parkway and disbanding at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park.

This year, Quincy's Iraqi War veterans will be honored as Grand Marshal for the parade.

"Honoring our veterans, living and deceased, is a most appropriate sentiment for this patriotic event," said Thomas Koch, chairman of the Flag Day Committee.

Conway Forms New Multi-Family Group

A new sales division at Jack Conway & Co. will specialize in multi-family properties, announces Chairman Jack Conway.

Conway is the only Bay State Realtor with a division dedicated solely to the purchase and sale of multi-family homes.

The group is headed by Realtor Mike Travers who has had much success with the Conway Bridgewater office as well as Conway Commercial. The group will be headquartered out of Conway's Commercial/ Property Management office in Abington.

"The economics of housing has caused single family homes to escalate sometimes out of the reach of middle income buyers," Travers said. "One of the housing alternatives is multi-family homes."

"The rental income of the property helps to carry the mortgage while the equity builds in the investment. This equity builds because of amortization in addition to appreciation."

In addition, Travers said the key to multi-family ownership is in the management. Sensible market-conscious rents on the one hand and a well-maintained building are the perfect combination for success.

"Do the maintenance work yourself," Travers tells his customers. "The more you can do the more you will save."

In addition to the obvious real estate benefits, generous federal tax breaks flow from interest and tax deductions.

Thousands of families have built substantial family estates by careful ownership of multi-family properties.

Travers may be contacted at Conway Multi-Family, 781-982-5516 or mtravers@jackconway.com.

Tips For Electrical Safety

POINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

Hurricanes, tornadoes, floods, lightning storms and high winds killed and injured thousands in 2006. Economic losses from these events, especially in the Gulf Coast region, totaled billions of dollars. The Electrical Safety Foundation International (ESFI) urges consumers to become more knowledgeable about electrical safety during and after weather disasters.

"After severe weather is gone, electrical hazards can still cause deaths and injuries," noted Brett Brenner, ESFI president. ESFI warns consumers to beware of electrical dangers associated with downed power lines, portable electric generators and electrical wiring or appliances that have been wet. These precautions can help keep people safe from electrical hazards during and after disasters:

- Take care when stepping into flooded areas, whether indoors or out. Submerged outlets, electrical cords and downed power lines can energize water, posing a lethal trap.
- Stay away from downed power lines and anything touching them.
- If someone is in contact with a downed power line, do not touch the person. To avoid electrocution, instead, call 911.
- Do not drive over downed power lines.
- Have a portable electric generator installed by licensed electricians to ensure it meets local electrical codes and is properly grounded.
- Keep the generator dry and do not operate it in enclosed or partially enclosed areas. Generators can produce high levels of deadly carbon monoxide very quickly, consider using a carbon monoxide detector.
- Do not overload the generator and carefully follow the manufacturer's instructions.
- Use a ground fault circuit interrupter (GFCI) to help prevent electrocutions.
- Do not use electrical wiring or equipment that has been wet. A qualified service repair dealer should recondition electrical equipment; a licensed electrician can inspect electrical systems.
- To avoid lightning strikes, go indoors during electrical storms and stay away from windows.
- If outdoors during electrical storms, move to a low point. Stay away from metal items, including sports equipment, buildings, clotheslines, poles and fences. Avoid trees.
- During electrical storms, do not use corded telephones except for emergencies.
- Avoid contact with water and plumbing during an electrical storm.
- Don't forget pets during thunderstorms. Doghouses are not safe from lightning. Chained animals can easily become victims of lightning.

For more information visit ESFI at www.electricalsafety.org or call 703-841-3229.

THIS IS A HAMMER

By Samantha Mazzotta

Wash Walls Before Painting

Q. The last time my roommate and I painted a room, she insisted on washing the walls beforehand. I think this is silly, since we're just going to cover the dingy old paint with fresh color. What do you think? — John L., Columbus, Ohio

A. It's actually a very good idea. Washing the walls with a mixture of lukewarm water and mild, low-phosphate detergent (dishwashing liquid, for example) removes dirt, dust and stains — residues that can affect how the new coat of paint will adhere to the old. It also gives you a final opportunity to look at the walls up-close for dings, protruding nails or other defects that might become glaringly obvious once the new paint is rolled on.

Kitchens, bathrooms and children's rooms are likely to have the dirtiest walls, for obvious reasons. Grease spatters from cooking can be found all over the kitchen walls. And of course, young children find that walls are the perfect surface for their preferred mediums — crayons and markers.

Wash walls from the bottom up using a nice thick sponge or a lint-free cloth. Squeeze as much water out of the sponge as possible before applying to the wall. Don't use a scrub pad. For grease spots, wash once and let the soapy water soften the spots for a few minutes, then wash again. For crayon and markers, do your best — these adhere easily to flat paint. You'll probably have to prime a marked-up wall to completely cover the drawings, and/or use a darker paint color.

Let the walls dry for at least a day before painting. Once the new coat of paint has been applied, do not wash the walls for at least 30 days to give the paint time to fully cure.

Power Outage Preparation

(NU) The temperature's rising and summer is just around the corner. That means the risk of power outages is increasing.

Staying cool on a hot day requires a lot of extra electricity. In the summer of 2003, the Midwest and Northeast experienced an electrical power blackout that left an estimated 50 million people in the dark for days.

"Summer's hot, humid days can create the year's highest electric demands, which easily causes power outages," said national home improvement expert Lou Manfredini. "Homeowners must be prepared in the event of blackouts not only because of the inconvenience that may ensue but for the potential hazards that could arise."

Stay out of the dark by following these tips to prepare for a blackout:

- Keep flashlights, fresh batteries, battery-powered radios and clocks easily accessible.
- Have at least one gallon of water and a few days' supply of food available.
- Protect appliances and electronic equipment by investing in an automatic home standby generator. It can power up to 12 circuits in the home within 30 seconds of power loss, and operates on propane or natural gas. Carrier Corp. offers an automatic unit with quiet operation at about half the cost of what such generators were just a few years ago.
- Keep a car fuel tank at least half full. Gas stations rely on electricity to power their pumps.
- Keep a list of emergency telephone numbers on hand, including the number of the local electric company to report power outages.

Tips To Make Use Of Garage Space

(NU) Today's homeowners expect the garage to be more than a vehicle shelter and stopover for seasonal equipment and family castoffs. The standard 18-by-24, two-car garage can add 432 square feet of usable real estate to a home's layout.

Families on the go want extra space for do-it-yourself projects, easy access to car-care supplies and recreational gear, and even a play area for children. Older homeowners need handy storage facilities for belongings accumulated over the years, especially if they have downsized.

Racor Inc., a company that specializes in home-storage solutions, offers the following tips for freeing up valuable garage space:

- Make a plan for the garage, just as for the kitchen or any other room in the house. Draw a floor plan to help visualize how different arrangements would fit the family's needs.
- Sort belongings and make a list of items that will be stored. Then discard, donate or sell the things that have outlived their usefulness.
- Install stylish as well as functional cabinetry, shelving and accessories in the garage to serve as extensions of the home's storage options and family's lifestyle.

For example, the new storage line by RacorPro is influenced by the racing industry. It combines heavy-duty aluminum construction, efficient design and a sleek, easy-to-clean anodized finish. Included are a workstation with fold-down table, large container shelf, vertical can rack and tool and container shelf.

- Clear away floor space by stowing gear overhead or on the walls. A new rail-mount bike lift, for instance, suspends bikes safely from the ceiling, and a pulley system makes them easy to lower when needed.
- Use work surfaces that fold up against the wall, such as the RacorPro large folding workbench. This legless, rigid aluminum workbench measures 44 inches high and can support 100 pounds. It can be mounted at the user's most comfortable working height. When not in use it folds flush against the wall.

For other innovative ways to make the garage an extension of the house, call 800-783-7725 or visit www.racorine.com.

OVERLAPPING TOES

Deformed toes is a relatively common condition that often runs in families. Underlapping toes, especially in the fourth or fifth digits, is a common disorder that rarely corrects itself with time. Clinodactyly, or congenital curly toes, for example, typically involves one or more toes, most often the smaller three. Experts don't know what causes the deformity, but point to the possibility of an imbalance of strength in the foot's small muscles that is aggravated by a slight abnormality in the joint orientation just below the ankle joint. This causes a pulling of the toe ligaments and triggers the curling. Overlapping or underlapping toes is primarily a cosmetic problem, but it can lead to calluses and friction-related discomfort.

There is no reason to suffer and continue to experience discomfort from deformed toes, heel pain, toenail problems, skin disorders, and the other myriad conditions that can affect your feet. At our office, you'll receive the highest quality medical foot care, coupled with the personal attention you expect and deserve. Our approach is conservative, gentle, and caring at 999 North Main Street, Randolph, in the MEDICAL OFFICE BUILDING, and we welcome your call, 781-986-3668, for an appointment for family footcare. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals. Office hours are also available at Quincy Medical Center and Milton Medical Building.

HINT: Forefoot supports like gel toe straighteners, gel toe caps, and toe combs can help separate overlapping toes if they cause discomfort.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Don't Let Swimsuit Dictate Your Workout

As the weather warms up and summer approaches, panic sets in for many people at the thought of having to wear the dreaded bathing suit. The image sends people rushing to the gym or walking around the block to get "in shape" before vacations, beach or lake visits and pool parties.

This sudden surge in body awareness can cause some very smart people to engage in some not-so-smart behavior in order to achieve a certain body image. The three P's — proper planning, patience and persistence — can safely prepare your body for this year's swimsuit season.

By now we all know that there is no magic pill, drink or nutrition bar that can mysteriously transform your current body into the body of your dreams. Shortcuts and quick fixes may give temporary results, but they also come with some negative consequences. Besides, wouldn't you prefer to achieve your fitness goals and maintain them throughout the year, rather than dreading the arrival of summer each year because you are unhappy with your level of fitness?

Pacing yourself throughout the year can keep you on target to reach your fitness goals in time for summer. If you are currently active, keep working hard toward your goals, and make adjustments to your current program to promote change and provide a challenge.

If you are just starting out, don't fret — there is still hope. Use the three P's to get on track, not just for summer, but for life.

—Proper Planning: Create a fitness and nutrition program that is well-organized and not overwhelming. Trying to cram three months of exercise into three weeks because you only have that long before your cruise not only sets you up to be disappointed, it could be unsafe. If you have only three weeks and want to maximize your workout time, consider consulting a fitness and nutrition professional to design a program that can help you to effectively set and reach your goals.

—Patience: Remember that fitness is a marathon, not a sprint. You cannot make up for lost time just because summer is coming, but you can make the most of the time you do have. Set reasonable goals and acknowledge gains. If you have not yet met your ultimate goal, but you are seeing progress, recognize the results of your hard work and use them as motivation to continue.

—Persistence: Stick with your designed exercise and nutrition programs. Avoid excuses not to stay on track. Resist the urge to attempt a shortcut to fitness. Don't let your swimsuit dictate your workout routine, and tackle all your obstacles with the confidence that you will be rewarded for all your hard work.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kfws@hearstsc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Warm Weather Advice From American Cancer Society

Dressing Right Protects Skin

When the weather warms up, many people switch to short sleeves, light colors, and loosely woven fabrics—just the opposite of what they should do to protect themselves from the ultraviolet radiation that causes skin cancer.

May is Skin Cancer Awareness Month, and the American Cancer Society is reminding the public that choosing the right clothing is just as important as choosing the right sunscreen.

Many people know to cover their exposed skin with a sunscreen that has a sun protection factor (SPF) of 15 or higher. What they do not realize is that the skin under their clothing is not automatically protected.

The sun's ultraviolet (UV) rays can shine through some clothing and may contribute to later development of skin cancer. It is now possible to buy clothes in special sun-blocking fabrics, and a scientific study has shown that these fabrics really work. These clothes come with their own Ultraviolet Protective Factor (UPF) ratings.

The American Cancer Society recommends choosing fabrics with a minimum UPF rating of 15. For very good protection, choose UPF 25-39, and use UPF40-50 for excellent sun protection. You don't have to buy new, "high-tech" clothes to protect yourself from the sun. By making the right choices among your ordinary clothes, you can reduce your risk of skin cancer.

Here are some tips to follow:

- Wear 100 percent polyester clothing for a day in the sun;
- Wear dark colors instead of white;
- Choose clothes of tightly woven fabrics;
- Wear long sleeves, long pants, long skirts, and shirts with collars and high necklines;
- Put on dry clothes or cover up after swimming;
- Use a laundry additive that gives your clothes a UPF of 15.

When heading outdoors, people should also remember to wear sunglasses and a hat with a brim wide enough to shade their face, ears, and neck. The sun's UV rays are most intense between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m., and it is best to avoid direct exposure to the sun during those hours.

Parents should protect their children from the sun, because severe sunburns in childhood may greatly increase a person's risk of melanoma—the most deadly form of skin cancer—in later life.

People of all ages should avoid tanning beds and sun lamps, which increase one's exposure to UV radiation. Damage from UV radiation is cumulative. More than 1 million Americans are diagnosed with the most curable types of skin cancer every year. These are basal cell or squamous cell cancers (also called nonmelanoma cancers). Although these cancers do not often spread to other parts of the body, they still should be treated as soon as they are discovered.

Melanoma is the most serious form of skin cancer, expected to kill 7,910 Americans this year, with about 62,190 news cases diagnosed. Even melanoma can be cured in most cases, if it is diagnosed early, before it has spread, and treated properly. Persons at special risk for melanoma include those with light skin, a family history of melanoma, moles and freckles, or a history of severe sunburn early in life.

To detect skin cancer early, everyone should examine their own skin once a month and see their doctor regularly for skin checks. Be alert to changes in number, size, shape, or color of spots on your skin. These types of changes are the most important warning signs of skin cancer. Other warning signs include a sore that does not heal or a new growth.

For more information about prevention and early detection of skin cancer, call the American Cancer Society 24 hours a day, seven days a week at 1-800-ACS-2345, or visit www.cancer.org.

Weighty Issue: Does Soda Promote Weight Gain?

(NU) As childhood obesity continues to increase, researchers are looking at a link between what kids drink and their expanding waistlines.

While experts stop short of laying the blame completely at the feet of soda makers, most acknowledge that people in general, and kids specifically, consume too many soft drinks.

In an effort to curb the problem, some school districts are removing soda machines from school campuses, and some say for good reason. One 12-ounce can of soda has 150 calories; a 20-ounce can has 250 calories.

According to the Center for Science in the Public Interest, "Carbonated soft drinks are the single biggest source of calories in the American diet, providing about seven percent of calories." Non-carbonated drinks (such as fruit juice and iced teas) push that figure to nine percent.

One study of 548 sixth and seventh-graders in Boston showed that each 12-ounce can of soda consumed increased their risk for becoming overweight by 60 percent, according to an article in the Journal of Pediatrics.

Besides having a high-sugar content, which can contribute to weight gain and promote tooth decay, there is little nutritional value in a can of soda, just empty calories.

So what's a parent to do?

A diet rich in fruits, vegetables and whole grains should be the first line of defense. But because what they drink matters just as much as what they eat, one option may be to consider replacing soda with a health beverage like NuVim, which contains a variety of vitamins, minerals, calcium; low amounts of sugar; and no caffeine.

Tested and proven effective in 19 clinical studies for its muscle flexibility and immune-boosting properties, this beverage contains the antioxidant vitamins A, C and E, along with B-12, zinc, calcium and essential amino acids.

NuVim comes in a variety of fruit flavors and is located in the refrigerated juice section of a supermarket. For a list of stores that carry NuVim or to purchase it in powder form, visit www.nuvim.com or call 877-850-8777.

DENTISTRY for the 21st century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

SOMETHING TO SMILE ABOUT

According to a recent Oral Health Trend Survey conducted by the American Dental Association, nearly two-thirds of dentists identified tooth whitening as the number one procedure requested by patients who were between the ages of forty to sixty. This is quite understandable when one takes into account the fact that tooth whitening affords middle-aged people one of the least expensive and most effective ways to revitalize their appearance. Few things project a youthful appearance more obviously than white teeth. Professional tooth whitening can remove years of accumulated stains from wine, tobacco, tea, coffee, and other sources in a single office visit. Remember, your smile is the first thing that people notice about you.

There are many causes of tooth discoloration; substances like coffee, cola, and smoking. Some medications and aging can also cause your teeth to stain over time. Ask your dentist for a smile consultation. He or she can evaluate your smile and provide a range of treatments available to help achieve the look you want. We're currently accepting new patients and welcome your call at 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment for superior dental care. We recommend regular checkups and cleanings. Take the time to understand your health - it is worth the investment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. According to the survey mentioned above, tooth veneering is the second most requested procedure among this age group.

Takes Two From Nauset 4-3, 4-0 To Improve To 9-4

Quincy Sweeps Doubleheader

By CHRIS POISSON

SOFTBALL

The Quincy High School softball team rebounded from a disappointing 4-3 loss at Plymouth South last Wednesday with a doubleheader sweep of Nauset last Saturday at Mitchell/McCoy Field.

The Presidents improved their record to 9-4 overall and 6-2 in the Atlantic Coast League behind front-runner Whitman-Hanson, which only has one loss.

"It wasn't a bad week," said head coach Mike Sedar. "The Plymouth South game is a game we shouldn't lose. It would've been nice to have gotten that one because we'd already be in the playoffs. And now we need to win the rest of our games to have a chance for the Atlantic Coast League championship. We'll see what happens."

Quincy played Plymouth North Monday and Holliston Tuesday. It will head to Stoughton today (Thursday) at 3:30 p.m., square off against North Quincy Friday at 6:30 p.m. at Mitchell/McCoy Field, host Randolph Saturday at 10 a.m. and Whitman-Hanson next Monday at 10 a.m.

The Presidents defeated the Warriors, 4-3 and 4-0. In the first game, which counted as a league game, they pulled out a dramatic win in the seventh inning.

Senior tri-captain Leanna Lam singled, stole second base and scored the winning run on a double by senior tri-captain Kim Lebel (3-for-4).

In the top half of the inning, the Presidents escaped a bases-loaded, one-out jam when junior Brighid Kyle caught a fly ball in center field for the second out and fired a laser to gun down the runner at the plate.

Sophomore pitcher Katie Santon allowed only four hits and struck out seven before being relieved by senior Theresa MacConochie in the seventh inning.

In the second game, MacConochie tossed a four-hit shutout with three strikeouts. The Presidents scored three runs in the first inning highlighted by senior tri-captain Courteney Hall's two-run double. The other run came on a passed ball.

Hall finished 2-for-3 and Kyle also went 2-for-3 with an RBI in the third inning.

In the Plymouth South game, Quincy looked out of synch after 12 days off. It made too many physical and mental errors and couldn't come through with a timely hit as it failed to push a run home with the bases loaded and no outs.

"It was just a miserable game," Sedar said. "We hadn't played in 12 days but they didn't either. We made like six errors, three or four of them mental errors. They're a better team than last year but that's a game we should win."

North Quincy Has Tourney Hope

The North Quincy High School softball team still has hopes of clinching a berth in the state tournament.

The Red Raiders routed Madison Park, 17-2, last Wednesday and pulled out a thrilling 7-6 win in nine innings over Falmouth last Thursday, before suffering a 7-6 setback to Plymouth South last Friday and dropping a 5-3 decision to Winthrop Sunday.

North Quincy's record stands at 5-8 overall (2-6 in the Atlantic Coast League) and it needs to win four of its remaining five games to punch a ticket to the postseason.

It played Whitman-Hanson Monday, Hull Tuesday and Plymouth North Wednesday. It hosts Dennis-Yarmouth today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. and battles Quincy Friday at 6:30 p.m. at Mitchell/McCoy Field.

"We need to go 4-1 this week to make the tournament," said head coach Mike Connor Monday morning. "If we don't make it, it still has been a great season. There's definitely some talent here. The girls want to play and they want to win."

In the Winthrop game, the Red Raiders fell behind 3-0 before tying the game. Sophomores Simone Leary and Kasey O'Connell had RBI singles in the second and senior tri-captain Kelly Barden singled, stole second and third base and scored on a wild pitch in the third inning.

Barden leads the ACL in batting with a .525 average.

Winthrop broke the deadlock with a pair of runs in the sixth inning off sophomore starter Paige Bonanni, who pitched the entire game.

"They have some of the best pitching we've seen this year," Connor said. "We hit a little better this time because we're more seasoned."

Against Plymouth South, freshman Brittany Folkins pitched and went 2-for-4 with a triple, two runs and two RBI. Freshman Katherine O'Connell also went 2-for-4 with an RBI and freshman Siobhan Carnell went 1-for-3 with an RBI.

"It was a good game," Connor said. "We left the tying run on second base when a line drive to the second baseman ended the game."

In the extra-innings win over Falmouth, the Red Raiders scored two runs in the sixth inning to tie the game at 6-6. In the ninth, sophomore Kerry Coughlin (4-for-5, two RBI) singled home Carnell, who led off with a triple, with the winning run.

Barden went 4-for-5 with two RBI. Bonanni pitched the entire game, giving up two earned runs on seven hits and striking out eight and walking none.

"It was almost a copy of the Hull game earlier in the season," Connor said. "It's exciting being in games like that and special when you come out on top. I'm just happy for the girls. When the pressure is on, this group seems to play better."

Against Madison Park, senior pitcher Jessica Mann picked up her first win of the year. She yielded two runs on four hits with four strikeouts. She also went 2-for-3 with two runs and an RBI. Kasey O'Connell went 2-for-3 with five runs and two RBI.

VACUUM LEAKS
One of the first things to check for when a vehicle experiences performance problems is a vacuum leak. These may be responsible for upsetting the operation of a computer system and cause a wide range of symptoms. In addition, several engine sensors and vacuum actuators (vacuum switches) rely on engine vacuum for operation. Vacuum leaks are frequently caused by deteriorated, broken, or loose vacuum hoses. Air leaks that occur after the airflow sensor can also cause problems. The sensor cannot measure the air being taken into the engine through the leak. As a result, the air-fuel mixture will be incorrect. As sophisticated as a vehicle's computer system is, its operation may sometimes be compromised by something as small as a leak.

Quincy-North Downs Sandwich, Bows To Plymouth South

GIRLS' TRACK

The Quincy/North Quincy High School girls' track team recently split two Atlantic Coast League meets at Plymouth South, losing a 70-65 contest to Plymouth North and taking an 83-52 victory over Sandwich.

Q/NQ (3-2 in the league) again was without Jenny Tam and Krystine Kelley, which hurt the cause. Kelly Pineo and the shot-put crew continued to dominate. Pineo, who also took second in discus, remained undefeated and the shot-putters are unscored upon in five contests.

Other winners were Jessie Howlett in the 100, also scoring in the 200, Lauren Brooks in the 800, also scoring in the mile, Kim Allen in the high jump, also scoring in the triple jump, and Jenna Furey in the two mile, also scoring in the mile.

Other scorers were Krystin Newsom (100, long jump, triple jump), Lily Man (400), Rachael Kasanoff (two mile), Jen Nhan (100 hurdles, 300 hurdles, triple jump), Virginia Wong (high jump, javelin), Jessica Lynch (javelin), Rachel Barrett (shot-put, discus) and Erin Collins (shot-put). Barrett qualified for states in the shot-put with a 31-7 toss.

At the recent MSTCA Freshman-Sophomore meet in Franklin, four athletes earned medals by placing in the top six in their event. Wong won the javelin with Julie Lynch fourth, Collins took sixth in the shot-put and Howlett placed fourth in the 100.

SPRING CAR CARE

Car Attention For Warm Weather

By TRISHA HESSINGER

(NU) Summer vacation is right around the corner but nothing can ruin a vacation like being stranded on the side of the road, miles from a destination.

When preparing to get away this summer, follow these tips to help make vacation as relaxing and enjoyable as possible.

• Get a complete vehicle inspection. The vehicle manufacturer recommends service and inspections at regularly scheduled intervals to keep the vehicle running. A complete vehicle inspection, including air-conditioning system, may help drivers avoid costly repairs as well as keep cool on hot summer days. A technician can help ensure a vehicle's engine, battery, exhaust system and cooling system are all in good working order.

• Check tire pressure monthly and before long trips. Properly inflate all four tires, plus the spare, to the vehicle manufacturer's recommended levels. tires can lose up to one pound per square inch per month under normal conditions. Use an accurate tire gauge to check tire air pressure monthly and always when the car is cool, meaning the car has been driven less than one mile, or has not moved in at least three hours.

• Check tire tread. Tires should have at least 1/16 inch of tread depth. To perform the "penny test," insert a penny in the tread at several points on the tire, with President Lincoln's head pointing down. If the top of Lincoln's head is visible at any of the points, the tire is worn out and requires replacement. Remember, this test is only appropriate for tires on passenger vehicles.

• Check fluids. Fluid levels should be checked and filled if necessary, including engine oil and coolant, brake, transmission, windshield washer and power steering fluids. And don't forget to check the gas.

• Do not overload the vehicle. Just as lighter loads increase fuel efficiency, overloading creates excessive heat inside the tires, robbing them of fuel economy. Overloading a vehicle can also cause excessive or irregular wear or early removal of tires if they are not properly inflated or in good condition.

• Pack an emergency kit. Emergency kits will prepare drivers for unexpected breakdowns. Suggested items for a vehicle emergency kit include jumper cables, a flashlight and batteries, a reflector, protective gloves, a basic toolkit, flares and matches, a gallon of water, nonperishable food, a 12-volt portable air compressor and a blanket. An auto club membership may also be helpful. Make sure a cell phone is available and charged.

Hot Weather: Culprit Behind Battery Woes

(NU) Summer is the season for major car battery problems.

Heat, not cold, shortens battery life, says the Car Care Council. The average life of a battery is three and a half years, and even shorter in warmer climates.

Excessive heat and overcharging are the two main reasons for shortened battery life. heat causes battery fluid to evaporate, which damages the internal structure of the battery. A malfunctioning component in the charging system, usually the voltage regulator, allows too high a charging rate. That's slow death for a battery.

Statistics from the 2005 National Car Care Month inspection campaign show battery cables, clamps and terminals were found to need maintenance in 13 percent of vehicles, and seven percent of batteries were not properly held down.

To get the most life out of a battery, the Car Care Council suggests the following:

• Be sure the electrical system is charging at the correct rate; overcharging can damage a battery as easily as under-charging.

• If the battery is the type that needs to be topped off, check it regularly, especially in hot weather. Add distilled water when necessary.

• Always replace a battery with one that's rated at least as high as the one originally specified.

• Keep the top of the battery clean. Dirt becomes a conductor, which drains battery power. Further, as corrosion accumulates on battery terminals it becomes an insulator, inhibiting the current flow.

A Job Well Done

On Tuesday, May 15, at approximately 1:29 a.m., Officers Paul Holland and Matt Tobin were dispatched to the area of Centre Street and Burgin Parkway on a report of a "possible larceny of a lawn mower." The call came from a citizen who saw a male trying to push a lawn mower into a pick-up truck out in the street.

LT. DAN MINTON

The officers arrived on scene to find a male sitting in a John Deere riding lawnmower, being pushed by a female in a green pick-up truck on Centre Street at Columbia Street. After stopping both vehicles, the male on the lawn mower yelled to the driver of the truck, "I told you to go slower!" then stepped off and entered the truck.

Upon questioning as to their actions, the driver, who was shaking noticeably, said that she purchased the lawn mower earlier in the night at Home Depot and was now picking it up. The passenger, who appeared under the influence and fading in and out of consciousness, added that he just got his truck back and they needed the lawn mower for work later that morning.

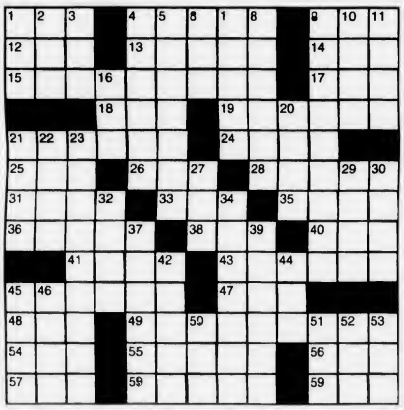
The female said that she bought the mower earlier but did not have the receipt with her. The officers examined the mower, which had price tags, advertisements, and the instruction manual still on the manual still on the mower. Officer Mike Powers went to Home Depot to look for any evidence there. He located an empty spot in the front of the store, where other lawn mowers were. He also noted that all the other mowers were chained together as a theft precaution; however, the chain had been cut where the empty spot was. After notifying officers at the scene of the stop of his findings, Officer Holland looked into the windows of the truck and spotted bolt cutters in plain view.

Both suspects were placed under arrest for "larceny over $250" and "possession of burglarious tools." An inventory search (search of vehicle prior to being towed, for property inventory) of the truck was conducted. In a pocket of a jacket on the passenger seat, Officer Holland found the following items: a plastic sandwich bag with two hypodermic needles, a spoon with residue, a plastic pill bottle with the male suspect's name on it, with seven small bags in it, each with a substance appearing to be heroin.

Officer Holland continued to search and found numerous pills, believed to be Methadone, Dicyclomine and Alprazolam, along with empty plastic bags and a digital scale (with powdery substance on it.) In addition to the charges listed above, the male suspect was charged with "possession of a Class A (subsequent offense)", "possession of a hypodermic needle (subsequent offense)" "possession of Class A with intent to distribute," "possession of Class B with intent to distribute" and "possession of Class E with intent to Distribute."

The female was also charged with "being present where heroin is kept."

After the truck was towed away, the mower was towed back to Home Depot and a manager contacted. The male suspect is a 36-year-old Quincy resident and the 20-year-old female suspect is from Easton.



Nice work!

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

This Memorial Day our American Flag will be flying in memory of all who served in their country's time of need..

"I AM OLD GLORY... For over 200 years I have been the banner of hope and freedom for generation after generation of Americans. Born amid the first flames of America's fight for freedom. I am the symbol of a country that has grown from a little group of thirteen colonies to a nation of fifty sovereign states. Planted firmly on the high pinnacle of American faith. My gently fluttering folds have proved an inspiration to untold millions. They have looked upon me as a symbol of national unity. They have prayed that they and their fellow citizens might continue to enjoy life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, which have been granted to every American as the heritage of free men. So long as men love liberty more than life itself; so long as they treasure the priceless privileges bought with the blood of our forefathers; so long as the principles of truth, justice, and charity for all remain deeply rooted in human hearts, I shall continue to be the enduring banner of the United States of America."... Dependable Cleanings Collecting Socks For The Homeless

Dependable Cleaners has teamed with Boston Healthcare for the Homeless (BHCHP) to take part in its Second Annual Sock Drive.

Throughout May, Dependable Cleaners is collecting new, white socks, in all sizes at all of its 17 locations throughout the South Shore and greater Boston.

BHCHP, which provides medical services to Boston's homeless at its various clinics, shelters and hospitals, spends $6,000 annually on clean, white socks for homeless men and women. Access to new shoes and clean socks is often limited to people who are homeless. Athlete's foot and other infections thrive when damp socks are worn for days or weeks at a time. Frostbite is also common in colder months, sometimes resulting in toe amputations.

Last year, BHCHP collected more than 11,000 pairs of socks. This year they have more than doubled their goal to 25,000.

"Dependable Cleaners is proud to partner with BCHP on this worthy cause," said Christa Hagearty, president of Dependable Cleaners. "We encourage businesses, faith groups, colleges, schools and youth groups to participate with us in this drive by donating at one of our 17 participating locations."

New, white socks can be dropped off at Dependable Cleaners' locations during regular business hours through May 31st. For store locations and hours visit www.dependablecleaners.com.

For more information on the Sock Drive, log onto www.bchp.org/index_sock.htm.

South Coastal Bank's Community Service Receives National Recognition

South Coastal Bank announces its community service activities have been recognized by the Independent Community Bankers of America (ICBA) through the association's annual National Community Bank Service Awards program.

Out of nearly 5,000 community banks eligible for this year's ICBA National Community Bank Service Awards, South Coastal Bank was chosen for an Honorable Mention in recognition of its support for the Avon Walk for Breast Cancer.

For the past two years, a team of bank employees has participated in the Avon Walk, which requires each walker to raise a minimum of $1,800. South Coastal Bank staff has raised over $22,000 to enable the "South Coastal Strutters" to take part in the Avon Walk, averaging $11,000 for each year of participation.

South Coastal Bank was also lauded for employees' volunteer hours and fundraising efforts on behalf of various other health issue groups and related community events, including the Quincy Lions Club Run/Walk for Sight; Quincy Medical Center Cancer Walk; Hospice of the South Shore Walk; Old Colony Hospice Stepping Out for Hospice Walk; American Cancer Society Relay for Life; American Diabetes Association; American Heart Association Annual Heart Ball; American Heart Association Cape Cod & Canal Heart Walk; Cystic Fibrosis Walk; Making Strides Against Breast Cancer; and Muscular Dystrophy Association Lock-Up.

Last year, South Coastal Bank was selected a National Award winner of the ICBA National Community Bank Service Awards in honor of its C.A.R.E.S. community-giving program, which provides grants to local nonprofit organizations that expose children to the visual and performing arts, including but not limited to the fine arts, writing, reading, theater, music and dance.

"South Coastal Bank takes pride in giving back to the communities it serves," said John J. O'Connor III, president, chairman and CEO of South Coastal Bank. "We are delighted that our community spirit has once again been acknowledged by ICBA."

Over 300 Medals Awarded At 24th Senior Olympic Games

More than 300 medals were handed out at Wednesday night's 24th annual Quincy Senior Olympics awards ceremony at Beechwood on the Bay.

"All Olympians are winners, and those who won in the competition look forward to the recognition," said Sharron Beals, Beechwood's executive director and member of the Senior Olympics planning committee. Some competitors are lifelong athletes, others participate just to stay fit and some are first-time athletes."

This year there were many new participants entering events for the first time. Olympians came from all Quincy neighborhoods, South Shore towns and five states.

At the Beechwood events, more than 150 preschoolers were cheerleaders for the competitions, and many seniors had family members cheering them on.

"We were happy to see an increase in Olympic competitors and spectators this year," said Maryann Mahoney.

"We've come of age," Beals said. "Twenty-three years ago the first Senior Games were held on a Saturday with three events. This year the 10-day event offered 21 competitions at eight sites throughout the city."

"Our Senior Olympic Games are a wonderful example of citywide partnership," she added. "Mayor William Phelan, each year, is very personally involved in planning and promotion of this citywide event. We have a wide range of community support for the Olympic Games each year.

"Increasingly, we are attracting seniors from out of town. In 2007, we anticipate that our Quincy Olympics will attract increasing numbers of seniors from the South Shore, South coast and beyond."

The Olympics were sponsored by Quincy Medical Center and Boston Medical Center. Quincy Rotary Club and River Bay Club also provided financial and service support. Marina Place and Braintree Landing provided refreshments.

Games were hosted by Olindy's Lanes, Club 58, Torre Dei Passeri Club, Quincy Parks Department, Lincoln Hancock School and Beechwood.

Service providers included Fallon Ambulance, Quincy Police Department and North Quincy High School ROTC Honor Guard.

In the volleyball exhibition game, the Senior Olympian Team won two of three games from the Mayor's Celebrity Team.

Other results of the Senior Olympics are:

Fire Dept. Study Cites Problems

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Lack of sufficient personnel, presence of asbestos at fire stations and their physical deterioration are cited in an independent study of the Quincy Fire Department.

MMA Consulting Group, Inc. that conducted the survey submitted its findings in a report to the city's Fire Study Committee.

The reports will assist in the development of an improvement plan, and will be presented to the City Council at the June 19 meeting.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin said the City Council will address issues of air quality, communications, and training of the fire staff.

The committee was established as the result of a resolve by Coughlin who is a member of the committee.

"The fire department facilities are old and poorly maintained," said the MMA report.

"As far as the study goes, I hope it can be used as a blue print for the future and it doesn't just get swept under the rug," said Pettinelli.

The study suggested an appropriation from the city for an additional $200,000 to $400,000 annually for at least eight to ten years to make necessary health and safety repairs and code compliance repairs.

"If money were no object there would be a lot we could do," said Coughlin.

Arienti said additional funding would be a change from the consistent budget cuts to the Fire Department.

"We're cut down to the bare bones," he said.

Arienti attributed the diminishing of fire department funds to being a "low priority in the city."

When asked if he thought the situation would improve, Arienti said, "no, not in that

Rededication Ceremony Planned

Granite Ball Returning To City Hall June 15

The historic Granite Ball will return to its former City Hall surroundings and rededicated Thursday evening, June 15, announces Mayor William Phelan.

The ball was a gift to the city by the Quincy Granite Manufacturers Association and dedicated at the city's Tercentenary Celebration in 1925.

Originally placed outside old City Hall at the request of the Granite Manufacturers Association, it was moved to the Fore River Bridge traffic rotary in 1937.

And remained there until March of 2005 when Phelan ordered it returned to City Hall. It has been in Barre, Vt., for repairs and re-polishing for the 6:30 p.m. rededication ceremony. There will be musical entertainment. The public is invited to attend.

Weekly Mosquito Sprayings To Begin

The Quincy Health Department announces the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project is scheduled to begin this week early morning application of the pesticide Anvil for the control of nuisance and/or disease carrying adult mosquitoes.

Applications in Quincy will be made Thursday mornings, weather permitting, throughout the summer months until Sept. 30.

Not all areas of the city will be entirely treated on a give date. Attempts will be made to treat as large an area as deemed necessary.

The fogging operations will occur between 2 and 6:30 a.m., only if mosquito populations warrant an application. If inclement weather occurs (high winds, rain or low temperatures) or equipment fails, the application will be added to the next scheduled day.

Anvil is applied in ultra low volume (ULV) sprayers at the rate of one-half ounce per acre of finished spray. Anvil is a combination of two ingredients, Sumithrin and Piperonyl Butoxide.

Sumithrin is a synthetic pyrethroid which imitates the natural pesticides found in chrysanthemums. Sumithrin breaks down rapidly in the environment and is expected to pose little risk to humans when used at low concentrations for mosquito control, according to the EPA.

For more information, contact the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project at 781-762-3681, Monday to Friday from 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., or visit its Web site at www.massnrc.org/ncmcp.

Those who would like to see a map of the areas to be treated should visit the Project's Web site and click on the link, "current early morning aerosol applications schedule and maps," and then click on "Quincy."

ULV maps will posted by 3:30 p.m. the day before the scheduled application. Residents may also call the Project's main telephone line after 3:30 p.m. Wednesdays to hear a recorded message detailing the streets/areas to be treated in the city Thursday mornings.

Two juvenile boys were arrested last week for spraying 33 headstones in the Rose Hill section of Mount Wollaston Cemetery with sticky yellow oil-based paint from the paintball guns.

Cemetery workers toiled through the weekend to ready the cemetery for the annual Memorial Day parade and observance. They managed to get the yellow out but the oil base remained.

Sources said the city had to send to Missouri for a cleaner that would remove the oil from the headstones. Damage was estimated at $20,000.

The youngsters were quoted as saying they did not intend to vandalize the stones but were shooting each other with the paintball guns and ducking behind the headstones for cover.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On May 31, 1819, Walt Whitman is born in West Hills, N.Y. In 1855, he self-published a slim volume of poems called "Leaves of Grass," which carried his picture but not his name. Whitman continued to issue revised editions until his death in 1892.

• On June 2, 1924, Congress passes the Indian Citizenship Act, conferring citizenship on all Native Americans born within U.S. territorial limits. The privileges of citizenship were largely governed by state law, and the right to vote was often denied to Native Americans in the early 20th century.

• On June 3, 1936, best-selling novelist Larry McMurtry is born in Wichita Falls, Texas. In the late 1990s, he began a massive attempt to turn Archer, Texas, into a haven for book lovers by buying abandoned buildings and filling them with hundreds of thousands of used books for sale.

• On June 1, 1949, Lawrence Welk's band begins a two-year stint as the house orchestra for the radio show "High Life Review." Welk made the move to TV in 1951, and remained there until 1982.

• On May 30, 1967, actor Claude Rains, best known for his role as the dapper chief of police in "Casablanca," dies at age 77. Although he never won an Oscar, he was nominated several times, for "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" (1939), "Casablanca" (1943) and "Notorious" (1946).

• On May 29, 1975, President Gerald Ford vetoes a $5.3 billion jobs bill greenlighted by Congress that would have created some 1 million badly needed jobs. In its place, Ford moved to pass a bill that extended unemployment benefits to 65 weeks. The jobless rate at the time was 9.2 percent.

• On June 4, 1989, Chinese troops storm through Tiananmen Square in Beijing, killing and arresting thousands of pro-democracy protesters. Reporters and Western diplomats on the scene estimated that perhaps thousands of the protesters were killed and as many as 10,000 were arrested.

No Caddy For Me

(Henry Bosworth decided to take the day off and is re-running one of his old columns. That's recycling but he says TV does it all the time. Anyway, he dipped back to May, 1990 for this one.)

If the car you ride is a status symbol like some people think it is, then I should be walking Hancock St. looking for handouts.

My car is a 1978 Chevvy Malibu station wagon that has seen better days — and better years.

But its aging looks hasn't bothered me until now.

You see, cars have never meant much to me as impression makers. I don't care about big gas guzzling boats or the flashy sports jobs or the ones that come equipped with everything but a kitchen sink.

Cars are cars. As long as they have four wheels and get you safely to where you want to go and then back again, that's the important thing.

My car is showing her age now, though. Rust. Rot. Dents. And a built-in "shower": a hole somewhere above the windshield that lets the rain sprinkle you.

But she only has 50,000 miles on her and I guess that's why I hold onto her and try not to be lured by new car advertisements. I'm kind of attached to the old girl.

Doug and Phil Luomoa at West Quincy Motors have been the car's team physicians for the past few years and every time I bring it in for a tune-up, they smile and shake their heads.

She may have only 50,000 miles on her but she's a lot older than that, is their diagnosis. I don't give her a workout on the highways, they say. She's like a race horse. Take her out and let her run. Most of the mileage is in the city. Stop and go! That beats the hell out of a car.

I don't want my car to hear this because we've been together for 12 years now through all kinds of weather. But I am beginning to think of replacing her.

I find myself getting a little embarrassed when I drive up to some fancy function and someone sees me getting out of it.

"When are ya going to break down and get a new car?," people are beginning to ask. "C'mon you got the bucks. Let George Washington see the sunlight."

My car looks like a sore thumb whenever my family gathers. Four daughters, one son and one grandson have much newer cars than me.

Well, I'm giving it some thought. I may break down and do it this year before those guys on Beacon Hill come up with a new sales tax that might turn me off.

I don't know what kind of car I would get. But it won't be a Cadillac.

Nothing personal about Caddys. It's just that owners of Caddys can suddenly become involved in one of those kind of stories. You know the kind.

Like the one a few years ago about the brand new Caddy that was sold for only $50.

The millionaire who owned it and died unexpectedly had specified in his will that his wife sell the car and give the money to his secretary.

Well, the wife happened to despise the secretary but fulfilled her husband's wish. She sold the Caddy for $50 and gave the $50 to the secretary.

People swore this actually happened. Some insisted they saw the classified ad in the newspapers. Others had a friend who had a friend who knew the guy who bought the car.

Then there was that other story.

A guy who drove one of those big cement mixing trucks happened to be near his own home around noon one day and decided to stop by for lunch.

And there, in the driveway was a shiny Caddy. Inside the house he found the Caddy's owner with his wife. And, as the story went, they weren't discussing the weather.

So, the husband marches out of the house, backs his truck into the driveway and pours the whole load of mixed cement over the new Caddy — completely encasing it.

Those who swear the story was true said they got it "from the guy who knows a guy who actually saw the car at a garage where they were trying to get the cement off with sledge hammers."

So, no Caddy for me. No, siree. Even if I could afford one.

I don't know. Maybe I'll hold onto my old car for another year.

It doesn't get in the kind of trouble a Caddy does.

(Editor's update: Since then Bosworth has bought two cars. No Caddy. Two Buicks, from honest Jim Duggan.)

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1926 real photo postcard reproduction showing Beach Street in Wollaston looking toward Wollaston Beach. Henry A. Frink, a Quincy photographer, had a photo finishing shop on Cliveden Street in Quincy Square. He took dozens of pictures all over Quincy and published postcards that he sold in his shop. Today, postcards like this one are a rare find, but Fink's negatives have been preserved. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

'Polyamory' And Same-Sex Marriage

Today's vocabulary word is "polyamory." Remember yesterday's words "same-sex marriage?" Well not so long ago the thought of "same-sex marriage" was a preposterous as you may think "polyamory" is today!

Think Again!

The 2003 judicial redefinition of marriage enabled same-sex nuptials by disconnecting and disassociating from the institution of marriage all the processes pertinent to conceiving and caring for children. This edict separated the previously linked processes of heterosexual intercourse, procreation, child bearing, and child rearing on which the Commonwealth critically relies for society's common good.

It is heart rendering to contemplate the depth of despair of children conceived, born, and growing up without an accountable loving father and mother committed in marriage. This problem is manifest in the a periodic bloodshed and killings in communities populated by a high percentage of fatherless young males.

The court's decree in redefining marriage demonstrates a contemptible disdain for the well-being of children, and a narcissistic disregard for society's common good.

According to the politically activist high court and it's embarrassingly self-serving, carte blanche opinion, Massachusetts marriage is now solely misconstrued under the "premises of individual liberty and equality under law protected by the Massachusetts Constitution," -a radical political opinion based on a nonexistent body of law. (Note: Where unconstrained liberty reigns, so does chaos; where ordered liberty reigns, so does civilization!)

Now, same-sex marriage legally renders consanguinity (close family relationship) meaningless for marriage of brothers or of sisters, or of other closely related same-sex people.

For that matter, there is no substantive legal basis for limiting marriage to "two" persons. Under the high court's reformulation edict, marriage cannot be selectively applied to homosexuals as same-sex marriage but denied to bisexuals, as group marriage for such an arbitrary and capricious opinion is clearly unconstitutional. (Remember, the court ruled that marriage is now solely based on the "premises of individual liberty and equality under law protected by the Massachusetts Constitution."

A presentation on "marriage" recently held in Quincy at the Thomas Crane Public Library led by the writer disclosed that same-sex marriage has, in itself, created the slippery slope which opens marriage to any and all permutations of committed partners regardless of sexual orientation, gender, proclivity, and a number of participants - group marriage.

Recall today's vocabulary word, "polyamory."

If you continue to remain in a "that's preposterous" mindset, then get on the internet and go to www.UUA.org. Then search for "freedom to marry, for all people." Read directly below this heading for the commitment to full equality. Go to www.UUPA.org, or google "polyamory."

The only reason that the Polyamory/Group Marriage Movement is hidden from the public is the fear that it would disclose the real agenda of the radicals driving the Same-Sex Marriage Movement.

The slippery slope is here: same-sex marriage for homosexuals, group marriage for bisexuals. The institution of marriage is under relentless attack to the total destruction of traditional marriage: the union of a man-husband-father, and a woman-wife-mother. Pity the children!

Justice Cordy (dissenting) in the Massachusetts same-sex marriage opinion states:

"A society without the institution of marriage in which heterosexual intercourse, procreation, and child care are largely disconnected processes, would be chaotic!"

Call 617-722-2000 for your State Senator and State Representative. Let them know your opinion on marriage!

South Coastal Bank $500 Grant Benefits Sacred Heart School

South Coastal Bank announces the Sacred Heart School PTO in Quincy has been awarded a $500 grant from its South Coastal Bank C.A.R.E.S. community giving program.

Committed to enriching the lives of children in the communities it serves, South Coastal Bank specifically designed C.A.R.E.S. to help local not-for-profit groups promote and encourage a sense of Community, Achievement, Responsibility and Excellence in children through exposure to the arts.

Serving students in kindergarten through grade eight, the Sacred Heart School PTO works to enhance the children's educational experience by raising funds to subsidize cultural arts programs not provided for by the school budget. C.A.R.E.S. funding was put toward two after school enrichment programs: the Masterpiece Art Club, which introduces an artist to students and has them produce artwork in that artist's style; and The Patriot Heart Newspaper Club, which provides hands-on experience in writing, editing and producing a newspaper.

For more information on South Coastal Bank C.A.R.E.S. or to download an application, visit South Coastal Bank's Web site, www.southcoastalbank.com, or contact community liaison Susan Lincoln at 781-681-7206.

Roydon Burke Photography Exhibit At Crane Library

An exhibit of black and white photography by the late Roydon Burke of Quincy will be displayed June 5-30 in the Coletti Reading Room of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

A public reception June 13 from 6-8:30 p.m. will include a slide presentation on the six generations of the Burke family, some of whom still live in the family home on Adams Street. The slide presentation will begin at 7 p.m. in the community meeting room.

Burke's photographs, often scenes of solitude, were shot in the 1950s and 1960s within a 10-mile radius of Quincy. Many of the photographs were taken at night and depict local scenes, from the snow-laden tree branches of Glendale Road to the ghostly outline of a young woman waiting on the platform of the old Atlantic train station.

A mostly self-taught photographer who developed prints in his bathroom darkroom, Burke became internationally known with 11 invitational one-man shows, prints exhibited in 34 countries, and many awards and honors for his unique images. He died in 1993 at the age of 91.

At the slide presentation June 13, librarians Linda Beeler and Mary Clark will tell the story of how an email query received last spring, led them on a historical treasure hunt that has reunited two long-lost family members, revealed the story of an attempted murder/suicide in a rented room, and brought renewed interest in Roydon Burke's photography. And the connection between Dr. John A. Gordon, Quincy's first town physician who immigrated from Prince Edward Island in the 1970s, and Theophilus King, noted banker and philanthropist and dedicated teetotaler.

For more information about the exhibit, reception or slide presentation, call 617-376-1301 or visit www.thomascranelibrary.org.

Stop & Shop, Red Sox, Mets Team Up In Fight Against Childhood Cancer

The Stop & Shop Supermarket Company based in Quincy is kicking off its "Triple Winner Game" program in an effort to "strike out" childhood cancer.

The program is designed to raise $5 million for the Jimmy Fund and the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center where pioneering lifesaving research and treatment is underway.

Working in cooperation with the Boston Red Sox and the New York Mets, the effort will seek to add to the $32 million previously raised by Stop & Shop associates, customers and suppliers over the past 15 years.

The Triple Game Winner is a scratch card promotion in which every ticket is an instant winner of either a free product, gift card or cash prize up to $10,000. The program, which runs to July 8, allows customers who make a $1 donation in any Stop & Shop store to receive a Triple Winner Game ticket.

Continuing their support and commitment to the program, the Red Sox and Mets are partnering with Stop & Shop to promote Triple Winner at home games to the hundreds of thousands of fans who visit Fenway Park and Shea Stadium this summer.

All money raised from the Triple Winner program in Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Connecticut and Rhode Island will directly benefit the Jimmy Fund and the Stop & Shop Pediatric Brain Tumor Clinic. All money raised from the Triple Winner Game in New York and New Jersey will go to the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center.

Registration For Children's Archaeology Course

Registration will begin Monday, June 5, at 9 a.m. for an introductory course in archaeology for children ages 6 and older at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Participants will dig at a simulated archaeological site, recover artifacts, identify and date them, and discuss how they contribute to the story of what happened at the site.

They should wear clothes suitable for a dirty job and sun screen as the program will take place on the lawn of the Main Library, 40 Washington St., weather permitting.

Registration is required and is limited to Quincy residents. The program is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Don Martin To Receive Koch Youth Service Award

Don Martin, who has dedicated more than 20 years to youth of Quincy volunteering for Quincy Youth Soccer, has been selected to receive the Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award.

The award will be presented Saturday, June 10, at Pageant Field following the 55th annual Flag Day Parade.

Martin was selected to receive the honor based on his years of coaching, refereeing, motivating and instilling the values of sportsmanship and teamwork in the thousands of youngsters that participated in Quincy Youth Soccer during his service.

The award is named for the late Richard J. Koch, founder of the Koch Club and originator of the Flag Day Parade and Celebration when it was first held in Quincy 54 years ago.

"Don has committed endless hours to the youngsters of our city through his dedication to Quincy Youth Soccer," said Thomas P. Koch, director of the Koch Club and chairman of the Flag Day Committee. "Countless kids have been fortunate enough to enjoy Don's instruction and guidance which benefits them both on and off the field."

Martin is married to Quincy native Maryann Trubiano and they have three children, Michael, Leanne and Colleen, and a granddaughter, Nyxanna.

His son, Michael, recently returned home from serving in Iraq and will be honored along with other returning Iraqi veterans from Quincy and those who served with the 102nd Army National Guard Battalion, the Grand Marshal for this year's parade and celebration.

In addition to his involvement with Quincy Youth Soccer, Martin is active in St. Joseph's Parish where he taught CCD for 12 years. He currently serves as the head coach of the Quincy High School girls' varsity soccer team.

For more information on the Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration, contact the Quincy Park Department at 617-376-1251.

'Organized Crime' Topic At Luncheon June 1

The Norfolk and Plymouth Estate and Business Planning Council will hold their annual Luncheon Meeting June 1 at noon, at Lantana in Randolph.

Tickets are $45 for members and $50 for non-members.

Steven Clark Fund Benefit June 9

A benefit sponsoring medical treatment for Steven Clark, a Quincy native, will be held June 9 at 7 p.m. at Adams Heights, 63 Bower Rd.

The benefit will help to pay for medications and expenses not covered by his insurance.

Clark was diagnosed with a malignant tumor in his leg in 1995. He underwent surgery that removed the tumor, and a large portion of his calf. He was treated with chemotherapy for a year and underwent rehabilitation to relearn how to walk.

In March of 2003 his cancer returned in the form of Chronic Myeloid Leukemia. He underwent a bone marrow transplant, with his brother as the marrow donor, and was hospitalized in an isolation unit for over a month. Complications from the transplant led to liver disease. Treatments for this disease caused steroid induced diabetes, and he now suffers from bone degeneration disorder.

As a result, one of Clark's hips collapsed, and he was hospitalized for a month before returning to rehab for another month and a half. Clark now needs two hip replacements, but can not undergo the procedure for a year due to infection in his hip, which can eventually spread.

Clark was confined to a wheelchair, but has struggled to walk with a walker, and only use the chair when absolutely necessary.

Clark's friends and Quincy native fiancé, Joanna Rapalje, credit him with an incredible will to live, a love of life, and ongoing strength and courage.

Tickets are $15, though any donation is appreciated.

Checks can be made payable to the Steven Clark Fund, 733 R East Broadway number 2, South Boston, MA 02127.

For information about the event, or to donate auction items, call Amy Caprigne at 617-512-3582, Susan Egan at 617-620-0734, Linda Ellis at 617-966-2102 Diane Jeffers at 617-821-4808 or Joanna Rapalje at 857-939-8198.

All menu items except children's items, are available for take-out for an extra .25 take-out-out charge.

Part Of Operation Day's Work

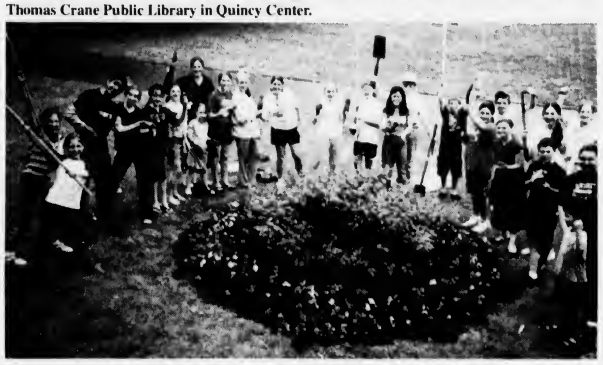
Broad Meadows Students Plant Peace Garden At Crane Library

Broad Meadows Middle School sixth graders recently planted a Children's Peace Gardens at the Thomas Crane Public Library as part of Operation Day's Work.

Operation Day's Work (ODW) is a fairly new, national, student-run project co-founded by Broad Meadows Middle School students to combine global service with local service, said teacher Ron Adams. Each school year, the students in ODW "work one day" to perform community service projects that beautify Quincy.

Students utilize pledge sheets to collect pledge money for each hour of ODW community service performed. That "day's pay" is then donated by each student to an education project in a different developing country. The project to be funded is chosen by student vote each December.

Nationwide, about 1,000 students in 14 schools belong to ODW. Each student donates their "day's pay" of about $30 and enough funds are collected to educate and protect hundreds of poor children each school year.



In ODW, two communities each year are aided. This year's ODW project is to educate and protect 1,532 orphans in Rwanda as well as to plant flowers in each ODW school community, Adams explained. The flowers planted at the Children's Peace Garden at the library were donated by the Fitzmaurice Family, the Callahan Family, the Sullivan Family, the McDonagh Family and Helen's Flower Shoppe.

About one hundred students at Quincy High School, North Quincy High School and Broad Meadows Middle School belong to ODW. The ODW chapters at Quincy High School and North Quincy High School were founded by Broad Meadows Middle School graduates.

"It's amazing what students can do in a day," Adams said.

Dynamic Downtown Changes Spur Woodward Expansion Plan

Ward 5 City Councillor Doug Gutro was scheduled to host a neighborhood meeting last night (Wednesday) at 7 p.m. to examine and discuss renovation and expansion plans by the Woodward School for Girls, 1102 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The meeting was to be held at the Woodward School and consist of a presentation by school administrators and their consultants of plans that include a two-story addition with new science and computer labs and a full-sized gym.

"The combination of Woodward's success and Quincy Center's dynamic changes convinces our Board of Trustees that now is the time for the School to make a substantial investment in the downtown Quincy area," said Headmaster Thomas L. Wesner in a letter to Gutro.

Wesner noted that the school, which was founded in 1894 under the will of Dr. Ebenezer Woodward, had not expanded in three quarters of a century. The new plan, he said, would not "intrude upon our neighbors" and would "maintain the historic integrity of the Woodward School."

"The new two-story addition will include state of the art science and computer laboratories, improved activity space, new learning space, fire protection upgrades and handicapped access improvements," he said.

"For Woodward to stay competitive in the market of college preparatory schools, the new full-size gymnasium (replacing our half-court) will allow us to match the quality of our athletic program with our scholastic program.

"Our intent is not to grow the school substantially, in fact, we only expect to increase the current student population by 40-50 students, which the existing school building could accommodate. This increase would take place over the next three to four years."

ARTIST'S CONCEPT of a renovated and expanded Woodward School for Girls would look like this to a traveler going south on Hancock Street toward Quincy Center.

'Welcome Home' Monument To Honor Troops

The location is still undecided, but the Fore River Shipyard is under consideration.

Once completed, the monument will stand over seven feet tall, mounted on a three foot granite stone.

The monument "Welcome Home" honors returning soldiers, whereas most monuments honor troops lost in battle.

The project was funded by local citizens, spearheaded by Mike Cooley of the Quincy Auto Auction.

An 18 inch marquette representing what the monument will look like is available for viewing on the website.

Construction cost estimates are between $80,000 and $100,000.

Volunteers Repairing Houghs Neck Public Landing Float

By MIKAELA SLANEY

A float at Houghs Neck is currently under repair through volunteerism by Houghs Neck and Quincy Housing Authority YouthBuild Program.

"The float was in need of replanking and redecking," said Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, who participated and served as the intermediate, joining the participating groups.

Weather permitting, the 25 foot by 40 foot float should be available by June, he said.

"We may have it in place sooner than in previous years," said Kelly.

Once repaired, the float may be used recreationally by swimmers, and as a public landing.

The project was funded by a fundraising by Maritime Center of Houghs Neck, and appropriations from the city, through the efforts of Kelly and Mayor William Phelan.

Among the participants were:

Patrick Kalinowski, John Payton, YouthBuild training coordinator Tom Shruhan, Harry Olson, David Fitzgerald and John Chenette, who served as chairman of the fundraiser, and oversaw volunteers, and Frank Whitty, Housing Authority modernization director and director for the YouthBuild Program, which provides training for future union carpenters.

Jay McRichie, housing director for Germantown Beach authorized using the beach to barrack the float.

"This is a program that shows how well the city and the community can work together and achieve unlimited success in many programs," said Kelly.

"Working together (they) can accomplish anything."

Permit Granted For Breast Cancer Walk

The License Board granted a one day permit to Paula Goldfarb for a three day breast cancer walk benefiting the Susan G. Korman Foundation.

Korman's sister set up the foundation after Susan Korman died of breast cancer

Paula Goldarb said the walk will include 2200 walkers and will begin Aug. 4 in Framingham and end in Boston Aug. 6. It will pass through Quincy on Aug. 6 on the way to Boston for the closing ceremonies. In all they will walk 60 miles over the course of three days.

Goldfarb said the walkers will begin at 6:45 a.m. and walk until 4 p.m. at their "own pace."

The walkers will stay at the Cross Farm in Canton as their campsite where they will be able to shower, have hot meals, medical services, and everything they need to rest up safely for the next day's journey.

Police Chief Robert Crowley said that since the route in Quincy which goes through Furnace Brook Pkwy., Adams Street and Quincy Shore Drive is state owned that Goldfarb notify state p[olice. He gave her the contact name of Lt. Brian Tobin.

Net proceeds will support crucial breast cancer research, education, screening and treatment.

Fire Department Study Cites Problems

aspect."

"We've lost 14 men in the last four years out of the budget."

After a visit to inspect fire station conditions, "I went down to the Houghs Neck station three or four times, and there was never anyone there to show me around," said Ward 1 councillor Leo Kelly.

"Arienti said the Fire Study Committee shares concerns over open asbestos in the stations.

"There are issues of asbestos," he said. "We feel that's a number one priority," "What we're looking for is the safety of the men on the job. We're trying to prioritize what needs to be done,"

"That's a major safety concern," said Bowes.

"We need to focus on the health, safety and welfare of the firefighters and those they are sworn to protect. We need to ensure that facilities, equipment and training are the best we can afford to provide for them," said Coughlin.

At a Nov. 14 City Council meeting Bowes met before the council as the president of the Quincy Firefighters Association of the Local 792. He addressed his concerns over poor living conditions in the stations including leaking, open asbestos, and a fireman falling through a broken staircase at the Wollaston station.

"Mike Ryan was questioned, but never came back," Arienti said of the Nov. 14 meeting where Ryan, director of Building Construction, addressed council to update them on the repairs scheduled for the six local fire stations, and their headquarters.

"The staircase wasn't fixed at the Wollaston station. The men at the station nailed down the boards," said Arienti.

"We got two new roofs that aren't legit work," said Bowes. "Even when they implement the improvements, the work is sub-par."

"Nothing has been done to the exterior of headquarters. Companies came to give them a price, but that's all that was done," said Arienti.

"From what I've heard about the Houghs Neck station I would like to see it worked on," said Kelly.

The report includes a controversial suggestion to closing the Germantown and Quincy Point fire stations, and open a new station between the two near the intersection of Sea Street and Palmer Street.

"We don't agree with the priorities of the study. We disagree with the closing of engines three and eight," said Arienti.

"That's not something that anyone on the committee, at least from my perspective, will support," said Coughlin. "The recommendation loses sight of public safety concerns, especially because of the development of the shipyard."

"The citizens will be losing services to put this in effect," said Arienti.

"I'm dead against that, absolutely opposed to that," said Kelly. "The Germantown and Houghs Neck stations have been serving people without problems for years. If it's not broken don't try to fix it."

Arienti also said that there is currently no rescue truck available due to lack of funding for additional workers to man the truck.

"We do not agree with having no rescue truck in the city. It's out of service 90 percent of the time," said Arienti. "I feel that's a major safety concern for the firemen and citizens."

The report also suggests the establishment of new positions in the fire department, including an Assistant Chief, an Assistant Chief, Operations Division, an Assistant Chief, Support and Staff Services Division, a Safety/EMS Officer and a Planning and Research Officer.

Arienti said the Fire Study Committee agreed that although new positions would be beneficial, if money is a concern, repair of the stations remains a foregoing concern.

Major claims of the study include:

• The need to redesign the organization of the fire department and develop systems to ensure that command personnel are accountable.

• The current organization structure places a burden on the Fire Chief and limits the ability of the Chief to plan for the future of the department. There are not enough staff officers to effectively operate the department.

• There is a need for the city to consider a redesign of the emergency communication system.

• The facilities of the Fire Department are in such poor condition that the ultimate rehabilitation and repair costs may be prohibitive.

• The fire department lacks a systematic training and professional development strategy which builds the practical skills of personnel, and supervisory and management capability of officers.

• The department does not have a comprehensive set of standard operating guidelines or procedures (SOGs or SOPs).

• The full emergency medical capability of the Quincy Fire Department is not coordinated sufficiently with other emergency medical resources.

MMA Consulting Group suggested organization of the Fire Department and its command structure, the establishment of an emergency communication system within the city, improvements in the conditions of the station, and the internal communications through the chain of command.

According to the study, the Headquarters Station has cracked floors where water and salt will eventually weaken the concrete slab, and temporary adjustable jack columns are used in some of the more deteriorated areas.

On site oil and gasoline tanks are abandoned underground. All of the windows need to be replaced. The interior floor tiles most likely contain asbestos. Unventilated wet cell batteries used for backup power are in the basement, when they should be isolated and vented to the exterior. The electrical system is in fair to poor condition.

The West Quincy Fire Station is structurally sound, with exception of deteriorating flooring. The condition of the roof is poor, and replacement is recommended.

The Wollaston Fire Station is the oldest, built in 1900, and at the busy intersection of Beale Street and Newport Avenue. The lower roof allows water to penetrate the mortar in the brick wall bellow. This condition appears to have been present for years. Plaster has fallen off of the interior adjacent walls. Some floor coverings appear to be asbestos tile. Complete systemic replacement of plumbing is recommended. Most pipe insulation is asbestos air cell type insulation. The electrical system is in poor condition with the exception of the new main disconnect panel.

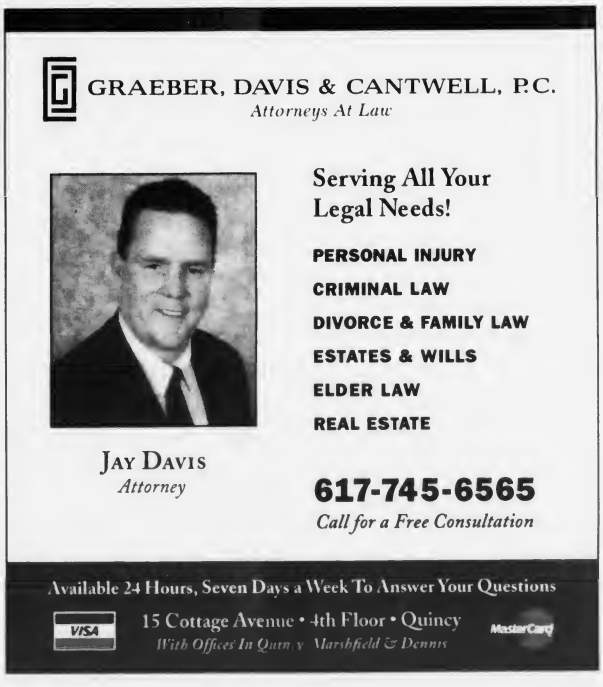
The North Quincy Station has settled pavement which despite efforts to maintain it, is cracked. Window frames lack, or have ineffective, weather stripping. At least two inches of water was trapped on the roof due to having the only drainage not in the lowest point of the roof.

The Squantum Fire Station has a moisture problem caused by poor exterior grading and rain water from the roof. Leakage from the lavatory and showers is evident on the lower floor ceiling.

The Houghs Neck Fire Station has windows that are in poor condition, with second floor ceilings that are deteriorated due to active roof leaks. All floor coverings are in poor condition. The plumbing system is mostly original and in need of replacement. The heating system is done through steam radiation, and heat recovery in the winter is quite slow after the doors are opened. The electric system is inadequate in capacity.

The Quincy Point Fire Station has plumbing and electrical systems that needs replacement.

The Germantown Fire Station is in good relatively good condition. According to Kelly, the city is going to take over the Germantown Station. "The building itself is owned by the Housing Authority. They're looking into giving the building to the city. I think they feel the city should be taking care of it."



"I think everyone involved agrees there's going to have to be money put into these stations. It's just a process of finding the money and implementing those changes," said Bowes

"There are long-term and short term goals. We need to determine what is doable," said Coughlin.

Gutro, Kelly Support 'No Discharge Area' For Quincy Waters

City Council President Doug Gutro and Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly support pursuing the designation of Quincy Coastal Waters as a federal No Discharge Area.

"As summer approaches, all eyes turn to the water," said Gutro who is chairman of the Wollaston Beach Task Force. "With 27 miles of coastline, public beaches, may yacht clubs and marinas, our coastal resources are vital not just for recreational activities, but economic growth. That's why we want to work with the boating community to earn the designation of a No Discharge area for Quincy coastal waters.

"In the 1980s, the city of Quincy established itself as an environmental leader when it led the fight to clean up Boston Harbor. Today, we can bring it to another level by being the first Boston Harbor community to pursue the designation of a no-discharge zone for Quincy's coastal waters."

Kelly, who chairs the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, Said "Thanks to sewer upgrades throughout coastal areas across the city, we have seen dramatic improvements to water quality along our beaches and throughout our bay. I can tell you with confidence that Quincy boaters see these benefits first hand. Most boaters are good environmental stewards and will understand that this designation will only improve recreational opportunities along our coastline."

Currently, recreational boats are not required to be equipped with a toilet, but if they are, their marine sanitation device must be Coast Guard approved. The approved design holds sewage for shore based disposal or treats the sewage prior to discharge. However, boats entering a No Discharge must secure their marine sanitation device to prevent discharge by either closing their seacock and padlocking it, using a non-releasable wire tie, using a door handle lock or removing the seacock handle, with the seacock closed.

Gutro said that the Massachusetts Coastal Zone Management Agency, NDAs are important because they prevent the discharge of boat sewage in sensitive areas. Sewage wastes discharged from boats can contain microorganisms (bacteria, viruses, and protozoans), nutrients, and chemical products. All of these have harmful effects upon aquatic life directly or by degrading water quality.

This spring, Gutro and Kelly and Patrick Morrissey, Quincy Harbormaster, have been meeting with executive boards of various yacht clubs to provide an update on water quality improvements and solicit support for the designation of Quincy Coastal Waters as a No-Discharge Area, as well as discuss the prospect of new pump out stations along the city's coastline.

More and more coastal communities are pursuing this designation, they said, Nantucket, Waquoit Bay Wellfleet, Chatham, Harwich, and Barnstable have earned the designation. Plymouth, Duxbury and Kingston expect to be designated a No-Discharge area this summer. All Rhode Island coastal waters, Buzzards Bay, and a third of Connecticut coastlines already are designated as such.

In 1999, the Wollaston Beach Task Force issued recommendations to improve water quality along Wollaston Beach and Quincy Bay. The NDZ designation was among those recommendations. Through combined efforts of the city and state, many Task Force recommendations to improve coastal water quality have been implemented; including $30 million in sewer improvement: replacement of more than 160 catch basins along Quincy Shore Drive, enacting an ordinance which makes it illegal to discharge sewage into the city's storm drain system; and seasonal restrictions for dogs on city beaches.

Milton Hospital's John Looney, M.D. Receives Award For Physician Excellence

John J. Looney, M.D. was recently honored as the recipient of the 2006 Lira Family Award for Physician Excellence at Milton Hospital.

Dr. Looney was selected for his commitment to medicine and his involvement in hospital and community activities by his peers. He received the award during a recent Sunday service at the Parkway Methodist Church in Milton.

JOHN J. LOONEY, M.D.

The Lira Family Award for Physician Excellence at Milton Hospital was established by the late Hugo "Baron" Lira in his last will and testament. He asked that the Parkway Methodist Church, of which he was a dedicated member, use a portion of his estate to annually recognize an outstanding Milton Hospital physician and that the fund be memorialized in the name of the Lira family. The Baron built a strong relationship with hospital employees and medical staff by contributing over 6,000 hours of volunteer work until his death in 1992.

Dr. Looney spent two weeks in New Orleans, Louisiana last year during the Hurricane Katrina relief effort. A member of the FEMA's Disaster Management Assistance Team (DMAT), Dr. Looney manned a temporary emergency room set up outside West Jefferson Medical Center. He described a very busy experience, with a constant flow of disaster victims in need of emergency medical care, and a strong police and military presence.

Dr. Looney is also active in the training of medical students. His Milton-based primary care practice participates in Northeastern University's physician assistant training program, and regularly hosts medical students from Boston University and Tufts University to assist in primary care rounds.

A staff member at Milton Hospital since 1993 and a member of the Milton Hospital Corporation, Dr. Looney earned his medical degree from St. George's University School of Medicine in Grenada. He performed his internship and residency at St. Mary's Hospital/Yale Primary Care in Waterbury, CT, and completed a fellowship in General Medicine at Carney Hospital in Dorchester. He is board certified in Internal Medicine.

Dr. Looney participates in several medical staff committees at Milton Hospital, serving as Chairman of the Program and Library Committee, and as a member of the Clinical Care Committee, By-Laws and Accreditation Committee and Ethics Committee.

"I was shocked to receive this award," Dr. Looney said.

Merrymount Park.

"We are thrilled that more Quincy residents will get to enjoy this beautiful and important part of our city's great history," Phelan said. "The new location will allow for people to enjoy the amazing craftsmanship of our city's granite industry, the finest in all the world. We are quite proud of our history and this feature will help us celebrate a vital part of the industry that, along with shipbuilding, helped shape our community."

In recent years the ball was not very visible at the Fore River rotary. Due to the hazardous nature of the location, it is being relocated so that people may walk right up to it and see their reflection in what is often called the "gazing ball."

Registration Starts June 7 For Summer Sports, Workshops

The Quincy Recreation Department announces its Summer Sports Clinics and Instructional Workshops Programs will have 27 offerings for the summer school vacation program.

In a testimonial to the programs' popularity, there will be a new mail-in registration procedure to avoid the long lines traditionally formed for the first-come, first-served process.

On June 19, the department will have walk-in registration for programs that still have openings. The walk-in registration will continue throughout the summer. Brochures with the registration forms will continue to be sent home through the school system.

Registration forms may be photocopied and can be printed off the city Web site's Recreation Department link. Those with questions or who wish additional registration forms may also contact the Recreation Department 617-376-1394.

A Job Well Done

On May 22, at approximately 4:50 a.m., Officer Robert Sweetland was dispatched to Burgin Parkway to investigate a past break into a dwelling.

LT. DAN MINTON

Upon arrival, he met with the caller, who stated he and his roommate were awakened by loud banging at the rear door. They looked out the window and saw a male (suspect) trying to pry open the door leading to the basement. After the banging stopped, the caller went outside and observed the top panel of the rear door had been pushed in.

He spotted the suspect in the driveway and confronted him. The caller said he observed that the suspect's pants were ripped and his head was bleeding. When asked what he was doing there, the suspect said he was looking for "Mike," then fled towards Quincy Center.

Officer Sweetland broadcast a description of the suspect to all units and minutes later, Officer James Parisi found a person matching the description at the corner of Coddington and Newcomb streets.

Officer Parisi observed the suspect appeared very nervous and when asked where he was going, the suspect responded, "I didn't do anything." The suspect kept changing his story as to his whereabouts, first stating he was coming from the train station, then coming from a friend's house to leaving the hospital.

Sergeant Mark Kennedy arrived on scene and notified Officer Sweetland, who brought the caller/witness to the suspect's location for a "show-up" procedure. The person, standing visible and not handcuffed, was immediately identified as the suspect by the caller/witness, who made the spontaneous declaration he was the person who broke into his house. The suspect was arrested and transported to the station for booking.

Officer Sweetland returned to the primary crime scene to collect evidence. He found the window to the basement had been broken and the glass on the ground had blood on it. He also found a pair of pliers with blood on the grips.

Based on the available evidence, Officer Sweetland determined the suspect entered the home through a basement window, went up stairs and attempted to get through a door leading to the first-floor apartment hallway. It is believed the suspect cut himself on the cellar window after exiting the basement.

Officer Sweetland checked the motor vehicles in the parking lot and found a pick-up truck that belonged to the suspect. There were numerous tools and a doorknob in the bed of the truck. There was also a sledgehammer and shovel against the doorway that the caller had not seen before.

As he checked the area, Officer Sweetland also noticed the doorknob at the rear of a neighboring building had been knocked off and the door panel had been pushed in. The shovel also showed two slash type marks on it as if being used to pry something open.

Sergeant Kennedy responded to the scene and photographed the crime scene, while Officer Sweetland bagged and tagged the glass, pliers and shovel as evidence.

The suspect, a 45-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with "Breaking and Entering into a Building." Nice work!

Brighten Home Sale Prospects

(NAPS) One way to shine in a competitive housing market is to create a good first impression.

According to home-selling experts, some quick tips for speeding up this process include burning candles during open houses, filling the home with the aroma of fresh-baked cookies and hanging a wreath on the front door.

Home-improvement experts say that investing several thousand dollars in new kitchen countertops or a bathroom remodel will give the home a whole new look and that the entire investment will most likely be recouped.

A quick fix can make a significant difference, but spending a fortune is not necessary, said experts at lighting control manufacturer Lutron Electronics. An inexpensive yet effective way to increase a home's curb appeal while adding value for its next owner: add dimmers in key rooms of the home.

Priced from just $10, dimmers can completely change the look and feel of a room while adding ambiance and creating moods, not to mention saving energy and increasing the life of lightbulbs. Plus, listings can include a mention of the dimmers, which may differentiate it from the rest.

Dimmers can improve the mood in large and small homes. Cramped for space? A dimmer turns a family room into a home theater, a homework station and a workout room, while an eat-in kitchen can be transformed into a romantic dinner-for-two paradise, just by adjusting the lights.

Want to really be a standout in the market? Add a wireless, whole-home lighting control system that allows people to turn lights on and off from their car, bed, patio or any room of the home. This type of system significantly increases home value while providing added safety benefits, such as tying in with a security system.

Adding dimmers is truly a quick fix, requiring less than 15 minutes for installation time. For help, Lutron offers a free, 24-hour seven-day technical support center.

Dimmers are available nationwide at home improvement centers and lighting showrooms.

Visit www.lutron.com for more information.

Quincy Sweeps Twin-Bill; Clinches Tourney Berth

SOFTBALL

The Quincy High School softball team had plenty to cheer about last Saturday at Mitchell/McCoy Field.

In a doubleheader, the Presidents cruised to a 13-3 win over Randolph in the first game to end a three-game losing skid and clinch a berth in the state tournament for the fifth straight season.

In the second game, they pulled out a 2-0 win over cross-town rival North Quincy to win the city's Mary Pratt Championship trophy.

Against Randolph, senior Erika Berg pitched a complete game for the win. Senior tri-captain Kim Lebel went 3-for-4 with three RBI to power the offense and senior tri-captain Leanna Lam went 2-for-5 with two stolen bases.

In the North Quincy game, senior Theresa MacConochie fired a four-hit shutout to outduel sophomore Paige Bonanni. The Presidents managed to push across runs in the first and sixth innings.

While Quincy will be playing in the postseason, North Quincy finished up the year strong under first-year coach Mike Connor with a 7-11 overall record.

The Red Raiders, who had a chance to make the tournament in the final week, expect to reach the playoffs next year as it graduates only four seniors.

"I think it was a great season," Connor said. "I'm glad I took over as coach. We have great young ladies on the team. The future definitely is bright for the lady Red Raiders.

"At the start of the season we were hoping to get wins and then we made a tourney run. Next year I think we should be a tournament team."

North Quincy suffered a 5-1 loss to Plymouth North last Monday but bounced back the following day with a 7-2 win over Hull as Bonanni tossed a one-hitter.

Ahead 2-0, the Red Raiders broke the game open with a five-run fifth inning, highlighted by sophomore Catherine Feeney's two-run triple. Feeney, who was out all year with an ankle injury, went 2-for-3 in her first game back.

North Quincy fell to Whitman-Hanson, 15-8, last Wednesday but again rebounded with a come-from-behind 4-3 win over Dennis-Yarmouth to knock the Dolphins out of the state tournament.

Trailing 3-2 in the bottom of the seventh, sophomore Simone Leary scored the tying run before freshman Brittany Folkins lined a two-out game-winning single for the Red Raiders' third walk-off win at home this year.

North Quincy placed two players on the Atlantic Coast League all-star team: senior captain Kelly Barden and sophomore catcher Kerry Coughlin, both of whom finished in the top five in hitting.

Freshman Siobhan Carnell and sophomore Kasey O'Connell were honorable mentions. Senior Jessica Man earned the sportsmanship award and the team won the league sportsmanship award.

Brian Hughes Helps U.S. Win Silver Medal In Amputee Ice Hockey

Brian Hughes helped the United States grab the silver medal in the recent International Standing Amputee Ice Hockey World Championship in Riga, Latvia.

Hughes, a 16-year-old forward who was born without a right hand and forearm, netted a team-high six goals in six games, tied for third overall in the tournament.

A sophomore at Bridgewater-Raynham High School, he is the son of Jim and Peggy (Comer) Hughes of Bridgewater and grandson of John "Jake" Comer of Quincy, past national commander of the American Legion.

Hughes, standing nearly 6 feet 4 inches, is the youngest member of the U.S. National Amputee Team, which includes several players in their 30s and 40s.

The U.S. defeated the Czech Republic, Finland, Latvia and Russia by a combined score of 30-5 before falling to Canada for the second time in the final, 5-2. It's looking to compete for the gold medal in the 2010 Paralympic Games in Vancouver.

The national team also has several South Shore connections. Scituate's Scott Harrington laces up his skates while Braintree's David Chandonnet is the team manager, Hanover's Greig Martino is the prosthetist, and Weymouth's John Hopey and Michael Hopey are the equipment managers.

Jim and Peggy first learned they would have a baby with a birth defect 17 weeks into her pregnancy. Troubled at first, Peggy, formerly of Quincy and an accreditation manager for the Norfolk County Sheriff's Department, and Jim, an operations manager at Archimedes Systems in Waltham, learned of similar families through the Helping Hands support group.

At 8 years old, Hughes decided to abandon the various prosthetic arms and hands and hone his skills with one arm. And all that work has paid off as he is a standout, and an inspiration, at B-R.

He played on the fourth line this past season for the varsity hockey team after leading the JV squad in scoring during his freshman year. He is also a pitcher and first baseman on the JV baseball team.

Presidents Playing Best Ball Of Season

BASEBALL

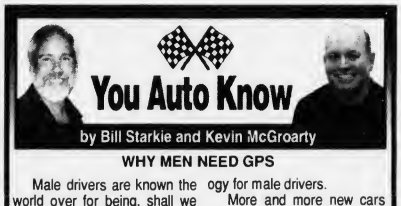
By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School baseball team has played its best as the 2006 season comes to an end.

The Presidents have won three of their last four games: a 4-3 win at O'Bryant May 20, a 6-2 home victory over Plymouth North last Monday, a 10-7 triumph at Brighton last Tuesday and a 5-2 home loss to Sandwich last Thursday.

The Quincy-North Quincy showdown scheduled for last Friday night was rained out and was played yesterday (Wednesday, 6:30 p.m.) at Adams Field.

"We've been pretty hot," said head coach Mike Draicchio, whose team is 5-14 overall, 1-10 in the league. "The kids have been playing well. Everyone is contributing. I can't ask for a better situation as we finish out the season. It's very promising for our team next year, especially with the way the younger kids are stepping up."



The victory over Plymouth North was the program's first under Draicchio and it also knocked the Blue Eagles out of the race for the Atlantic Coast League championship, which was captured by Whitman-Hanson.

Junior pitcher Dan Myers allowed the two runs on only four hits in a dominant complete-game performance.

Quincy tied the game at 1 in the second inning when senior Jon Pelletier's fielder's choice scored junior all-star Steve Connolly.

After Plymouth North went ahead 2-1 in the fourth, the Presidents responded with three runs in the bottom half on RBI singles by Connolly and sophomores

WHY MEN NEED GPS

Male drivers are known the world over for being, shall we say, "reluctant" to ask for directions when they are lost. The latest evidence of the gender-specific trait comes from a British study that shows that male drivers lose about six million hours on the road annually because they stubbornly refuse to ask for directions. According to a survey by the Royal Automobile Club Direct Insurance, men wait an average 20 minutes before giving up and asking for directions; their female counterparts wait half that amount of time to do so. Beyond that, nearly two-thirds of couples admitted to having arguments over being lost on the road. Surely, a global positioning system (GPS) is the perfect technology for male drivers.

More and more new cars come equipped with GPS navigation, which can only lead to fewer arguments between couples. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we can give you advice regarding GPS systems. There are many options for GPS navigation, ranging from simple text versions, to graphical maps which chart your progress in real time. If you have questions regarding GPS, stop by 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, or call 781-843-1550. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: According to the survey mentioned above, satellite navigation systems were used by about 20 percent of drivers.

North Shuts Down Durfee

BOYS' VOLLEYBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

Head coach Jim Rendle said he was concerned about North Quincy having to face Durfee for the third time this season in last Thursday's first-round South Sectional boys' volleyball match.

After close 3-0 wins in the first two meetings during the regular season, the Red Raiders put Rendle's fears to rest with a commanding 3-0 victory, winning by scores of 25-13, 25-13, 25-20.

"I was concerned that having already played them twice would hurt us because they know us and how to stop us," said Rendle, whose team has won nine straight. "But it ended up not hurting us and I was pleased with that. We won a great match. We played very well and we kind of dominated them."

No. 5 North Quincy (14-5) advanced to the quarterfinals yesterday (Wednesday, 7 p.m.) at No. 4 New Bedford (17-3). The teams split during the regular season, with New Bedford cruising at home and the Red Raiders pulling out a close one on Hancock Street.

The Red Raiders, who have made the tournament in all three years under Rendle, were knocked out in the first round last year by Catholic Memorial.

Senior Imad Elkatrib powered North Quincy's offense with 21 kills. The Red Raiders also received strong net play from senior outside hitters Albert Luu and Danny Cen and sophomore outside hitter Dennis Martin.

"They didn't have that many kills, but they controlled the ball at the net and let Imad put it down when the play called for it," Rendle said. "Durfee is a defensive team and we hit very intelligent and limited our errors."

Seniors Anthony Black and Harvey Sham stood out defensively with five blocks apiece, while Sham also tallied 25 assists as the setter.

North Quincy also got a great defensive effort out of the back row, which included sophomore Phuoc Nguyen, junior Danny Sok and senior libero Victor Sok.

"I was real pleased with our overall play," Rendle said. "It was good team volleyball. We made a few errors at the beginning of the first and third games that let them play with us for a while. We pretty much dominated at the net. We did a good job of spreading the offense around but Imad was the main kill man."

Presidents Playing Best Ball Of Season

Mike Lebel and Ricky Salvucci (3-for-3).

Quincy tacked on a pair of runs in the sixth. Junior Steve Kussman had a pinch-hit RBI double and junior Mike Leone knocked in the other run with a sacrifice fly. Senior all-star Joe Griffin went 2-for-4.

Against Sandwich, Quincy had runners on base in every inning but couldn't come through with the timely hit.

Tips To Achieve A Healthy Diet

By Dr. JAY PROVENZANO

South Bay Chiropractic offered some easy to follow health guidelines to simplify grocery shopping.

• Choose simple organic whole foods. Those that Mother Nature has provided.

• Eat them in their natural form, or as close to it as possible. Less processing generally means more nutritional value.

• Eat a wide variety of these minimally-processed, whole natural foods as possible. This maximizes exposure to various nutrients while minimizing repeated exposure to potential contaminants like pesticides and insecticides.

• Pay attention to ensuring sufficient high-quality, low-fat proteins, (anti-biotic and hormone-free chicken, turkey and fresh caught fish). Balance protein with two or three cups of low-starch vegetables as often as possible.

• Be moderate with starch intake. Stick to the less processed whole grains and whole vegetables.

• Balance starches and carbohydrates with quality proteins.

• Be sure to get at least three pieces or servings (1/2-1 cup) of fresh fruit and at least four to six cups of fresh vegetables daily.

• Reduce animal fats (fatty meats, dairy fats) and eliminate dehydrogenated oils, trans fats, and processed vegetable oils (all dried foods, margarines, commercial salad dressings, oils, sauces, confectioneries and baked goods). Instead, substitute monounsaturated oils for low-heat stir-fries, light sautéing, salad dressings and baking (olive oil and almond oils) and Omega three rich, properly-shielded (from air, light and heat) oils, such as flax, pumpkin and walnut for salad dressings and sauces. These nutritious oils are not to be cooked.

• Drink at least eight glasses of pure water daily. Substitute herbal and naturally decaffeinated teas for caffeinated beverages and sodas (including chemical containing "diet" drinks), rice, almond and soy milk for pasteurized milk.

This may require some discipline due to the many food temptations that are available. However, following these steps may help ensure a healthy future.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

A WISE APPROACH?

The wisdom teeth that usually erupt at the back of the jaws between the ages of 17 and 25 often become lodged so firmly in the jawbone that they cannot erupt. If so, the conventional approach has been that the impacted teeth should be extracted to prevent future problems such as damage to, or misalignment of, other teeth. However, in recent years, the thinking has shifted. In fact, there is some evidence to suggest that surgically removing impacted wisdom teeth may actually cause more problems than it prevents. Thus, the current recommendation is not to remove impacted wisdom teeth unless they are decaying, infected, damaging a nearby tooth, or causing similar problems.

Even if you have never had any problems with your wisdom teeth, you should still get them evaluated. We will make suggestions to help you maintain good oral health. Today, life expectancy is projected well into an individual's eighties and beyond. With proper home care and professional supervision, there is no reason why a person can't enjoy the comforts of good dental health well into later life. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we take the time to be gentle and provide the best possible dental care in a friendly and comfortable environment. Triathlon Training

Q. How do I get started training for a triathlon? I currently exercise three days a week and would not consider myself an athlete, but I would like to take on the challenge of training for this event. The problem is that I don't know where to start.

A. Whether a sprint distance or IronMan, triathlons are becoming more and more popular. The endurance events of a triathlon are swimming, running and cycling.

Kim Boere, master personal trainer and USA Triathlon coach, suggests beginning by committing enough time to train. Boere suggests a minimum of four hours a week to devote to training and improving your swimming, running and cycling skills. This commitment will ensure you can safely train your body for the demands of completing a triathlon.

After your commitment to make the time to train, Coach Boere also suggests a few pointers.

• Commit to a race in your area and SIGN UP. The reality of an actual "race day" can help you develop your training schedule and keep you motivated and encouraged. You can find a race in your area through local track/biking clubs, newspapers or Web sites such as active.com.

• Find a race that fits your interests, such as the popular sprint triathlon, made up of shorter stages of a one-quarter to one-half mile swim, 10-12 mile bike, and 2-3 mile run.

• Join a triathlon group or club for support in training and for information about all the details that are important on race day, from choosing a bike, swimming outdoors, transitions and much more. Plus, the camaraderie of other athletes can help keep you on task. Also research triathlons through books and Web sites.

Within your four hours a week of training, Boere suggests you identify the event in which you need the most improvement in technique and efficiency, and seek the expertise of a coach. For example, if you have not swam since summer camp 10 years ago, working on your swimming technique can make you feel more confident and also improve your efficiency and strength in the water.

Other days of training can include total-body strength training two days a week to maintain strength, and getting outside to run and cycle. Find a 5k road race to introduce yourself to running the distances of a sprint triathlon and for the experience of being in a race.

For beginners, it is recommended that you start training at least 12 weeks before race day, while a more active and regular exercisers may be able to prepare in 6-10 weeks. Leave yourself time to meet your goals by planning a schedule and staying on track.

Lastly, Coach Boere reminds beginning triathletes not to become "overzealous." Maintain a safe and healthy training schedule to prevent the effects of overtraining and to prevent injuries.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Following World War I, each of the Allied Powers – United States, Belgium, France, Great Britain, Italy and Portugal – buried one of its unknown dead in the capital, or near it, and made the tomb a shrine in memory of all soldiers killed in the war.

In Westminster Abbey above the body of this unknown man, in lettering inlaid in brass says simply: "Beneath this stone rests the body of a British Warrior unknown by name or rank, brought from France to lie among the most illustrious of the Land." In American in the National Cemetery at Arlington rests the Unknown Soldier of the United States. Under the Arc de Triomphe in Paris rests the Unknown Soldier of France. In the Church of Santa Maria degli Angeli in Rome is the tomb of Italy's Unknown Soldier . . .

We do not know whether the one buried in Arlington was tall or short, fair or dark, a country boy or a city boy. All that we do know is that in the best way in knew, he gave all that he had for his country. . . How indebted we are! . . .

Committee Proposal Sent To Council

Mayor, 47 Others Recommended For Salary Upgrading

By MIKAELA SLANEY

The salaries of the mayor and 47 city employees, most of them high ranking, are recommended for upgrading.

The upgrading, proposed by a Salary Review Committee, was sent to the City Council Monday night by the mayor's office.

The matter was tabled by Councillor Joseph Finn, automatically halting any action until the council's next meeting June 19. It will be the first item on the agenda for that meeting.

The upgrading would be in three steps, beginning July 1, the start of Fiscal Year 07. The next two steps would be at the start of Fiscal Years July 1, 2007 and July 1, 2008.

If the proposed new salary schedule is approved by the City Council, Mayor William Phelan's salary would go from $101,175 to $116,000, $119,196 and $122,474. His salary now is behind other mayors.

Not included in the recommendations are the salaries of Police Chief Robert Crowley and Fire Chief Timothy Pettinelli who now earn $101,158 and would remain at that figure.

The recommended upgrading for the others:

Auditor, Director IT, Planning Director, DPW Commissioner, now $89,603 to $94,900, $97,514, $100,196.

Solicitor now $86,111 to $94,900, $97,514, $100,196.

Director Buildings, Grounds and Maintenance now $67,196 to $91,300, $93,815, $96,395.

Director Parking & Traffic now $80,603 to $85,000, $87,342, $89,744.

Director Oper/Dep Chief of Staff, Purchasing Director now $71,565 to $76,000, $78,094, $80,241.

Mayor Seeks To Close Spear St. Group Home

Mayor William Phelan plans to ask the State Department of Social Services to shut down the group home on Spear Street that many blame for assaults, drugs and vandalism that have plagued the neighborhood.

"The Mayor is meeting with house personnel on June 13," said Dave Murphy, the assistant to the mayor, "and he's writing a letter to the DSS asking them to close the group home. They're unable to control their clients."

Over the past two months, among other things, a man was attacked by rock throwing youths, police chased an alleged drug dealer through the backyards and a Thomas Crane Public Library van was vandalized.

"We have met with them twice," said Murphy, "and asked them to control their clients. They say they're going to try. They make excuses. But nothing is accomplished. It appears that they can't control them.

"We gave them the chance and they have not responded."

Murphy said there have been times when there have been calls to police "from inside the house," meaning that the counselors themselves have needed outside help.

Spear Street is a normally quiet neighborhood between Coddington Street and McGrath Highway on the edge of Quincy Center that is anchored by the library and Bethany Congregational Church.

Two Stung In Police Liquor 'Sting'

The owners of two establishments stung in a police "sting" will appear before the License Board June 20.

Detective Lt. Peter Turowski said the Washington Tap, 609 Washington St., and Kagawa, 1554 Hancock St., sold liquor to a 19-year-old working with police.

He said some 50 locations including pouring establishments and package stores have been checked since the series of stings were announced a few weeks ago.

"The stings will be ongoing throughout the summer," Turowski said.

Assisting him is Officer Ken Yee.

Summer Beach Water Sampling Program To Begin June 14

The Quincy Health Department will begin its summer beach water sampling program Wednesday, June 14.

Water samples will be collected every Wednesday through at least Sept. 6 at 12 beach locations. The results will be analyzed for enterococcus counts by a private laboratory and will be made available to the media throughout the summer months.

The Department of Conservation and Recreation will collect and analyze water samples at four locations along Wollaston Beach. The sample results will be reported to beach managers and the Quincy Health Department by Thursday or Friday of each week.

Quincy will utilize the state standard of 104 or greater enterococci colonies as an indication of potential health risk. Beaches with single sample counts of 104 or greater will be re-sampled and posted with warning signs. Such beaches are considered unsuitable for swimming and the warning signs will remain in place until individual water samples show enterococcus counts below 104.

Once five or more samples have been collected, the geometric mean standard of 35 will be used in addition to the instantaneous sampling result. Beaches with a geometric mean of 35 or greater will be posted.

If a period of rainfall occurs after the water samples are taken each Wednesday, it is important people understand such samples may not represent an accurate reflection of the water quality that will be reported on Fridays.

Samaritans Return Turtle To Butler's Pond In A 'Snap'

SOMEWHAT OUT OF place on the sidewalks of Quincy was this grand old lady - a huge snapping turtle spotted recently walking along Hancock Street near the telephone building. Several people, including Ed Fitzgerald of the Historical Society, saw the turtle who was either slowly making her way to or from the arduous but essential task of burying her eggs at some distance from the water where she hoped birds and other critters wouldn't prey on them.

SEVERAL GOOD SAMARITANS, including Quincy resident Mike Goldrick (above), a "fifth generation Quincyite", got the turtle into a box with great care and caution, as her bite can snap off fingers and her claws were long and sharp.

HOME AGAIN – After a quick car ride, Mike Goldrick sets the snapping turtle free at Butler's Pond where he and a friend believe there are as many as 40 turtles living there. Goldrick has rescued two other turtles in the past.

Beer-Wine License Approved By Board, Residents

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

In an unusual vote without opposition, the License Board Tuesday voted unanimously to issue a beer and wine license to WaleedAl-Shurafa, owner of Tedeschi's, 495 Washington St.

Atty. Stephen McGrath, counsel for Al-Shurafa said there are 11 employees working in the store with some of them having been there for four or five years. He added that all of the employees are over 21 years of age and represent a 'stable staff."

He gave the board a petition with more than 300 names in support of the license. He also showed a schematic as to where the beer and wine would be displayed plus a monitoring system and an ID checking machine.

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi, who has opposed any alcohol requests in the Quincy Point area, and especially on Washington St. favored the license this time.

He said with the history of the area dating back to the 1960's and 1970's that many of his constituents usually opposed any liquor licenses for the area, but this time he said "more favored the license than not."

No one sitting in the City Hall chambers spoke against the issuing of the license.

Proponents said Al-Shurafa runs one of the cleanest stores in the area and runs a tight ship" and also asks for ID's from those purchasing cigarettes.

Liz Johnson, manager of the store asked the board to "give him a chance" and spoke highly of the owner.

Chairman Joseph Shea said he voted against the license two years ago as did Police Chief Robert Crowley and Health Commissioner Drew Scheele.

Crowley said since so many spoke in support as well as Raymondi, he said he would support it this time.

Shea said since he and other board members re-visited the store that they had changed their minds and decided to support the request.

Shea read the only letter against the proposal by Gordon Johnson, who cited an overcrowdedness in the traffic on Wshington St. , and said he thought there were enough stores in the area to purchase alcohol.

Shea said the matter will now go to the Alcohol Beverage Control Commission (ABCC) for approval.

School Budget Hearing Monday

The School Committee will hold a public hearing Monday, June 12, at 6 p.m. at the Parker Suite of the Administrative Annex, 70 Coddington St., on the budget for Fiscal 2007, which is estimated at $120 to $130 million.

All interested persons will have an opportunity to be heard.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On June 10, 1881, Count Leo Tolstoy, author of "War and Peace" (1865-1869), sets off on a pilgrimage to a monastery disguised as a peasant. He had declared that the public owned his works, but his wife gained control of the copyrights for all his work published before 1880.

• On June 7, 1942, the Battle of Midway comes to an end. In the four-day sea and air battle, the outnumbered U.S. Pacific Fleet succeeded in destroying four Japanese aircraft carriers with the loss of only one of its own, the Yorktown.

• On June 5, 1956, Elvis introduces his new single, "Hound Dog," on "The Milton Berle Show" and scandalizes the audience with his suggestive hip gyrations. In the media frenzy that followed, Ed Sullivan swore he would never invite Presley on his own show, but that autumn he booked Elvis for three shows.

• On June 11, 1962, John and Clarence Anglin and Frank Lee Morris attempt to escape from Alcatraz federal prison in San Francisco Bay. The three men were never seen again, and it is likely that they drowned in the chilly 54-degree water.

• On June 8, 1968, actress Barbara Bain wins the Emmy for Best Actress in a Dramatic Series. Bain played secret agent Cinnamon Carter on the CBS series "Mission: Impossible," which ran from 1966 to 1973.

• On June 9, 1973, Secretariat becomes the first horse since Citation in 1948 to win America's coveted Triple Crown. In 1999, ESPN ranked Secretariat No. 35 on its list of the Top 50 North American athletes of the 20th century, the only non-human on the list.

• On June 6, 1984, in a bloody climax to two years of fighting between the Indian government and Sikh separatists, Indian army troops fight their way into the besieged Golden Temple compound in Amritsar and kill at least 500 Sikh rebels. More than 100 Indian soldiers and scores of nonbelligerent Sikhs also perished.

Free Ride For Local Democrats

You might say local Republicans have hoisted the white flag for this election year.

They are conceding seven seats to local Democrat incumbents.

It means a free ride back to Beacon Hill for Quincy's four-member State House delegation:

Senator Michael Morrissey, state Reps. Bruce Ayers, Ron Mariano and Steve Tobin.

MORRISSEY

AYERS

Also unchallenged are four county Democrats:

Dist. Atty. William Keating, Register of Deeds William O'Donnell, County Commissioner Peter Collins, Clerk of Courts Walter Timility.

MARIANO

TOBIN

And Governor's Councillor Christopher Iannella Jr.

That's a lot of seats to let go by without a fight.

But as we have said before, it isn't easy being a Republican candidate in Quincy or Norfolk County these days.

Not like the GOP's political glory days of the 1930s and 1940s when Republicans occupied just about every elective office in Quincy and Norfolk County.

But Democrats have since moved in and planning to stay indefinitely. No evictions by Republicans in sight.

Today Quincy Democrats hold 22 local state, municipal and county seats: state senator, three state representatives, mayor, nine city council, six school committee, one county commission, one register of probate.

Plus, of course, Congressman William Delahunt and state Treasurer Tim Cahill.

The last Republican who must have felt like the Lone Ranger was Frank McCauley whose career spanned 32 years as mayor (four terms), school committee, ward councillor and councillor at-large. He retired last December, going out as council president. And is the only person ever to be elected to all four municipal offices.

McCAULEY

There isn't a Republican like him on the horizon. Maybe they should clone you, Frank.

The political scene today is a complete turnaround from the 1930s and 1940s when Republicans ruled the region as Democrats do today.

At last year's city election Quincy had 54,899 registered voters. Of which 25,490 were Democrats, 22,422 unenrolled (hate that designation) and only 6,598 Republicans. (The remaining 479 belonged to small parties.)

Right now Democrats have things pretty much their way. But unenrolled voters (I really do hate that designation) are inching up in number and one day could hold the political power.

Meanwhile, I wish we could get ride of that unenrolled designation. Sounds like you're not even a registered voter.

How about changing it?

Assistant City Clerk Maureen Hallsen has the right idea: Make it "undeclared."

THERE WAS A special moment at the Quincy High School Senior Scholarship Ceremony.

Atty. George Burke was there to present three of his six $1,000 scholarships to QHS graduates going on to his alma mater, the University of Massachusetts; (Three more to North Quincy High School seniors.)

BURKE

This brings Burke's total scholarships to 85 recipients sharing $85,000.

One of Burke's QHS scholarships is named for Marty Finnegan, former basketball coach and Quincy schools director of athletics now living in Desert Hot Springs, Calif.

FINNEGAN

Burke was about to present that scholarship to Timur Amirkhanov when former football coach Jack Raymer whispered to him that Finnegan, who was visiting his old hometown, was there in the audience.

"Who better to present the Marty Finnegan Scholarship than Marty himself," said Burke, calling Finnegan to the stage.

Burke then told the audience that when he was Norfolk County district attorney, Finnegan volunteered many hours of his own time helping one of Burke's special units keep drugs away from kids.

Marty got a standing ovation.

WONDER HOW-IT-happens-but-it-happens dept: In last week's Sun there were several photos appearing with an article about the Quincy Retired Teachers Association awarding $150,050 to 56 Quincy and North Quincy High School seniors.

ARTHUR FOSTER

ARTHUR TOBIN

One of the photos was that of Arthur Foster, president of the QRTA. Quite appropriate. But the name under the photo belongs to Arthur Tobin, former mayor and now Clerk Magistrate of Quincy District Court.

Don't know why it happened. Maybe it was the fact that the photo was next to one of Mayor William Phelan, who is Tobin's son-in-law. You know, when you think Phelan and Arthur, you usually think Tobin.

Anyway, Foster says he doesn't mind the mix-up. He and Tobin are good friends. And Tobin doesn't mind either.

But we do. Sorry, Arthur. Sorry, Arthur.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920 real photo postcard view of the Penniman Garage that was at 104 Washington Street on the corner of Wibird Street near Quincy Center. Starting in 1887, Charles H. Penniman had provided horse-drawn taxi service at the Quincy Depot and then he operated this garage until the late 1920s. On the back of this postcard, Penniman noted that he had "just purchased a new Maxwell town car that he intended to keep for calling weddings and nice work." He lived with his wife in the house on the left. In recent years, the garage was home to the Quincy Automatic Transmission Co., but the site is now home to the new Presidents Landing condominiums. Today, on the right foreground of this view, a small island of land remains between Wibird Street and McGrath Highway. It was a much larger piece of land in the 19th century; there were three houses there including the homestead of our library's first benefactor, Thomas Crane. Memorial Day Observances Touching But Crowd Small

This past Memorial Day we attended for the first time Memorial Day observances at Mount Wollaston Cemetery in Quincy.

In the past we had made a point of stopping at soldiers' graves and reflecting at the cemetery.

The observances were somber, honorable and touching . . . but I was very surprised and disappointed at the very small and scant crowd. I think the participants outnumbered the crowd by a 3-1 ratio.

I understand it's a long weekend and the "unofficial" start of summer, and we have cookouts, drives to the beaches, going to the movies, shopping, etc. But if it weren't for the commitments and sacrifices of these brave men and women, we would not have:

• Cookouts, drives to the beaches, etc.

• Choices of what we want to do.

• Freedom at all.

I implore you to set aside in future Memorial Day weekends significant, quality time to reflect, pray, appreciate, be thankful what these brave soldiers had done or are doing. "Freedom is not free."

Many Have Forgotten The Sacrifices

This year, like always, I marched in Quincy's annual Memorial Day Parade. As a Vietnam era veteran of the United States Air Force, I can think of no better place to be or to march with any finer veterans.

I am old enough to remember great crowds showing up for either Veterans Day or Memorial Day parades of old.

I actually knew a two-war veteran for which World War I was his second war. He was a Rough Rider who went up San Juan Hill with Teddy Roosevelt.

It seems today many have forgotten the sacrifices made so that we can enjoy and take for granted all our freedoms.

If we marched and no one showed up it wouldn't matter. Pretty soon, sadly, that might happen. Crowds grow more sparse every year. Sometimes I wonder why as I walk around Mount Wollaston on Memorial Day looking down and reading those names forever a part of Quincy.

A friend of mine two years my junior died since last Memorial Day. He was a Vietnam combat veteran who did two tours. He came home safe and relatively sound. No one every returns the way they went over.

My friend died from wounds received in Vietnam. His name won't be on the wall in Washington. His wounds took over 30 years to hit. He didn't die on the battlefield but right here at home. Another victim of Agent Orange whose wound festered unknowingly inside him for so long undetected.

I thought of my friend this year and all the others too easily forgotten by the rush to go shopping or get to the beach.

Another freedom given to us by those who did and still do their duty. Remember them. They fought for you.

Thanks Cemetery Department For Land Upkeep

Again, as in past years, the employees of Quincy's Cemetery Department did an exceptional job to ensure that the city's cemeteries looked beautiful for Memorial Day.

We have a family lot at Pine Hill Cemetery, and we live by Mt. Wollaston. Despite the continuous rain for many weeks and severe shortage of staff, the men worked very hard to keep the grass cut and maintain the beauty of the cemeteries.

Too often the public is critical of city employees. It is important to recognize that these men and the office secretary work hard to make every Memorial Day a special day for our veterans and families who have loved ones buried in these cemeteries.

Della Chiesa Urges Funds For Revaluation

This Week
1965
41 Years Ago

By FRANK McCAULEY

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa again urged the City Council to approve funds for a revaluation program.

Della Chiesa took issue with arguments that there is no urgency about sending out tax bills since they are not due until November anyway.

The city is enjoined from preparing or sending out tax bills which 19 Quincy taxpayers charge, in a lawsuit, are based on illegal and disproportionate assessments. It is understood that if the councillors pass the order appropriating funds for revaluation, the lawsuit will be withdrawn and the injunction lifted.

Some councillors have reportedly sought to achieve unanimity on the issue so individual councilors will be "off the hook" politically in voting for the program.

FIREFIGHTERS COMPLETE TRAINING COURSE

Broad Meadows Students' World War II Exhibit Opens On USS Salem

Students at the Broad Meadows Middle School have organized an exhibit of front pages, pictures and artifacts honoring Quincy- and Hingham-built ships and their builders for display on the USS Salem and Naval Shipbuilding Museum.

The exhibit, designed by the students and built by them during the after school hours, was scheduled to have opened Tuesday, June 6, the 62nd anniversary of the D-Day landing.

It will contain front pages from the Patriot Ledger reporting Pearl Harbor and D-Day, a timeline showing ship production 1941 through 1945 and artifacts donated by local residents who built the ships or served aboard them.

Brendan Gibbons and Ryan Patterson, seventh grade students at Broad Meadows, led the research, design and assembly of the student tribute which extends to both men and women who worked at the Quincy and Hingham shipyards during World War II.

"Those ships, sailors, marines and shipbuilders helped shorten a too costly war, we should never forget that," said Gibbons.

It was 17 years ago that the idea for a shipbuilding museum at the old Fore River Shipyard was born in Classroom 109 at the Broad Meadows School and nurtured by teacher Ron Adams and his students.

Their efforts resulted in the return home of the Quincy-built heavy cruiser Salem (US Navy retired) to provide a centerpiece for the museum which is located at 739 Washington St., in the former Fore River Shipyard.

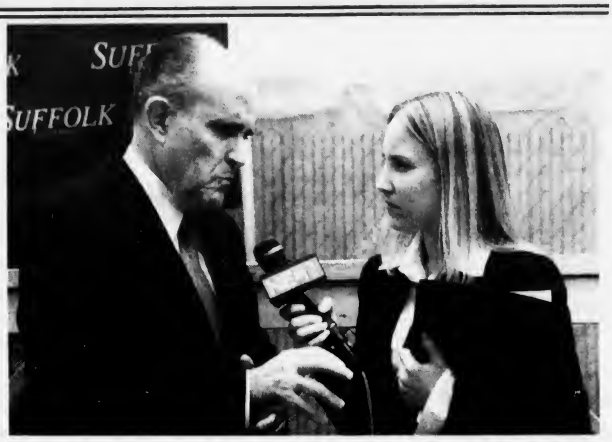
Dorothy Quincy Homestead Open House Saturday

There will be an open house Saturday, June 10, from 1-4 p.m. at Dorothy Quincy Homestead, Hancock St. and Butler Rd.



Recently designated a national historical landmark, the homestead will have tours every half hour beginning at 1 p.m., with the last tour at 3:30 p.m. All tours are free of charge, but a voluntary contribution is suggested.

In the afternoon, visitors may also tour the Josiah Quincy House, which was built by the brother of Edmund Quincy IV, the last Edmund Quincy to reside in the homestead.

Dating from 1686, the homestead is 320 years old. During the 17th and 18th centuries, this mansion was considered the grandest estate in Quincy. It was the childhood home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, the wife of John Hancock.

The homestead is nearing the completion of an extensive restoration which included painting the exterior. The project was funded by a combination of public and private sources, including the Massachusetts Colonial Dames and the Commonwealth. The DCR (former MDC) oversaw the work through its public/private partnerships office under the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs.

For more information, visit the homestead's website at www.nscda.org/ma/quincy_homestead.htm, or call Mary Robinson, homestead chairman, at 617-332-1712.

Phelan, Mariano Endorse Gabrieli

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Mayor William Phelan and State Rep. Ron Mariano stood in tandem on the eve of the Democratic State Convention and announced their support of Chris Gabrieli as the Democratic candidate for governor.

Gabrieli then proceeded to secure the votes of a fraction more than the 15 per cent of convention delegates needed to get on the September primary ballot, with 49 per cent of his vote coming from the Norfolk-Plymouth District of which Quincy is a major part.

"He's the first candidate I can get excited about in a while," said Mariano, addressing the June 1 news conference endorsing Gabrieli from the steps of Quincy City Hall.

"When I consider who I'm going to vote for governor, Chris truly has the ingredients and characteristics that I want in a governor," said Phelan.

Other local officials who came to show support included: Councillor Michael McFarland, Councillor John Keenan, Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, former Councillors Joe Newton and Tom Fabrizio, City Clerk Joe Shea, and Tom Koch, Park and Forestry Director of Quincy.

Phelan and Mariano stressed Gabrieli's work to promote education while not in public office as an example of what would be his continued work as Governor. Gabrieli has been credited by his campaign with expanding after-school programs in Massachusetts, and opposing Governor Mitt Romney to support stem cell research.

"I took my time, I think I did my research, and I came to a very clear decision on who to endorse for governor. I was thrilled that Chris decided to jump in the race when he did. It took a lot of courage," said Phelan.

"First of all he's a leader. Secondly, hardworking. Thirdly, and I think almost most importantly, he's extremely sincere in what he wants to do. He's an honest leader," said Phelan.

Phelan said that he also supported Gabrieli in his plans for the economy.

"We all know that people are leaving this state in the prime of their life, of their working life, for other places. Chris has a specific plan to address that. And it deals with investing, rather than divesting, in our state, in our cities and in our towns, and it's important, there couldn't be any more important issue in the governor's race.

"Affordable housing, affordable cities, municipalities that provide the services that they need to retain their populations. With strong public education as a real catalyst, to keep people here in MA," said Phelan.

Gabrieli said that he is confident in the outcome of his campaign.

"These gentlemen, (Phelan and Mariano) are stepping forward on the Thursday before the nomination and I fully expect to get my 15 percent at this convention. I fully expect to go on and win this nomination," said Gabrieli.

"Mariano is working on some of the most important issues in our state, in terms of utility of function of insurance, to make sure that it's available to all of us. There's going to be some good controversial things that he's going to be bringing forward, and we need that kind of leadership willing to keep on key issues that face families.

"Not just by the way auto insurance but the unavailability of flood insurance and catastrophic insurance due to the effects of Katrina. It matters, not only here in Quincy but around the state. And I admire him for his leadership on that. And we'll find out if we agree on every detail.

"Mayor Phelan is a mayor who, I called him when I got in this race I loved his attitude. He said 'I'm going to send you two studies, you read them, then we'll talk about the candidacy.' And I read them, they were good studies, and I didn't agree with everything in them, I thought there were good points, and I appreciated his attitude. We talked about the substance of them, and I'm proud to have his support.

"Quincy is an important city, and I look forward to working with the mayor and all of you, and I look forward to the opportunity to work state-wide" said Gabrieli.

Flag Day Parade To Honor Quincy Iraq War Veterans

The 55th annual Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration will be held Saturday evening with a special tribute to Quincy's returning Iraq War veterans.

The parade will step off at 7 p.m. on Coddington Street and proceed to Hancock Street, Merrymount Parkway and ending at the entrance to Pageant Field.

The Iraq War veterans and those who served with the 102nd Army National Guard Battalion based in Quincy will serve as a group Grand Marshal.

A number of bands will join in the procession, including the Boston Crusaders, East Coast Jazz, Boston City Band, Waltham and Canton Legion Bands, Boston Firemen's Band, Boston Fire Gaelic Brigade and the Quincy Public Schools All-City Band.

In addition to the bands, two antique fire engines from the Bare Cove Fire Museum in Hingham, the Weymouth Corvette Club, color guards from the Massachusetts State Police, Quincy Fire Department, Quincy Police Department, Naval Recruiters and, the parade highlight, nearly 2,000 flag-waving youngsters from various youth organizations citywide will all participate in the 1.5-mile march.

"With all of the wonderful additions the parade has seen through the years the kids continue to be the main attraction," said Thomas P. Koch, Flag Day Parade chairman and son of the late Richard J. Koch who founded the event. "Mothers and fathers who once marched in the parade themselves now watch their own sons and daughters carry a flag and wave it proudly in the procession. It's become a tradition for generations to share."

Mayor William Phelan is the honorary chairman of the event and will lead the contingent of elected and public officials.

"Each year the Flag Day Parade draws an impressive crowd as we join together to honor our flag and our country," Phelan said. "Celebrating our freedom and paying homage to those who fought for it is an important practice to exercise and instill in our youth and the Flag Day Parade has accomplished that for over 50 years."

The parade will culminate into a celebration at Pageant Field with a flag-raising of an impressive 30 by 60 foot version of Old Glory, presentation of the Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award to Donald E. Martin Jr., patriotic performance and sing-a-long and, if weather permits, a fly-over by the Massachusetts State Police Air Wing.

The evening will be capped off by a fireworks display over Black's Creek around 9:15 p.m. There is no rain date for the parade itself, but if conditions are unfavorable the fireworks display will be rescheduled for a date to be announced.

4 Quincy Elementary Schools Participating In Hood's Fund-Raising Program

Four Quincy elementary schools are participating in New England dairy HP Hood's school fund-raising program.

The Charles A. Bernazzani Elementary School, Francis W. Parker School, Merrymount Elementary School and Snug Harbor School join more than 200 other Massachusetts schools in the program.

Using its existing Boston Red Sox partnership, Hood has dubbed the program "Sox Tops for Kids." Hood will give a nickel for every Light Block Milk cap redeemed by the schools from now through the end of October.

Hood launched the program when it became clear to company officials that funding issues would be a major point of discussion in almost every school district in its New England market area.

The program allows local public schools to earn up to $10,000 per school, helping to reduce the budget burden.

Details of the program will be publicized during Red Sox game time and the program will also be promoted via Hood's Red Sox Kid Nation promotions at Fenway Park.

In order to motivate student involvement in the program, a Red Sox player will visit the school that raises the most money on a per student basis.

Local school coordinators are looking for help in spreading the word to parents, and Hood is excited about generating further support from school districts throughout New England. School coordinators can be contacted through Hood Consumer Affairs at 1-800-242-2423.

Lynne Bohan, vice president of public relations at Hood, said the company is gratified by the early success of the program.

"We had a strong response from our Web site even before schools had received information directly," she said. "It's just amazing. We hope as many schools as possible will hear about the program and decide to participate."

For more information about the program, schools and parents can visit hood.com.

McDermott, Davis, Mahoney To Coordinate Patrick For Governor Campaign In Quincy Gubernatorial candidate and Democratic Party Nominee Deval Patrick has tapped Norfolk County Register of Probate Patrick McDermott, Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis, and School Committeewoman Anne Mahoney to coordinate his local campaign efforts in Quincy.

Patrick has been in Quincy at several private and public events during the last year and has attracted over 100 committed volunteers to date.

"My campaign has been about reaching out to the grassroots of our state's electorate and asking them to shed their cynicism about government so that we can truly reshape Massachusetts' future," Patrick said. "I am confident in Patrick, Jay and Anne's abilities in helping me do just that. It is an honor to have them and so many other Quincy residents on my team."

McDermott, who served as a neighborhood activist and Ward 3 councillor before being elected Register of Probate in 2002, said that after meeting up with Patrick over a year ago, he was convinced that the Democratic Party had finally found a leader who can truly change the course of politics and business in Massachusetts.

"Deval is a visionary leader who truly believes we can do better as a state. He is committed to working with cities and towns in providing a place where we can afford to live and work, where our children receive a world-class education, and where our local government has the tools to provide good, reliable and efficient services," McDermott said.

McDermott, Davis, and Mahoney will host an informational meeting for anyone interested in being a part of Patrick's campaign Saturday, June 10 at 10 a.m. at the law offices of Graeber, Davis, and Cantwell, located at 15 Cottage Ave., fourth floor (above the Fours Restaurant).

Anyone interested in attending or for more information, call McDermott at 617-594-0640, Davis at 617-472-8722, or Mahoney at 617-479-2046.

Star Of Sea Files Last Ditch Appeal

Friends of Star of the Sea Church in Squantum have filed a last resort appeal to the Vatican's Apostolic Signatura in a bid to reopen as a self-sustaining Catholic parish.

Maureen Mazrimas, co-chairman of the Friends, said their brief was filed May 29 by a canon lawyer in Rome after the Friends raised the necessary $6,000 to cover expenses.

Star of the Sea was suppressed as a parish by the Boston Archdiocese in the fall of 2004 but was allowed to reopen nine months later as a chapel with one Sunday mass a week.

"If we had been allowed to have baptisms, weddings and funerals at the church, this appeal probably wouldn't have been necessary," Mazrimas speculated.

She compared the appeal to the Apostolic Signatura to going before the U. S. Supreme Court.

"We send in our brief," she said, "and the other side responds. Then we rebut them. It's not a fast-moving process. We were told it may take two years."

The Friends, she said, would also like to get a more clear definition of a chapel.

"Infant Jesus/St. Lawrence in Brookline was allowed to reopen as a chapel but it was permitted to have baptisms, weddings and funerals," she said. "They're almost two parishes with one pastor."

Their Italian lawyer, said Mazrimas, also represents several other suppressed churches that were on the list of more than 80 ordered close by Archbishop Sean Cardinal O'Malley.

The last Sunday mass as a parish was celebrated at Star of the Sea on Oct. 24, 2004, and parishioners were sent to Sacred Heart Church a couple of miles away.

One mass was permitted in the Squantum School gym on Easter in 2005 and the Archdiocese relented enough to allow the onetime church to become a chapel July 17, 2005.

Summer Beach Water Sampling Program To Begin June 14

Contaminated storm water flows can be discharged into the harbor from pipes and drains after one-quarter of an inch of rainfall or greater occurs in a given day.

The Quincy Health Department, therefore, recommends people refrain from swimming or bathing for a period of 48 hours after a significant rainfall to allow for the natural flushing action of the tides to dilute and cleanse the water.

The City of Quincy has been involved in a Bathing Water Quality Improvement Program over the past several years. The program involved the detection and repair of problems within those sewer and storm drain pipes that adversely affected Quincy Bay.

Administered by the city's Department of Public Works, the program continues today with ongoing routine maintenance practices such as street sweeping, drain cleaning and tide gate inspections.

For more information regarding the testing program, call 617-376-1278. A 24-hour recorded message will be available at 617-376-1288 to obtain the weekly beach sampling results. The results will also be posted on the city's Web site (ci.quincy.ma.us).

Three Eagle Scouts Recognized By City Council

Three residents, who recently earned Eagle Scout status, the highest rank a Boy Scout can achieve, were recognized at the city council meeting, Monday night.

The three Eagle Scouts are Jeffrey Belovarac, Sean Farrell, and Derek Lee.

Only four percent of all scouts reach Eagle Scout status, said Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, who presented the citations.

To advance in the program, scouts must focus on training, character development, and personal fitness, said Coughlin.

"We've been to New Mexico and Canada. We've done a lot of things that most people won't get a chance to do," said Farrell "We've been backpacking over a week at a time."

"Eagle is a great accomplishment, and it took a lot of years to complete," said Lee. "But in the end it's all worth it. We learned many things, like for example, how to start a fire, you don't just throw a bunch of sticks together and light a match."

"For me this experience has been 11 years that I've put in since I began cub scouts, and it's been a great experience for me and for everyone that I've been involved with. We've done some really great things. And I'd also like to thank our leaders, without them we wouldn't be standing here today," said Belovarac.

Model Search Pageant At Sidewalk Festival

A national model search competition has been added to the entertainment program for the 36th annual Sidewalk Festival sponsored by the Quincy Business Association.

The Miss Hawaiian Tropic International Pageant will be held Friday, July 21, on Hancock Street, which will be closed to traffic.

It actually is two pageants for different age groups.

The main pageant for those 18 years and older will be held from 5 to 7 p.m.

A "Little Mister & Little Miss" pageant for those up to age 16 will precede it from 3 to 4:30 p.m.

The Miss Hawaiian Tropic Pageant, an annual national model search competition, is now the second largest pageant organization in the world.

For entry forms, rules and regulations, interested candidates should directly contact Regional Coordinators Karon and Kellie Shea at 508-755-6795 or 508-438-0970 or email kshea57@aol.com.

The Part Time Lover's Band returns Thursday, July 20, at noon. Early that evening the schedule features a Calypso concert by the Garacci Group. The noontime concert tradition continues Friday and the musical entertainment winds up with "Walker Billys" Saturday afternoon. Also on Saturday MIKE 93.7 FM will be on hand. Both Maria's Reptile Show and Sidewalk Sam are scheduled to make return visits to entertain children.

Vendors will present their wares in an open air venue. Quincy eateries will all be open. For more information call 617-471-3232 or email director@qbaonline.com.

Bring Your Peanuts To The UPS Store

Bring your peanuts to the UPS Store and help preserve the environment.

Huh?

That's right.

The peanuts in question are those little pieces of sturdy protective packaging that are used to fill the space between the merchandise and the carton it came in.

You know, the doodads that spill out of the box and mess up the floor when you remove the contents of the package ever so carefully so as not to spill them.

Tom Bagley's Quincy UPS Store has joined the Plastic Loose Fill Council to give Quincy residents a place to bring their loose peanuts to be recycled and reused.

"Consumers feel obligated to do something environmentally sound," said Karen Joffe, executive director of the Council.

"Most people are not sure what to do with the peanuts they get in a shipped box; now they can recycle them locally and turn a positive into a negative."

So if you don't know what to do with your peanuts, bring them to Tom Bagley's Quincy UPS Store in Adams Plaza, 550 Adams St.

It's the only location south of Boston that accepts loose peanuts.

Joe Catalano Named PR Director For Jack Conway Real Estate

Chairman Jack Conway of Jack Conway, Realtors, announces Joe Catalano, former news and program director for WJDA Radio in Quincy, has joined the firm as director of public relations.

Catalano, who left WJDA when the station was sold in May, brings 20 years of journalism experience to his new post. He succeeds former Conway publicist Christopher Haraden who left the position in April to become editor of the Hull Times.

"It's rare to be able to work for two such well-established family companies as WJDA and Jack Conway," said Catalano, a 14-year Randolph resident. "I feel honored to promote another organization that has a true commitment to the people who live and work in our neighborhoods."

JOE CATALANO

Catalano will oversee and implement all of Conway's public relations activities and serve as company spokesman and editor of the Conway Country Citizen, the firm's monthly newspaper.

"Were thrilled to have Joe aboard," said Conway. "He's a real pro, and it shows."

The Jack Conway Co. was founded in Hingham Square in 1956 and has 45 sales offices, Boston, South Shore, South Coast and Cape Cod. The firm also runs Conway Financial Services, a mortgage company.

Homebuying Workshop June 19-21

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, in conjunction with Brockton Housing Partnership, will host a First-Time Homebuyer Workshop June 19-21 from 6 to 9 p.m.

It will be held at HarborOne Credit Union, 770 Oak St., Brockton. Attendance at all three workshops is mandatory to receive a homebuying certificate.

All potential first-time homebuyers are encouraged to attend. Participants will have the opportunity to be pre-qualified by a lender at the workshop.

Topics covered include mortgage options, legal aspects of the homebuying process, how a home inspection works and other presentations from real estate professionals.

There is a $15 fee per person. Call 617-770-2227, ext. 31, or visit www.neighborhoodhousing.org.

4 Steps For Home Improvement

(NAPS) As the weather warms and brightens, it's a great time to start working on home improvement projects. By following a few tips from Lou Manfredini, home improvement expert and Skil Power Tools Ambassador, tackling DIY projects is as easy as one-two-three.

Have the right tools to get the job done. A combination of power and hand tools will go a long way toward tackling projects all around the house. Having a cordless drill, circular saw, sander and jigsaw on hand, along with an array of nails, screws, a staple gun and a hammer, will make any project a cinch to begin. Keep tools in one location, in the garage, basement or shed, for easy inventory before getting started, to discover what additional tools or accessories need to be purchased.

Use resources. Sometimes beginning a home improvement project can be difficult when unsure of where to start. Reference magazines, home improvement television shows, the internet and local hardware stores to find how-to-help on such various plans as building a deck, creating the ideal swing set or pruning trees. Start with projects that match skill level, and move up from there.

Play it safe. Whether using power tools or hand tools, personal safety should always be a primary concern. Wear safety glasses when using tools; read all instruction manuals; match accessories to the project, for instance use appropriately sized drill bits for the job at hand; and do not wear loose clothing, which can easily get in the way. Following these safety tips will help minimize any mishaps.

Confidence is half the battle. When working on home improvement projects it is important to have confidence in abilities. If new to DIY projects, start slow and work on smaller projects that are less intimidating. After gaining confidence, move on to more complex projects. In no time, neighbors will catch wind of these efforts and will be asking for assistance on their projects.

For tips and tricks on DIY projects, and for information on tools and project ideas, visit www.skil.com.

Save Money With These Remodeling Tips

(NAPS) Go with the flow. The flow, when it comes to kitchen and bathroom remodeling, is protecting the investment. These areas of the home are tough on fixtures and appliances such as cabinets.

The steam of a bathroom and the heat of a kitchen are difficult environments for fixtures and appliances. Cabinet doors are prone to warping as well as scratches and other damage.

Home-improvement experts suggest installing products made specifically to stand up to the hard wear and tear that kitchens and baths get. For instance, many fixtures and appliances are protected with a powder coated finish. This innovative finish is tough against corrosion, protects items against chipping, scratching and moisture deterioration, and comes in a variety of colors and finishes for a decorative touch.

For more information, visit www.powderdecoating.org/309.

Cleaning Stone Pavers

Q. I am having a new driveway installed and would like to re-use the Belgium blocks that run down the sides of my existing driveway. Do you have any suggestions as to how to remove tar and driveway sealant from Belgium blocks? — Chris U., Huntington, N.Y.

A. Belgium (or Belgian) blocks, for those unfamiliar with the term, are natural stones used as pavers or curbing. They originally described irregularly shaped stones used as ballast in sailing ships of old; much of the stone at one time was hewn from quarries in Belgium.

When cargo ships landed in one port or another, they loaded or unloaded ballast stones as needed to properly balance the next cargo. The need for such ballast meant that there was a healthy surplus of Belgium stones in every major port. In coastal cities where native rock was scarce, the extra stones were used to pave roads. The next time you visit an old port city like New Orleans, Savannah or Boston, look down — chances are the cobblestones you're walking on were laid down hundreds of years ago.

Today, cargo ships have no need for ballast stones, and cobblestones can be tough on automobiles, so Belgium blocks and other types of stone paving have been relegated to a decorative role. Most are hewn far from Belgium (India is a major supplier), and many are manufactured from concrete. The result is that you can find these stones in standard sizes and shapes at your home-improvement store. Reclaimed stones are also sought-after, because of the history and character they bring to a garden or driveway.

Cleaning Belgium blocks can be a real chore, especially with old gobs of tar and discolored sealant staining them. If there are not too many blocks, the safest way to clean them — without risking chemical discoloration or breaking from excess pressure — is to gently chisel away hardened tar and scrub the stone with a wire brush and a bit of water.

If elbow grease doesn't work on a particular stain, a chemical cleaner for stone can be tried (many types line home-improvement store shelves), but test it on an inconspicuous part of the block first. If your Belgium block is actually a concrete paver in disguise, using the wrong cleaning solution can damage it irreparably.

How Ventilation Improves Indoor Air Quality

(NAPS) Learning ways to improve air quality may help homeowners breathe easier. According to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, indoor air pollution is among the top five environmental risks to public health.

Fortunately, ventilation systems and air cleaners can improve indoor air quality (IAQ) by replacing a portion of stale indoor air with fresh outdoor air.

For example, Energy Recovery Ventilators (ERVs), Electronic Air Cleaners (EACs), UV lights and whole house humidifiers such as those from Coleman Heating and Air Conditioning, a brand of the Unitary Products Group of York-a Johnson Controls Company-are designed to ventilate the indoor air, zap airborne germs and pollens, trap airborne particles, and moisturize parched air. The ERV units retain a portion of the energy used to heat or cool the house, saving on utility bills. EACs can remove up to 94 percent of the particles, including dust, pollens, pet dander, plant spores, fungi, bacteria and tobacco smoke.

Humidifiers help to keep the occupants healthy by providing much needed moisture during the dry winter months and can help increase indoor comfort.

To further ensure good IAQ, the American Society of Heating, Refrigerating and Air-Conditioning Engineers recommends these 10 tips:

1. Vent bathrooms, kitchens, toilets and laundry rooms directly outdoors.

2. Avoid locating furnaces, air conditioners and ductwork in garages or other spaces where they can draw contaminants into the house.

3. Properly vent fireplaces, wood stoves and other hearth products.

4. Vent clothes dryers and central vacuum cleaners directly outside.

5. Store toxic or volatile compounds, such as paints, solvents, cleaners and pesticides, out of occupyable space.

6. Minimize or avoid unvented combustion sources such as candles, cigarettes, indoor barbecues, decorative combustion appliances or vent-free heaters.

7. Provide operable windows or additional mechanical ventilation when using home cleaners or painting.

8. Use sealed-combustion, power-vented or high-efficiency condensing-type water heaters and furnaces. When natural-draft applications must be used, they should be tested for proper venting.

9. Put a good particle filter or air cleaner in airhandling systems to keep dirt out of the air and off of ductwork and heating and cooling components.

10. Distribute a minimum level of outdoor air throughout the home, using wholehouse, mechanical ventilation.

For more information on improving IAQ, visit www.colemanac.com or call 877-874-7378.

Quick, Inexpensive Bathroom Makeovers

(NAPS) Bathrooms are among the rooms most likely to be renovated in a home, according to the Home Improvement Research Institute. Homeowners spend about &4,900 on home makeovers during the first year they own their homes, while about 60 percent feel their bathrooms are "inadequate."

The good news is that there are ways to make over the bathroom without spending a lot of money on remodeling costs and without replacing old fixtures. Here are some tips:

Clean Start

Owners may save costs of replacing worn-looking toilets, bathtubs or sinks with a good cleaning. Built-up soap scum, hard-water stains, rust, calcium and lime can dull the look of a bathroom and make it seem older than it actually is..

Try using a powerful cleaner designed for tough bathroom stains, such as Kaboom Ultra Scrub, to give the bathroom surfaces an instant makeover. Ultra Scrub's thick cream clings to surfaces and its scrubbing granules get deep into textured surfaces to remove grime and stains, without scratching. Stay on top of the bathroom's appearance using maintenance products such as Kaboom NeverScrub Continuous Toilet Cleaning System. It allows the user to throw away the brush and never scrub the toilet again.

Splash Of Color

Use mildew-resistant, latex paint to add new color to the bathroom. Be sure to use a bin primer over any water stains or spots before starting the job, and pay careful attention to detail-areas, such as woodwork or trim around mirrors.

Home designers often say the bathroom is a good place to experiment with colors. If the home has more muted tones, consider using bright hues in the bathroom to help make the room seem cleaner and brighter.

Accessorize

Finally, add some decoration to the bathroom to make it seem less stark and more comfortable. Some options are hanging family photos on the wall or a framed picture or two. Just be sure not to make the bathroom appear too cluttered. Remember, with limited space, home designers say less is more.

Flag Day And Flag Code Etiquette

By FRANCIS DERWIN

Flag Day June 14, 2006 may be an appropriate day to deliberate a question of conflict dealing with flag code etiquette being used within the boundary of our Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Conflict in question appears in the photo at right.

There is a question of dealing with Flag Code within the boundary of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts only.

Subject taken from "Piloting, Seamanship and Small Boat Handling" Chapman. The picture at right is worth many words explaining what above is in the presence of the object in question, in this case the American Flag.

No organization makes law other than a legislative – federal or state. There is a proposal before the Massachusetts Legislature (S520) which could outlaw the flying of a banner or flag above our National Colors. Placing or displaying of the National Colors designates character above all other symbols and in its display must demand no infringement of object to its right, height or forward of National Colors.

In my opinion, the First Amendment is not an argument for any degradation. An individual having difficulty with his advertising with degrading the National Colors is protected: but should be frowned upon when an organization large or small takes advantage of the First Amendment, especially advertising in practice of communication.

Simply put: the flag code deals with the position of the American Flag which says: no flag, banner or burgee shall fly above our National Colors. There i s a question of the attached mast, as shown in the photo above, to the main mast the burgee is forward of the American Flag which indicates the American Flag is being followed (trailed) by the burgee; that is a flag code violation.

The first look at the photo has the appearance of offense. However, a caption under the original photo reads: "While it is true that no other naval or other authority can be quoted for the display of the Union Jack on a yacht club mast ashore, a long-standing precedent has been established in its widespread use by the better yacht clubs."

Here, the author seems to discriminate by using the term "better yacht clubs" use the Yacht Club Mast.

The U.S. Navy did use the gaff at sea during war time to fly the Union Colors for safety of the Colors leaving the after end for in port. The main mast was used in time of religious service flag or contagion flag when service was over the banner was struck.

The former use was adopted by the yacht clubs after the national emergency.

The Yacht Clubs of America take the view of anomaly in their favor without the benefit of official (state or national) request for an exemption or privilege by by-law. It behooves me that the prestige of said yacht clubs will not respect the dignity due the Colors with the use of their flag pole.

In the Commonwealth of Massachusetts the Secretary of State is the guardian of flags in this Commonwealth. A request for privilege to use the "Yacht Club Mast" as it is, will satisfy and prove the integrity of all concerned.

Council Honors Two For DAV Fishing Trips

The City Council recognized the efforts of two participants in the Harvey's Saltwater Fishing Club Annual D.A.V. Outing at Monday night's council meeting.

Club President Sam Miceli, and Quincy Yacht Club Rear Commodore Kenneth Flagg received citations for continuing the annual fishing trip for disabled veterans. Flagg was recognized for over 25 years of service.

"There's a slogan that says, 'don't forget the veterans,'" said Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, "Well you people haven't forgotten the paraplegic veteran... and you've done it for 50 years."

"The city of Quincy is incredible for their spirit of volunteerism, the tremendous events that occur on a regular basis throughout the city and this evening, myself and Councillor Kelly, have the honor of recognizing an absolute incredible venture, and it's Harvey's Saltwater Fishing Club's annual veteran's outing," said Councillor Joseph Finn.

Miceli said that he continues the trip "to keep the community in tact. It's a fishing community."

"I've got vets every year that call me saying, 'Sam, when's the date?'" said Miceli.

"On behalf of the Quincy Yacht Club, I take a lot of pride in helping out the vets," said Flagg.

The fishing day for disabled veterans was created by club member Helge "Harry" Johnson in 1956. On the first Disabled Veterans Day, Harvey' hosted 14 veterans from the Chelsea Veteran's Hospital. The event was held at Harvey's Warf until the building was destroyed in the Blizzard of '78.

The event was moved to Hurley's Boat Rental at Bay View Ave., under a tent donated by Joe Divine. It was then moved to the Quincy Yacht Club in 1981.

Today Harvey's Salt Water Club of Houghs Neck provides the day of fishing and luncheon receptions for over 200 disabled veterans from several local hospitals. Quincy Yacht Club hosts the event and provides the function hall floats, and volunteers. Over 20 fishing and lobster boats are donated, and 100 local participants volunteer for the event.

Today meetings for the fishing club are held at the new Maritime Center on Bay View Ave. for junior members and Quincy Yacht Club for adult members. A June 17 fundraiser is planned.

A Job Well Done

On May 18, Officer William Horick initially investigated a report from a female victim that a "male party" had followed her to and from the train at Wollaston Station.

LT. DAN MINTON

The victim stated she did not know the man, who in the past 11 days had followed her on five to six occasions. She added she could hear the man run up behind her on two occasions and the one time she turned to watch him, the man yelled at her in a Spanish or Latin accent and fled.

She said she could not understand what the man was saying, but was in fear due to his threatening behavior. She was concerned he was going to grab and harm her, adding she tried to elude him by going into stores but he would wait for her. The victim also stated she even tried changing her schedule but the man would be waiting at the train station.

On May 19, at approximately 3:30 p.m., the victim called the Quincy Police Department, stating the man was on her train and staring at her. She was told the police were en route and to wait at the station.

As she debarked at Wollaston Station, the man followed so she ran out of the train station prior to the police arriving. Once outside, she ran into a friend who gave her a ride to the police station. The victim provided more information about the suspect.

On May 22, at 4 p.m., Officer Horick observed a train come into the station from Boston and then observed a man matching the description come out of the station on the Greenwood Avenue side.

Officer Horick followed the suspect through Wollaston Center as he waited for back-up. At Hancock and Beale streets, Officer Horick, along with Officers Steve Kelly and Lane Watkins, stopped the suspect and as they checked out his background, the victim was called on her cell phone.

She was asked to come to the officers' location to identify the suspect. She stated she was at JFK Station and would be there soon. Officer Horick met the victim and transported her to the suspect's location, where she immediately identified the man as the stalker. The suspect, a 36-year-old Quincy resident, was arrested under the charge of "Stalking." Nice work!

If anyone else has a similar experience, especially in the Wollaston Center area, please contact the Quincy Police Department at 617-479-1212. The suspect is described as 6 feet, 2 inches tall, approximately 210 pounds with a medium build, olive skin and a foreign accent. He has black, medium length hair with a white streak in the middle-front area. He is 36 years old.

In this case, everything worked out. The victim was very aware of her surroundings and recognized the pattern of the suspect. She was able to provide a thorough description for the police. She stopped at stores when she was being followed and did not let the suspect follow her home. Staying in the store, calling the police and awaiting their arrival would have been the best action.

She did not confront him or anger him. In situations like these, it is always best to stay near other people since the suspect does not want to be identified or approached by civic-minded citizens. The train station was a safe place to stay because there are employees on the premises who would call the police. Having a cell phone to call the police yourself is one of the best crime prevention tools. It seems that almost every other person has a cell phone. Do not hesitate to ask someone to call the police on your behalf.

The victim in this case was stalked five to six times before she contacted the police. Each time she didn't call, she jeopardized her safety. She was observant that there was a problem but she should have contacted the police earlier. Too often, citizens don't want to "bother the police" or "over-react" to an incident, but by letting us know we can investigate the situation to a crime-free solution.

Heart-Rate Monitors

Q. A month ago, I started wearing a monitor to keep track of my heart rate while exercising. I try to keep my heart rate within my "fat-burning zone" based on the information card that came with the monitor. I don't feel like I'm working that hard keeping my heart rate within the fat-burning zone, and I'm not even sure if it SHOULD be hard. What exactly is the fat-burning zone?

A. A heart-rate monitor can be an extremely helpful training tool — if you know how to use it. Monitoring your heart rate while exercising can provide you with valuable information about the intensity of the activity you are completing and your body's response to that exercise.

A heart-rate monitor typically consists of a chest strap, which is placed against the skin, and a wristwatch, which picks up a signal from the chest strap and displays the body's heart rate. You are able to see the changes to your heart rate as you exercise or rest.

The "fat-burning zone" is like the "Twilight Zone," where there are more questions than answers, and no one is sure it even exists. The fat-burning zone is often explained as the time during exercise when your body is using fat as its primary source of fuel. This usually includes completing low-intensity exercise for longer periods of time.

But research now suggests that this type of training could not only keep you from losing body fat, but actually increase it!

According to Lorraine Brown, co-director of the Heart Zones Fit and Fat Program, fat-burning programs that are made up of low-intensity exercises don't help to get you fit. "If a training program doesn't include some amount of moderate intensity exercise," Brown says, "it won't push up the ceiling of your anaerobic threshold, and your fat-burning potential will either remain the same or even drop."

This information suggests that instead of focusing on a fat-burning zone, you should direct your workouts to include moderate- to high-intensity workouts in addition to low-intensity exercise to encourage an increase in your body's ability to burn fat. The heart rate zone you currently are exercising in may need to be kicked up a notch to allow your body to adapt to the new challenge and not have to stay within the same range each workout.

You can begin by adding spurts of increased intensity into your workout. They will gradually become easier, which means it will then be time to work harder. Be careful not to work all of the time within your anaerobic threshold, which is when your body begins to build lactic acid and you begin to feel that burning sensation and soreness in your muscles and need to stop. Keep an intensity that you can maintain for at least 20 minutes and still can carry on a conversation.

Consult a fitness professional for specific advice on using your heart-rate monitor.

Adding Fiber To Improve A Diet

(NAPS) Americans, now more than ever, recognize the need to change the way they eat. From reducing fat and sugar intake to cutting carbs, many are looking for extra steps they can take in the kitchen to improve their overall health.

In fact, a recent survey administered by Opinion Research highlights this trend, revealing that 86 percent of Americans believe there are dietary changes they could be making to improve their well-being. Despite this desire to take the necessary steps, 63 percent indicated they still struggle with ways to eat healthier.

When it comes to specific reasons behind the difficulty in changing cooking and eating habits, 70 percent of respondents believed eating healthier will prevent them from enjoying their favorite foods, followed by a belief that eating healthy takes too much time (59 percent) and a fear that choosing healthy foods will change the taste of what they eat (51 percent.)

"Americans today are really open to advice and solutions on how they can improve their eating habits and live longer, healthier lives. While the majority of us desire improved health and wellness, we all know it's tough to break everyday patterns that require giving up our favorite foods," said Crystal Harrell, Ph. D., Procter & Gamble Health Sciences Institute.

Achieving healthy eating is easier than most realize, according to Harrell. Whether picking up food at the grocery store or through the drive-thru, Americans can take simple steps to make their food choices healthier, without sacrificing time, flavor and any other concerns they may have.

One easy way to add more health to a diet is to increase fiber intake. While research indicates fiber may help prevent a variety of health conditions, 95 percent of Americans today are not consuming their daily fiber requirements. The National Fiber Council recommends people receive 32 grams of more fiber per day; however, according to Columbia University, typical consumption of fiber averages 10 grams to 15 grams daily. That's less than half the recommended allowance.

Jackie Newgent, a registered dietitian and chef, offered the following tips on easy way to add more fiber to a diet:

• Next time ordering pizza, forgo sausage or pepperoni and create a "salad" pizza instead. Choose vegetables like artichokes, onions and tomatoes. Try whole wheat crust, too.

• When in the mood for Chinese, choose steamed tofu and vegetables over fried meat dishes. Request brown rice in place of white.

• Always have some cans of beans on hand. Use them in soups, salads or pasta sauce for a quick fiber fix.

• When in the mood for fruit juice, drink water to quench thirst, then enjoy a whole piece of fruit for extra fiber and chewing satisfaction.

• Incorporate a fiber supplement such as Fibersure into meals. From the makers of Metamucil, it's an all-natural, clear-mixing powder that's flavor-free, non-thickening and quickly dissolves in water or most other liquids and won't change the flavor or texture of the recipe. When adding it to salad dressing, stir-fry or a glass of water, each heaping teaspoon instantly adds five grams of fiber.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

PREVENTING GUM DISEASE AND RESULTANT TOOTH LOSS

Some experts insist that Americans lose more teeth to gum disease than from tooth decay. Much of this problem stems from neglecting to brush and floss as much as dentists recommend. Poor dental hygiene can result in bacteria collecting in the cuff of gum that surrounds each tooth. Over time, these bacteria can cause inflammation at the gum line that may worsen to create deep pockets of bacteria around teeth. When this happens, the gums recede and the bones that maintain the tooth root wear away. Eventually, the teeth may fall out. Aside from scheduling regular dental check-ups and practicing good oral hygiene at home, adults can help avert periodontal disease-related tooth loss by getting sufficient vitamin D.

You don't have to lose teeth to periodontal disease. Brush, clean between your teeth, eat a balanced diet, do not smoke or use tobacco in any form, and schedule regular dental visits for a lifetime of healthy smiles. We also hope that you include gentle brushing of the tongue as part of your daily oral hygiene. Join us at 44 Greenleaf Street, and enjoy the experience professional and expert dental care can accomplish. We invite your to call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Our goal is to help preserve your natural teeth for a lifetime. Let us help you smile. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. One study shows that people over age 50 with the lowest levels of vitamin D in their blood lost about 25% more "periodontal attachment" than those with the highest levels of the nutrient.

SUMMER FOOT CARE

Summer weather brings unique circumstances that can have consequences for the feet. Walking barefoot increases your chance of cuts, scrapes, and puncture wounds. Sandy, rocky terrain can toughen skin and lead to calluses and cracked heels. Going barefoot around pools can contribute to fungal infections. Wearing sandals with thongs between the toes can cause blisters and corns. Heat can make feet sweat (and smell) more than usual, and increased activity levels during the summer can lead to overuse injuries. To care for your feet during the summer, wear non-slip footwear around pools. Choose sandals and other summer footwear that fit properly and allow your feet to breathe. Treat feet to a periodic soak in cool water with Epsom salts.

We offer all-season podiatric care, including preventive care, medical intervention, and surgical treatment services for a full range of foot concerns. We are committed to providing uncompromising excellence in diagnosis and treatment of your foot or ankle problem, as well as advising you on how to keep your feet healthy. Providing high quality, comfortable, effective foot care is our number one priority here at 999 North Main Street, Randolph, in the MEDICAL OFFICE BUILDING, so why not call us soon at 781-986-3668 for compassionate attention to your aching feet. Office hours are also available at Quincy Medical Center and Milton Medical Building.

HINT: Remember to stretch well and build endurance gradually when trying new summer sports and activities

Red Raiders Sweep Presidents For City Crown

BASEBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

With no bearing on league championships or tournament seedings, there was only one thing at stake when the Quincy and North Quincy high school baseball teams concluded their long seasons last Wednesday night at Adams Field.

The Red Raiders' 8-3 victory earned them the city championship as they completed a season sweep of the Presidents for the first time in four years. They took the first match-up, 8-1.

"It's a great win," said head coach Rick Beach. "It feels great after the rough year we've had. It's always nice beating Quincy. It's nice sending the seniors off in their last game with a W."

It was a disappointing year for the local squads as North Quincy finished the season with a 4-16 overall mark (3-9 Atlantic Coast League) while Quincy ended at 5-15 (1-11 ACL).

The Presidents played well down the stretch, having won three of four games heading into the showdown with their cross-town rivals.

"We played great down the stretch," said head coach Mike Draicchio. "There's a lot of returnees next year. A lot of young guys got innings. I'm looking forward to it. A majority of them are playing this summer. It's going to have to be more of a commitment for an all-year thing, especially the guys that are committed to baseball."

The Red Raiders, meanwhile, stumbled into the season finale with an eight-game losing streak, and quickly fell behind Quincy, 3-0.

Senior co-captain Mike MacPherson reached on an infield hit and scored after consecutive infield errors in the first inning and senior all-star Joe Griffin and junior all-star Steve Connolly added RBI singles in the second.

Senior pitcher John Allen settled down after that, allowing just three hits the rest of the way. The tri-captain gave up the two earned runs on seven hits while fanning seven and walking two.

"John Allen pitched great," Beach said. "He had a little hard time with a couple errors in the first inning. But then he buckled down and they got one hit from the fourth inning on. John's been a four-year pitcher. He wanted the ball today and we gave him the ball. We're not going to refuse a senior in his last game against Quincy."

The Red Raiders' offense soon went to work with a pair of runs in the second off junior pitcher Dan Myers. Junior all-star Chris Boyd was hit by a pitch to lead off the inning and junior Steve Matos singled past a diving Ricky Salvucci at third base. Juniors Dave Guerriero and Brendan Carnell followed with RBI singles.

"We had the lead and I was hoping we were going to keep it," Draicchio said. "They beat us at the plate, bottom line. They got a lot of hits and capitalized on it. The one thing I said was try not to lead off with a walk or hit batter and we did that one inning and that was the inning that started them on a roll."

North Quincy, which has a team batting average hovering around the .300 mark, pulled away from Quincy in the fourth inning with five runs on six hits.

Matos and Guerriero each singled and Carnell followed with an RBI single. A throwing error on the play allowed both runners to move into scoring position and junior Shaun McBrien knocked them home with a single.

Junior Matt Boyle relieved Myers and got an out before junior Jay Lewis ripped an RBI double and senior tri-captain Paul Doolan plated him with a single.

The Red Raiders tacked on a run in the fifth on Carnell's sacrifice fly that scored Boyd, who led off with a single.

Beach said he'll miss his tri-captains — all-star Tom Power, Allen and Doolan who've been with the team for four years — but is looking forward to next season.

"It's tough to see them go but it's nice to end it with a win for them," Beach said. "They were the only seniors that started. We're still young. Hopefully the juniors and sophomores pick up where they left off."

THE NORTH QUINCY High School girls' tennis team captured the Atlantic Coast League North Division championship this season — its first league title since 1997. It ended its season with a 4-1 loss to Newton North last Thursday in the first round of the Division 1 South Sectionals. First row, from left: Senior co-captains Yvonne Tam and Winnie Wiwatyukhan. Second row: Katie O'Brien, Kristina Lieu, Mary Lau, Ping Ting Mai and Thanh Ly. Back row: Coach Nancy McGrory, Cathy Lin, Victoria Wong, Joanna Fu and Christina Lin. Successful Season For North Quincy Girls' Tennis

The North Quincy High School girls' tennis team dropped a 4-1 decision to No. 23 Newton North last Thursday at home in the first round of the Division 1 South Sectionals.

Freshman Victoria Wong notched the lone point for the 10th-seeded Red Raiders, winning 7-5, 3-6, 6-2 at No. 2 singles. After a slow start to the season, Wong found her rhythm in the middle part and won most of her matches.

Senior co-captain Yvonne Tam had a close match at No. 1 singles, losing in three sets.

Although North Quincy's postseason was short-lived, it still enjoyed a successful regular season.

The Red Raiders captured the Atlantic Coast League North Division championship — its first league title since 1997. They finished with a 12-4 overall record, 9-3 in the league. They also defeated Quincy twice, 5-0, for the first time in several years.

The No. 2 doubles team of sophomore Kristina Lieu and junior Thanh Ly went 14-1 during the season.

Also turning in strong years were Tam, Wong, senior co-captain Winnie Wiwatyukhan at No. 3 singles and the No. 1 doubles team of juniors Ping Ting Mai and Christina Lin.

SENIOR CO-CAPTAINS Yvonne Tam and Winnie Wiwatyukhan helped lead the North Quincy High School girls' tennis team to its first league championship since 1997.

IT'S ALL IN THE TIMING

Timing belts synchronize the rotation of the camshaft and the crankshaft so that the valves and pistons work in precise harmony. While timing chains are manufactured to last nearly as long as the lifetime of the car, timing belts must be replaced according to the vehicle manufacturer's specifications. If a timing belt were to fail, the vehicle would grind to a halt, which could result in a very expensive repair to the engine. With this in mind, vehicle owners are urged to check their owner's manuals to see if their vehicles have timing belts and, if so, when they should be replaced. This is a scheduled maintenance procedure that should not be dismissed or neglected.

The timing belt is essential to your car's performance. When the timing belt needs to be replaced, make sure you entrust that job to professionals. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, we have years of experience, and can perform all your scheduled maintenance. Questions? Call 781-843-1550. Open: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

HINT: Timing belts generally last about 60,000 miles.

The Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Race for ALS, also known as the Squirrel Run, will be held Saturday at Pageant Field, Merrymount Parkway, Quincy.

Runners and walkers of all ages and abilities are welcome to attend the five-mile run and two and a half-mile walk which will benefit the Angel Fund, a non-profit organization dedicated to funding ALS research at the Cecil B. Jimmy Kennedy lost his courageous battle with ALS, better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, in 1997 at the age of 31.

Registration begins at 8 a.m. with the walk starting at 9 a.m. The run begins at 10 a.m. along a course that is officially sanctioned by the USA Track and Field, New England Association.

Cost to pre-register is $15; $20 on the day of the event. The first 500 participants to register will receive a race T-shirt. Numbers will not be mailed prior to the race.

This is the ninth year for the Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Race for ALS, according to Rich Kennedy, Jimmy's brother and president of the Angel Fund.

In addition to the race and walk, the day will be filled with entertainment for children, plenty of refreshments and awards (New Balance apparel and sporting goods) for competitive runners in 15 age divisions for men and women.

There will be trophies, gift certificates and other awards, including 10 copies of "Fire on the Track: The Steve Prefontaine Story" donated by Chambers Productions of Portland, Ore.

Disappointed Quincy Bows To Braintree

SOFTBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

Head coach Mike Sedar may not have expected his Quincy High School softball team to make the playoffs at the beginning of the season, but that all changed when it rode into the halfway point with a five-game winning streak.

That's what made last Wednesday's 10-1 loss to No. 15 Braintree in the preliminary round of the Division 1 South Sectionals so disappointing. Sedar anticipated a better showing by the 18th-seeded Presidents.

"I didn't expect us to be in the playoffs this year," he said. "We did better than I thought we would, but when you start winning you expect to do more. We won five games in a row and then had a 13-day break and weren't the same team when we came back.

"There were some high points this year. All in all, we made the playoffs again for the fifth year in a row. We beat North Quincy twice. We've never lost to them since I've been here. This year's seniors won eight games in a row against them."

The Presidents made too many physical and mental errors in the infield against Braintree — something that plagued them down the stretch in which they went 2-4 in their final six games.

"Typical of what we've gone through the last three weeks," Sedar said. "Too many errors in the infield. It's not typical Quincy High defense. I don't know what went wrong."

Braintree's Liz DiMascio overpowered Quincy, allowing just a pair of hits and striking out 10.

Quincy, which was held hitless through five innings, scored its lone run in the sixth on senior tri-captain Courteney Hall's RBI triple.

Senior pitcher Theresa MacConochie, who relies on ground ball outs, absorbed the loss for Quincy but Sedar said the team wouldn't have made it to the postseason without here.

"Theresa is our MVP this year," he said. "We would've been lost without her. She gets a lot of ground balls and we made too many errors on bunnies. She's kind of a good story. She played as a freshman, didn't play for three years and came back and saved our butts this year.

"She's been hurting with some shoulder problems. She's been a soldier for us. She hadn't pitched in three years and it caught up to her. Without her we wouldn't have been in the playoffs. She was that big a deal for us."

Quincy had four players named to the Atlantic Coast League all-star team. Senior tri-captains Kim Lebel (.470 batting average), Leanna Lam and Hall and junior Brighid Kyle.

Quincy-North Turns In Solid Performances Against Powerhouses

GIRLS' TRACK

The Quincy/North Quincy High School girls' track team recently suffered a pair of losses to the true powerhouses of track in the state.

Q/NQ fell to Whitman-Hanson, 110-26, and to Dennis-Yarmouth, 111-25. But that didn't stop them from collecting several wins and quality performances.

Rachel Barrett (shot-put), Kim Allen (high jump) and Virginia Wong (javelin) all earned wins.

Jenna Furey ran her fastest two mile in two years (12:14.6) to qualify for states, and Rachael Kasanoff, Lauren Brooks and Nicole Kasanoff all turned in personal bests in distances races.

Other scorers were Jessie Howlett (100), Lily Man (800), Julie Lynch (javelin), Kelly Pineo (shot-put) and Jen Nhan (hurdles).

The meet, which was rescheduled three times due to the heavy May rains, was threatened several times with sprinkles but no serious precipitation ensued.

"I think the kids were ready to run in anything this time," said head coach Geoff Hennessy. "The Whitman-Hanson facility is beautiful and their staff did a great job hosting the meet. We can only hope Quincy's new track is nearly as good."

The meet also decided the Atlantic Coast League dual meet champ, with Whitman-Hanson taking a four-point win over Dennis-Yarmouth.

Quincy Lacrosse Season Over

Quincy High School didn't expect to hang around that long in the Eastern Mass. Division 1 boys' lacrosse tournament.

But the No. 16 seed Presidents (13-6) were hoping they could advance out of the preliminary around, where they fell to No. 17 seed Acton-Boxboro (11-8), 18-6, last Tuesday at home.

Head coach Kevin Orcutt guided the team to the tournament for the first time in the program's three-year history.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It seems a pertinent question to ask these days, "What does the flag mean to you? Is it only a symbol? If so, of what? Our nation's independence? Is it identified only with a ritualistic habit? What do the colors red, white and blue mean? Do the number of stars mean only a union of separate states? Do the stars mean anything else? What do the red and white stripes represent? Does the color of red symbolize the blood shed by soldiers to gain independence for us? Does it indicate the valor, zeal and fervency of the American way? Does the white indicate hope, purity and cleanliness? Does the blue indicate the color of the sky and sea which in turn indicates reverence to God? ... It may mean some of these things to some people. But should it not mean, above everything else, a symbol of American Civilization, Enlightenment and Liberty; a reflection of patriotism at its finest?

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Lots of possibilities begin to open up by midweek. Some seem more appealing than others. But wait for more facts to emerge later on before you consider which to choose.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Bravo to the determined Bovine. While others might give up, you continue to search for answers. Expect your Taurean tenacity to begin paying off by week's end.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might want to consider stepping back from the task at hand for a while. This could help you get a better perspective on what you've done and what still needs to be done.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your keen Cancerian insight should help you determine whether a new offer is solid or just more fluff 'n' stuff. The clues are all there, waiting for you to find them.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Being ignored is difficult for any proud Leo or Leona. But pushing yourself back into the spotlight might be unwise. Instead, let things work themselves out at their own pace.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Trying to uncover a colleague's secret under the pretext of showing concern is ill-advised. Control your curiosity in order to avoid raising resentment in the workplace.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Expect to hear good news about a loved one. Also, be prepared for some changes in several family relationships that could develop from this lucky turn of events.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Some surprises are expected to accompany a number of changes that will continue through part of next week. At least one could involve a romantic situation.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might be upset by some of your critics. But most of your associates continue to have faith in your ability to get the job done, and done well.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A workplace goal that suddenly seems out of reach is no problem for the sure-footed Goat, who moves steadily forward despite any obstacles placed in his or her way.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Uncertainty about who is right and who isn't might keep you from making a clear-cut decision. Wait until you know more about what you're being asked to decide.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Be careful to keep your emotions in check when dealing with a demanding personal situation. You need to set an example of strength for others to follow.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have an extraordinary ability to rally people to do their best. You would be a treasure as a teacher.

Dependable Cleaners 'Read To Ride' Begins

Dependable Cleaners is giving area children another reason to hit the books this summer, with its eighth annual "Read to Ride" reading incentive program.

The community endeavor offers children, ages 6-15, the chance to win a bike and helmet (retail value up to $275) for every book they complete within the weeks of the program.

Entry forms are available at all 17 Dependable Cleaners locations and participating bike shops until July 21.

Children may enter once for each book they read. A parent or guardian must sign the entry form, verifying that the book was completed.

Three winners' names will be drawn every Monday for seven consecutive weeks, from June 5 until July 24, (except the week of July 3).

For more information, including printable entry forms visit www.DependableCleaners.com.

I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, show me herin that you are my Mother. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3X). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3X). Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light roads so that I can attain my goal. You gave me divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life you are with me. The Salary Review Committee was established out of a resolve by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin,

The committee reviews salaries of present non-union appointed positions within the city, by means of comparison to other city employees, and comparisons to similar positions in municipalities similar in population and budget.

Members of the committee include Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, Councillor John Keenan, Human Resources Director Roberta Keta, Assistant to the Mayor David Murphy, and resident Arthur Foley of Century 21 Annex Realty.

To make their recommendations, the committee reviewed:

- Existing salary ordinances.
- Salary comparisons of the Massachusetts Municipal Association Benchmark for 2000, 2004, and 2006.
- Consumer Price Index, Bureau of Labor statistics for Boston, Brockton and Nashua.
- Results of a survey conducted by Kety on behalf of the committee.
- Schedule of salaries and step increases for Quincy municipal unions.

The Salary Review Committee submitted that:

There is a need for a salary range for each position to aid in the hiring process, to give prospective employees a clear statement of expected salary levels at the time of hiring and expected step increases.

The salaries of non-union, appointed positions within the city have not kept pace with increases in the Consumer Price Index or increases granted to all other municipal employees.

Direct comparisons of salaries of non-union, appointed positions within the city to similar positions in other municipalities is not always possible, given that such things as job responsibilities and terms of appointment vary by municipality.

The council order, which constitutes the recommendations of the Salary Review Committee, is expected to establish salary uniformity within the city in terms of job responsibilities, provide salary ranges to be used in the hiring process, establishes a step scale similar to those used by bargaining units within the city, and set competitive salaries in an effort to attract and retain qualified and committed public employees.

Re-dedication Ceremony Tonight

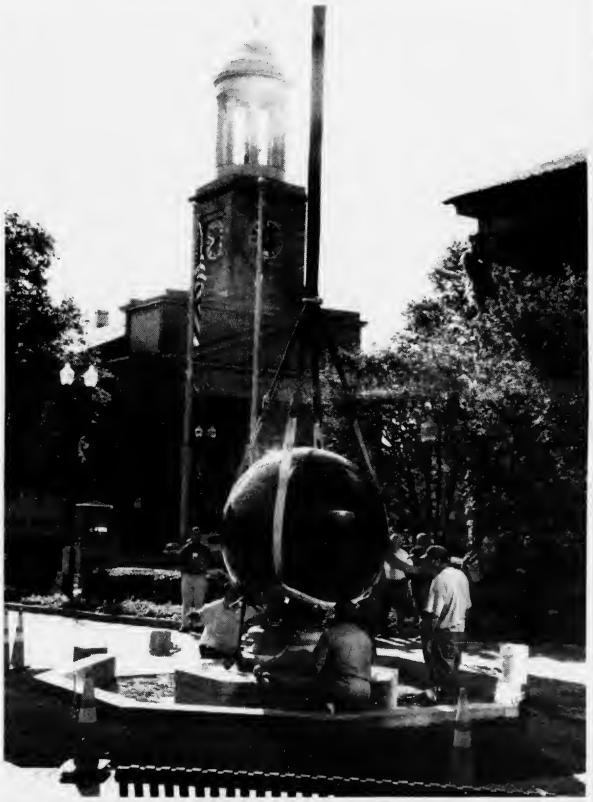
Granite Ball Back Home

By HENRY BOSWORTH

The Granite Ball is back home at City Hall after a 69-year absence.

It will be rededicated tonight (Thursday) at a 6:30 p.m. ceremony on Constitution Common outside City Hall.

The ball, which had been at the Fore River Rotary since 1937, was ordered moved from there in March, 2005 by Mayor William Phelan and returned to City Hall, its original location.



It has been at Barre, Vt., 15 months for repairs and re-polishing and was brought back Tuesday for tonight's rededication.

It is now in the center of Constitution Common where the World War II Memorial had been temporarily placed before being moved to Merrymount Park.

"The ball is a great reminder of Quincy's famous granite industry and that history should be preserved," Phelan said.

The "Gazing Ball" as it is known for its mirror-like reflection is now located just a few feet from its original site, just outside the City Clerk's office, where it was dedicated June 12, 1925.

It was a gift from the Quincy Granite Manufacturers Association to celebrate Quincy's Tercentenary.

THE GRANITE BALL is lowered by crane onto its base on Constitution Common Tuesday as it returns to its City Hall location after a 69-year hiatus. It will be rededicated Thursday evening. Other photos on Page 10. Quincy Sun photo/Robert Noble

The ball was unveiled by Maxine Louise Swingle, daughter of quarry owner Jonathan Swingle who donated a 25-ton block of granite from which the 9 1/2 ton ball was carved from.

Tonight's rededication has a direct link with Swingle's granddaughter, Joanne Swingle Hennigan,

Concerns Cited In Neighborhood Surveys

Speed Traps Set For Residential Streets

Mayor William Phelan and Police Chief Robert Crowley announce the Police Department will extend their speed enforcement efforts into neighborhood streets in response to concerns expressed by residents in the Neighborhoods First! surveys.

Police speed traps will be set up on roads such as Whitwell Street, Fenno Street, Centre Street, Billings Road, East Squantum Street, Independence Avenue, West Squantum Street, Manet Avenue, West Elm Avenue and others in the coming weeks.

"Our police do a fine job patrolling speeding on the main arteries in our city, but we can do more to ensure that our secondary roads are safer," Phelan said. "These are the neighborhood streets that are more likely to have playgrounds and pedestrian traffic than the main roads. I share the concerns expressed by our residents and we will respond accordingly."

Phelan is also working with DPW Commissioner Steve O'Donnell to increase the number of pedestrian crosswalk markers throughout the city.

Neighborhoods First On List

Pothole Repair Schedule

Mayor William Phelan will have DPW personnel canvass Quincy neighborhoods in an effort to repair pothole damage caused by the winter and spring weather.

He said this is a different approach than usual for addressing this problem.

"In the past, city crews would respond to phone calls about potholes, but we all know not every problem has an advocate," Phelan said. "I will dedicate the resources necessary to canvass our neighborhood streets in an effort to fill as many potholes as we can identify to help alleviate this problem."

The schedule will mimic the schedule of the street sweeping schedule, where personnel are assigned to a specific neighborhood during specific dates. The schedule:

June 15-16, Houghs Neck
June 19-20, Germantown
June 21-22, Adams Shore
June 23, 26, Merrymount
June 27-28, Quincy Point
June 29-30, Faxon Park
July 6-7, Penn's Hill
July 10-11, Montclair
July 12-14, Wollaston
July 17-18, West Quincy
July 19, Hospital Hill
July 20, South Quincy
July 21, Beechwood Knoll

Son Charged With Slaying 92-Year-Old Mother

A 59-year-old postal worker pleaded innocent in Quincy District Court Tuesday to murder charges in the death 92-year-old mother in the home they shared at 54 Tyler St., North Quincy.

Hugh Crawford was ordered held without bail by Judge Mark Koven for further court appearance July 12. He was arrested Monday night at the Quincy Police Station.

Mrs. Mary Crawford was found badly injured last Thursday by an ambulance crew alerted by a Lifeline medical device. She died of her injuries about 4:15 a.m. Sunday at Quincy Medical Center.

Prosecutor Robert Nelson, chief of District Attorney William Keating's Homicide Unit, told the court an autopsy showed there were ligature marks on Mrs. Crawford's neck.

State and Quincy Police executed a search warrant for the duplex house on Tyler Street, where Hugh Crawford lived in a basement apartment.

Code Enforcement Officer Approved By Council Committee

By MIKAELA SLANEY

The Ordinance Committee of the City Council approved an ordinance to fund a code enforcement officer, Monday.

The vote was 6 to 3 with Councillor Joseph Finn, Council President Douglas Gutro, and Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi in opposition. The Ordinance Committee is a full council membership.

Jim Carson, a resident who said he walks through Quincy streets for recreation, was the first to alert Chairman Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis to noticeable code violations in the city.

"I walk quite a bit," said Carson. "I walk west Quincy quite a few times a week."

Carson described rubbish barrels out a week early, promotional signs displayed on residential property, uncovered dumpsters with flipped covers that can't be closed.

Carson said that he has tried to report situations, but often times the house number is not posted on the homes.

"The code enforcement officer could educate at first, posting notices on the doors," said Carson. Then eventually, he could carry through enforcement, he said.

"Bring the city back to a nice and neat city," said Carson. "I think it's long overdue, and I feel strongly about it."

"Commissioner Jay Duca, head of Inspectional Services, said "I do support it. I think it's a good idea. The focus of the code enforcement officer can be specific to quality of life complaints, and be proactive."

Duca also added to the list of code violations: illegal rooming houses, noise, houses in disrepair, lights on people's property, working on houses without a permit, vehicles on property and not clearing snow from sidewalks to the list of complaints.

Since July 1 of 2005, Duca said he has logged 350 complaints of codes being broken throughout the city. Including the calls that were not logged, the number was probably closer to 400, he said.

Duca said that police can handle the workload presently without the code enforcement officer, but seldom have the time to follow up once people are warned.

"The amount of complaints may be reduced once people realize that we are following up, and people will have to pay," said Duca.

Gutro's particular concern was illegal rooming houses, an issue that was acknowledged but has remained unresolved for four and a half years.

According to Gutro, there are approximately 200 employees in the city, part of whose job is code enforcement.

"The job description is really putting a large burden on one person," said Gutro. It is a burden which should be shared by the 200 employees, he said.

"It's not adding a person to the payroll, but giving management direction from above. Saying what needs to be done and dictating over the next six months, this is what needs to be tackled," said Gutro.

"We have a substantial number of employees of the

Adams Memorial Dinner Fundraiser Friday Night

The people who are planning to memorialize President John Adams and his family on the Mall in Washington are holding a $250-a-plate black-tie dinner Friday, June 16, at 7:15 p.m. in the Boston Marriott Quincy Hotel.

And, as an added attraction to a speech by David McCullough, the author of a prize-winning Adams biography, they may be ready to announce their choice of a Mall location for the tribute to the man from Quincy.

"The Adams Memorial Foundation Board of Directors will be meeting before the dinner," said James Sheets, the regional director of the Foundation. "We've been looking at 12 to 15 sites for the Memorial.

"They should have a decision very soon, maybe at Friday's meeting."

The tribute to the second president on the Mall has been approved by the Congress, which gave the Foundation until November 2008 to recommend a favored location on the Mall and a design.

DAVID McCULLOUGH

JAMES SHEETS

"We would like to have the site in hand by January, 2007," said Sheets.

The favored design is a library in a rose garden, a New England-style building to display the letters of John Adams and his wife, Abigail, and other 18th century writers under the supervision of the Library of Congress.

"The concept was determined by McCullough," said Sheets. "The building would be like the Stone Library at the Adams Mansion in Quincy but it would not be a replica."

The National Park Service, which supervises the memorials on the Mall, has contributed $1 million for planning and design but the

Assassin Ann

I don't often editorially wander out of Quincy. But I just couldn't let this go by without comment.

I mean Ann Coulter.

COULTER

The motor-mouth conservative TV commentator usually spends most of her time bashing liberals and serving as a Bush White House cheerleader.

Democrats can do no right. Republicans no wrong. We know where she stands politically.

But now she's gone too far, viciously insulting the wives of husbands who died in the 9/11 World Trade Center terrorist attack.

In her new book, Godless: The Church of Liberalism she writes:

"These broads are millionaires, lionized on TV and in articles about them, reveling in their status as celebrities.

"I've never seen people enjoying their husband's deaths so much."

Broads, she call thems.

If there's a broad in this picture it's Coulter. That's how she comes across with her cruel comments.

She's a character assassin who maybe ought to be muzzled.

And running off at the mouth like an open faucet, she adds this nasty insult:

"How do we know their husbands weren't planning to divorce these harpies. Now that their shelf life is dwindling they'd better hurry up and appear on Playboy."

How cruel can you get!

Her prime targets are four widows from New Jersey who since the 2001 attacks have spoken out favoring an independent commission to look into the government's possible flaws before the attacks.

Maybe the Bush White House was asleep at the switch. Or maybe it was something that just couldn't be detected before it actually happened. The public has a right to know for sure one way or the other.

Coulter on one of her TV stops said the women were using their feelings "to make a political point."

I'm not what you would call a diehard fan of Hilary Rodham Clinton, New York senator and former first lady.

But I'm with her when she calls Coulter's comments "a vicious, mean-spirited attack" on the widows.

Coulter, who has been popping up all over television, seems to be enjoying it all. She just keeps babbling on.

Could it be that with the fifth annivesary of 9/11 coming up in September, this is a great way to tout her book? Why not boost the sales and make all the money you can at the expense of widows.

Coulter is all over TV land. Somebody should pull the plug on her. And maybe she would go away.

As for her book, I don't think it will get anywhere neare a Pulitizer Prize.

But I would nominate her for something she really deserves:

The Poison Pen Award.

Should Firefighter Be Assigned To Police Boat?

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Should a firefighter be assigned to a police boat used for homeland security?

The City Council Public Safety Committee Monday night adopted a resolution asking Mayor William Phelan to have representatives from the police and fire departments discuss the possibility of assigning a fireman to a donated police boat.

The motion passed 4-1 with Councillor John Keenan the lone dissenter.

Other Public Safety Committee members include Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, and Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee, who recommended the meeting between the departments.

"That's an excellent idea," said Police Chief Robert Crowley.

Ernest Arienti, President of the Quincy Fire Fighters Local 792, explained the importance of keeping a firefighter aboard the boat. He said the boat has access to a "high capacity fire pump" which could prove useful in protecting the 26 miles of Quincy shoreline.

Sgt. Robert Gillan, supervisor of Homeland Security, Marine Unit, disagreed. "(The boat) has very limited fire fighting capabilities," he said.

In an ironic turn of events, the Public Safety Committee meeting was several hours after a commuter boat carrying 60 people caught fire in Quincy Bay. It was stationed between Long Island and Houghs Neck, Arienti later told The Sun.

According to Arienti, "a couple harbormasters," and a Quincy police boat were the first to arrive at the scene. The Coast Guard "got in eventually," and "40 minutes later" the Boston Fire Boat arrived. The passengers were evacuated in Hingham.

Sgt. Robert Gillan, Supervisor of Homeland Security, Marine Unit, who was at the scene, described the boat as "a densely packed passenger boat."

"I happened to see a video of that commuter boat. I thought to myself, 'talk about fortuitous that we're having this discussion,'" said Coughlin.

"All the various marinas within the city, the fuel depots within the marinas... ships delivering fuel to the tank farm on Quincy Avenue and the ones on the Southern Artery, the buildings at Twin Rivers and all the piers and buildings down (at) the shipyard, these in itself are reasons that this is needed," said Arienti.

"Along with these is the safety of the public in the water, and on their personal water crafts," he said. "If by having a fire fighter and a police officer assigned to this boat keeps any one of these situations from happening, it has paid for itself."

"(We) have had a long delay in responding due to the limited spots to put the boats in the water. Also, during these emergencies, the Boston Fire Boat has been called upon to respond. But because of the channels they have to follow, their responses also have a long delay."

Arienti said the Boston Fire Boat usually takes between 40 to 45 minutes to arrive to the scene of a Quincy fire.

Arienti said an estimated 90 percent of Quincy fire fighters are Emergency Medical Technicians, and may give emergency medical care to injured citizens on the water.

Gillan disagreed about the function of the boat.

"The primary mission (for the boat) is counter terrorism," said Gillan. However, when Gillan was asked if he would oppose a firefighter on board, he said "I would never turn away extra help."

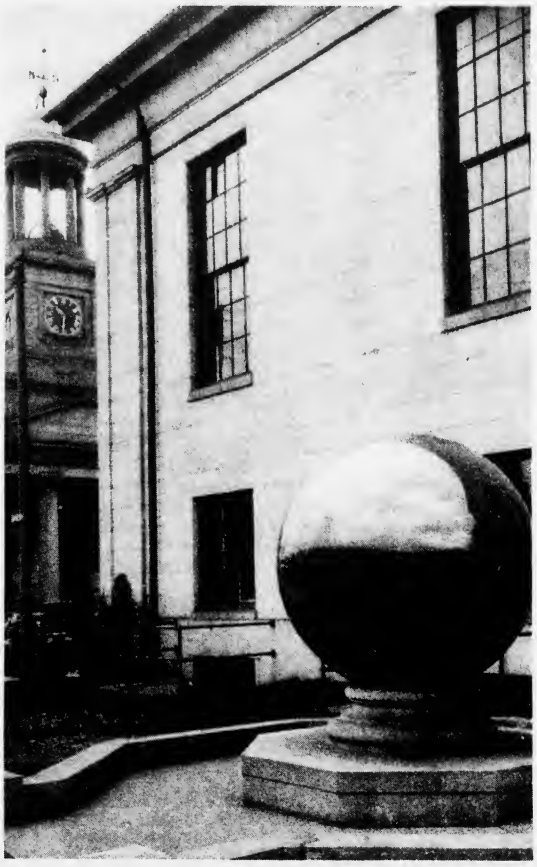
Despite this, Gillan continued to express concerns. "Who's going to be in charge? I picked my people because they're the best people available. My men know how to act and react. I won't do it."

Gillan said that boats should "carry their own fire fighting capacities on board." If they can't control the fire, they should evacuate, he said. Safety was a priority above anything else, he said.

Gillan said the police would use the fire fighting aparatous if it was safe to do so, "but we're not going to risk lives to save property,

Arienti said he asked Mayor William Phelan to include the position is the budget for Fiscal Year 2007. Arienti said he thinks the position would cost under $50,000, and the firefighter would work from noon to 8 p.m., seven days per week. The inflated salary would be compensation for overtime, he said.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, who is not on the Public Safety Committee asked Arienti, "what do you think the function of the Coast Guard is?"



"We feel it is part of our function also," said Arienti.

A final vote will be taken at the next City Council meeting Monday night.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1930's POSTCARD shows the Quincy Granite Gazing Ball in its original location just outside the City Clerk's office in the old City Hall building. The ball was a gift to the city June 12, 1925 on its 300th anniversary from the Quincy Granite Manufacturers Association. They wanted to express their eternal gratitude for the stone that came from Quincy's native hills and brought prosperity to their families and the city. Its chief purpose was to keep alive the sentiments and feelings of our forefathers and to foster at all times a high regard for the principles of liberty. The ball was located in this spot for 12 years until it was moved to the Fore River traffic rotary on June 10, 1937. Now returned to the plaza at City Hall, and rededicated on June 15, 2006, it is only a few dozen feet from its original location. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Marriage Is A Choice

I wish to respond to the letter written by Bill Kerrigan (June 1) on his insightful information regarding the upcoming vote in the state on the "Marriage Amendment."

It was a wake-up call to all citizens to be aware that "our right" to vote may be taken away by our local politicians who seem to feel they should be politically correct and are caving in to the strident voices.

I do not have an ounce of bigotry in my heart, and I wish "all my brothers and sisters" well. However, I believe in the truth that marriage is of one man and woman for the procreation of a family according to natural law.

At this time in the world's history two words have been intermingled and changed by society. They are "right" and "choice." Marriage is not a "right." It is a "choice." Everyone has a right to choose the way they wish to live.

However, they do not have a "right" to force their "choice" on society. That is what has happened in Massachusetts. Many feel their way of life is a right way and have been bombarding politicians with their "philosophy of life." As a result many of our politicians are dragging their feet in bringing this serious issue to the vote.

All of us have a right to vote. All of us. All voices have a right to be heard. I want my right to vote. Do you? Call or write your local politicians now. Time is of the essence. Let them know how you feel. Do not be silent. Silence gives sanction. Have we become so engrossed in our own lives that we do not see the big picture? If we are "denied" our right to vote there will be dire consequences. What other "rights" will we lose?

Hannon Orders Combined Trash, Garbage Collection

Week Of June 12
1974

By FRANK McCAULEY

Mayor Walter Hannon ignored a City Council resolution and ordered the combined collection of trash and garbage starting July 1.

Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets, a leader of the opposition, retained counsel "to give legal advice and direction to the people" in his fight against the plan. Sheets recommended the City Council itself stay out of any legal confrontation with the mayor at this time to avoid "destroying the cooperation necessary to give leadership to our city over the next year and a half."

In announcing the combined collections, Hannon said the separate garbage pickup is costing $280,000 per year. By combining the garbage with the rubbish, essentially all of this amount can be saved.

Hannon noted the State Public Health laws allow the city to mix rubbish and garbage provided it follows the rules set down by the state. The procedure includes continuous compacting of the garbage and rubbish and at the end of the day compacted six-inch earth cover.

REV. GRAHAM LEAVES FIRST PARISH CHURCH

The Rev. John Graham announced his resignation as minister of First Parish Church (the Church of the Presidents). His resignation cleared the way for him to assume the position of director of Quincy Heritage, a committee established to coordinate the bicentennial and the 350th anniversary of the founding of Quincy.

Graham noted he views public service as "the highest calling" and felt that the director's position is a full-time task.

Graham has been active in the Quincy community. He is president of the Board of Survival as well as president of the Board of Supervisors of the Woodward School for Girls.

KEEPING UP WITH THE RED SOX

The Boston Red Sox with a record of 30-25 led the six-team American League East Division by one-half game over second-place Milwaukee Brewers. Right-hander Luis Tiant and left-hander Bill "the Spaceman" Lee led the Red Sox pitching staff with identical 7-6 records.

CITY OFFICIALS VISITING TWO CITIES

Mayor Hannon along with City Councillors Leo Kelly, John Lydon Jr. and James Sheets, members of the Mayor's Downtown Development Committee, visited Springfield and Hartford, Conn. Hannon is in the process of preparing a "developer's kit" for the Hancock Park Area and is comparing the development potential of Quincy's downtown to various cities on the east coast.

Wollaston Lutheran Church Celebrates 75th Anniversary

Wollaston Lutheran Church celebrated the 75th anniversary of its founding in a combined bilingual Service of Holy Communion June 4 at the church, 550 Hancock St.

Guest preacher for the service was Rev. James Keurulainen, president of the New England District of the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod.

Church organist Doris MacKenzie Ehrens played the organ, and Dr. Charles Seifert, retired head of the Music Department of Eastern Nazarene College, and church organist for over 20 years, played a violin prelude. The congregation's Chinese Ministry Choir sang two anthems.

The congregation's Pastors Adolph Wismar Jr. and Richard Law served as liturgists.

Following the service, a banquet was held at the Marriott Hotel at Crown Colony. Over 250 guests attended, among whom were a number of church and community dignitaries.

Wollaston Lutheran Church traces its origins to September 1931 when Rev. Elmer A. Kettner was called by the region district of the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod., to begin mission work in Greater Boston. After his arrival in Quincy, Rev. Kettner canvassed from house to house inviting the those who did not attend church to attend the Lutheran services he proposed to conduct. The first service was held Oct. 11 in the Little Theatre, (today, The Deware Funeral Home).

In 1954, Rev. Frank Bauer was installed as pastor. At the time 112 people were transferred to the new Lutheran mission in South Weymouth, and a parish school was started with kindergartners and grades 1 and 2. By 1957, the congregation's Christian Day School classrooms were remodeled to accommodate grades 3, 4, 5, and 6. School enrollment was 115, and there were five teaching staff members.

In 1966, the Christian Day School classes in the church building were ordered to close by the Massachusetts Department of Public Safety. The congregation was unable to raise funds for a school building. In 1968, the congregation agreed to mortgage the church building for $100,000 in order to purchase the remaining Fenno property next door and erect a federally-funded elderly housing project. In 1973, Fenno House, a United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) 202 project, cost $2.6 million. It continues to provide 151 apartments for low-income elderly today.

In 1977, the congregation agreed to sponsor a second housing project for the elderly on Brackett Street in Quincy Center. In 1980, Town Brook House was dedicated. This eight story, 151 unit apartment building for the elderly was built under HUD's 202/8 program. Total costs of the project was in excess of $7 million.

Around that time Rev. Bauer began to step down from some of his part-time duties, retiring after 27 years as Chaplain in the Army National Guard. Governor Edward King promoted in to state rank of Brigadier General. Shortly after, Rev. Bauer retired as Hospital Chaplain with the Veterans Administration, completing 21 years in that role.

In 1983, Rev. Adolph H. Wismar Jr. was installed as Pastor, and Rev. Bauer retired from serving the congregation. In 1986, the congregation began outreach to the growing Asian population in Quincy. The congregation's Asian American Committee sponsored ESL classes and a job placement center for refugees and immigrants.

The committee also sponsored the first of many Asian New Year festivals at North Quincy High School and the first of several August Moon festivals. Both celebrations also helped establish the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition, today's Father Bill's Place.

Rev. Richard Law arrived from Hong Kong to begin work in Quincy in September of 1989. In May of 1990, the first Chinese service was held. The congregation applied to the New England District LCMS for partial subsidy for the Chinese mission. A subsidy was granted, and declining subsidies were granted annually until they were finally phased out in 2004.

In 1994, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development awarded capital advance funding of $5.9 million to construct 75 one-bedroom units of housing for the elderly at 314 Water Street under the Section 202 Capital Advance Program. In 1996, the 75 unit apartment building was constructed and named "Bauer House" in honor of the work that Rev. and Mrs. Bauer had done in creating and operating the congregation's three low-income senior housing buildings. Dedication ceremonies held on Sept. 22 also honored Rev. and Mrs. Bauer.

In 1999, the congregation applied to the Lutheran Church Extension Fund for loans which would eventually total nearly $2 million to construct and begin operation of a child care center at 47 Weston Ave. Rev. Ingo Dutzmann of First Lutheran, Boston, helped the congregation through the application process with LCEF, and funding was approved. Construction of the congregation's child care center continued through the year 2000, and the center was opened in late December of 2000, under the direction of Marcia Baily. Dedication ceremonies were held on May 20, 2001. The classrooms were opened as student enrollment grew and new staff was hired.

In 2003, Wollaston Lutheran Church Apartments, Inc. applied to HUD for a $3 million grant to convert 39 units at Fenno House for use as affordable assisted living apartments. After demolition and reconstruction was complete, the assisted living facility was licensed and opened in March of 2004. The assisted living at Fenno House continues to offer services to residents at below market rate.

Wollaston Lutheran Church continues to this day as a diverse and multi-ethnic group of Christians dedicated to serving God through worship and through serving each other and the community at large with the Gospel and with social ministry, a congregation for others.

WOLLASTON LUTHERAN CHURCH recently celebrated its 75th anniversary with a church service followed by a banquet at the Quincy Marriott Hotel. More than 250 guests attended, including a number of church and community dignitaries. From left are Esther Lee of the South Cove Community Health Center, Fred Schaller and Barbara McDaniel, site manager at Town Brook House.

Flag Day Parade Rescheduled For Saturday

The 55th annual Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration, postponed due to inclement weather, will take place Saturday evening.

The parade steps off at 7 p.m. on Coddington Street, proceeding to Hancock Street, to Merrymount Parkway and ending at the entrance to Pageant Field.

"The parade ceremony and fireworks have all been rescheduled for this Saturday," said Thomas Koch, chairman of the Flag Day Committee. "We're confident that the event will go off without a hitch, provided that the weather cooperates."

Quincy's returning Iraq War veterans and those who served with the 102nd Army National Guard Battalion, based in Quincy, will be honored as a group Grand Marshal for the parade and celebration.

A number of bands will join in the procession, including East Coast Jazz, Boston Firemen's Band, Waltham and Canton Legion Bands, Boston Firemen's Band, Boston Fire Gaelic Brigade and the Quincy Public Schools All-City Band.

In addition to the bands, two antique fire engines from the Bare Cove Fire Museum in Hingham, the Weymouth Corvette Club, color guards from the Massachusetts State Police, Quincy Fire Department, Quincy Police Department, Naval Recruiters and, the parade highlight, nearly two thousand flag-waving youngsters from various youth organizations citywide will all participate in the 1.5-mile march.

The parade will culminate into a celebration at Pageant Field with a flag-raising of a huge 30 foot by 60 foot version of Old Glory, presentation of the Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award to Donald E. Martin Jr., patriotic performance and sing-a-long and, if weather permits, a fly-over by the Massachusetts State Police Air Wing.

The evening will be capped off by a fireworks display over Black's Creek around 9:15 p.m.

THE WELCOME TO Quincy banner in the background greets the granite ball as it returns to City Hall. Quincy Sun photos/Robert Noble

THE 9 1/2 TON "Gazing Ball" is placed into position on its 5 1/2 ton base on Constitution Common. The project was carried out by the New England Crane Company of Methuen and Quincy Cemetery Department employees.

Granite Ball Back Home

performing the unveiling honors.

Speakers will be Mayor Phelan, Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, executive director of the Quincy Historical Society, and Elmer "Mike" Fagerlund and John Ricciuti, past presidents of the Quincy Granite Manufacturers Association. Mark Carey, executive director of Discover Quincy, will be the emcee.

There will be music by the Bala Brass Quintet and refreshments. The public is invited.

There was considerable discussion about where to place the ball back in 1925. One suggested site was the Thomas Crane Public Library lawn.

The Granite Manufacturers Association finally settled on City Hall and placed the ball in the custody of the mayor in office.

Perley Barbour, who was mayor at the time, accepted the ball and said:

"Here, by our City Hall, where are conducted the affairs of the people, it has been placed on firm foundation and here it will stay as long as you have so generously given it so desire."

But on June 10, 1937, Mayor Thomas Burgin had it moved to the Fore River Rotary which was named Wigglesworth Circle in honor of Congressman Richard Wigglesworth.

As years went by the ball became less visible at the rotary with shrub growth. Motorists heading up or down Fore River Bridge risked an accident looking at the ball instead of the road.

Its placement there also deprived children of seeing the ball close-up and marveling their reflection in the polished granite which had led to it being called the "Gazing Ball" when it was at City Hall. They will now have that opportunity once again.

A movement began some years ago to have the ball returned to City Hall.

But it wasn't until Mayor Phelan, as custodian of the ball, last year ordered it moved back to City Hall.

"The remote location (Fore River Rotary) prevented full enjoyment of this true community asset," he says.

"It is a beautiful and unique piece of artwork that was intended to be accessible to the public so its true design could be fully appreciated, hence its nickname the 'Gazing Ball' for its mirror-like quality it possesses."

The ball is back home where most residents believe it belongs and supporters are grateful to Phelan.

Some Quincy Point residents are disappointed at the decision to move the ball.

But Phelan wants to give them something back to replace it at the rotary.

Park Department Executive Director Thomas Koch said plans are to erect a 50-foot flag pole with a ship's yardarm from which the U.S., state and city flags will fly. And perhaps Navy signal flags.

He said they are also thinking of placing a ship's anchor at the base.

That would be appropriate because the nearby former Fore River shipyard is famed for some of the Navy's great war ships built there during World War II.

A nautical remembrance at the rotary would be an appropriate tribute to Quincy Point's great shipbuilding history.

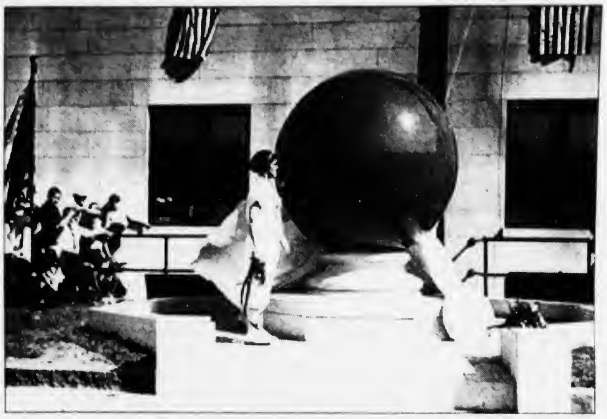
The Tercentenary Granite Ball

By EDWARD FITZGERALD
Executive Director
Quincy Historical Society

In 1925, Quincy staged a giant celebration in honor of the community's 300th anniversary.

The celebration culminated in a week of festivities from June 7-13 that included a historical pageant, a mammoth parade, visiting dignitaries, speeches, tours and fireworks.

By 1925 granite had been, for a century, Quincy's largest and defining industry, giving Quincy the name "the Granite City." As the industry's contribution to the anniversary celebration, Quincy's Granite Manufacturers Association decided to donate to the city, as a public monument, a 6-foot-diameter sphere of dark Quincy granite brought to the highest possible polish.



In choosing to donate this granite ball, the Manufacturers Association sought to symbolize both the strengths of their industry and the spirit of Quincy: The specific qualities of Quincy granite made it particularly suitable for projecting a sense of monumental grandeur. Quincy Dark was the most famous of all the various shades of Quincy granite and was prized for its distinctive beauty when very highly polished.

Granite symbolized endurance and the sphere, both the world and eternity — themes appropriate for a tercentenary commemoration. The association stated the monument's purpose to "foster at all times a high regard for the principles of liberty." The 6-foot diameter made it one of the largest granite balls ever fashioned.

As documented at the time by veteran reporter Timothy Collins, members of the Granite Manufacturers Association worked together throughout the spring to have the ball ready for the June week of celebration. Jonathan Swingle donated the granite from which the ball was made. The 25-ton rough block of granite was cut out of Swingle's quarry and carried 300 feet to the surface on April 1.

Bowen Transportation Company moved the block to Water Street and the Quincy Column Turning Company. There, the granite was first rough-rounded, then turned on a lathe and polished. Quincy Column also made the plinth and Milne & Hector cut and finished the base and enclosure, all of the granite again donated by Jonathan Swingle.

The finished elements were carefully set in place by workers John Capaccolio and Walter Imray at the designated spot — on the north side of Quincy City Hall, along what was then Depot Street.

On Friday afternoon, June 12, the formal dedication took place, with a large crowd attending. Joseph Walker, president of the Granite Manufacturers Association, presented the ball to the city. Mayor Perley Barbour offered the city's acceptance and thanks. The granite ball was unveiled by Jonathan Swingle's daughter, Maxine.

The granite ball remained on the north side of City Hall until 1937 when it was removed to the rotary at the base of the brand-new Fore River Bridge. On June 15, it returns to its original location.

The Granite City

By TOM GALVIN

Quincy's famed granite industry began in earnest in 1826 when Solomon Willard, a native of Petersham, Mass., opened the first quarry in West Quincy as the source of granite for the Bunker Hill Monument in Charlestown.

His obelisk design using large granite blocks was selected for the monument and he was commissioned to build it. A mechanical genius, as well as an architect, he developed methods and devices never used before the extract the stone from the ground and to erect the monument. At the same time the Granite Railway Company built America's first commercial railway to carry the granite to the water's edge for cheap boat transport to Charlestown.

The success of the granite quarrying and manufacturing operations attracted entrepreneurs and craftsmen from all over the U.S. and Europe to Quincy. By the time the last Quincy quarry ceased operations in 1963 there were over 50 large granite quarry holes here. There had been as many as 36 operating at the same time. Millions of tons of granite had been extracted from the earth. It is easy to see why Willard, who had moved to Quincy, was widely known as the father of the granite industry in the United States.

From those quarries in the hills of west Quincy came the prized Quincy granite also known as syenite. It was first used as blocks for buildings and structures but later gained fame for use in monuments. The granite is composed of three of the six hardest minerals on the planet. It is very hard to cut and shape, but it had extraordinary uniformity in its texture and an exceptional range of blue/gray hues. Its hardest led to a high polish and luster adding to its durability. The beauty of polished Quincy granite is unsurpassed.

After steam-powered granite polishing machinery was developed here in 1869 the Quincy monument industry grew dramatically. The large base of skilled workers and advanced monument machining capabilities, located mostly in south Quincy, led to finishing not only Quincy, but also granites brought in from other quarries all over New England and beyond. By the beginning of the twentieth century, there were over 4,000 granite workers employed here in over 140 companies. Quincy was widely known as "The Granite City."

Quincy stonecutters were among the best in the world. Outstanding monuments made in Quincy are in every corner of America and as you would expect some of the finest examples are on the graves of granite men in the local cemeteries. As a sign of the stonecutters prominence here the headquarters

Quincy Ex-POW Featured In New War Heroes Book

By TOM HENSHAW

A day before the Battle of the Bulge broke out and 90 miles due south, Robert Noble's Army unit was surprised by a German patrol and taken prisoner.

They were shuffled between three POW camps for 122 days from Dec. 16, 1944, until they were liberated by a British force as World War II wound down.

Now a Quincy photographer, Noble's story is memorialized along with 18 others in a new book, Journey Out of Darkness: American Heroes in Hitler's POW Camp.

The book, by Hal LaCroix with photos by Jorg Meyer, is the centerpiece of an exhibit displayed at the National Heritage Museum in Lexington until Jan. 7.

Noble spoke at a recent reception opening the exhibit, which was attended by 150 guests, including 14 of the 19 former POWs, many of them from the Greater Boston area.

Most of the POWs, he said, had different experiences depending on the part of the country they were in but all shared one experience in common — lack of food.

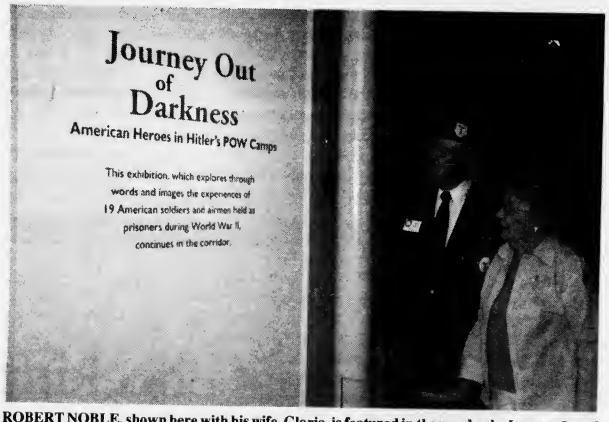
One of those cited in the book, Joe Ciccarello of Peabody, captured when he doubled back to recover the bodies of mortally wounded friends, was starved down to 65 pounds.

The POW experience, said Noble, also affected many in later years in the form of alcoholism, short tempers, the inability to concentrate and the urge to remain always on the alert for danger.

The treatment of POWs and other veterans by the Veterans Administration, he said, has improved markedly over the way it was when he left the Army 60 years ago.

"The government sees that treatment now as a obligation, not a favor," he said.

LaCroix, the author of Journey Out of Darkness, is communications director of the CBR Institute for Biomedical Research at Harvard Medical School.

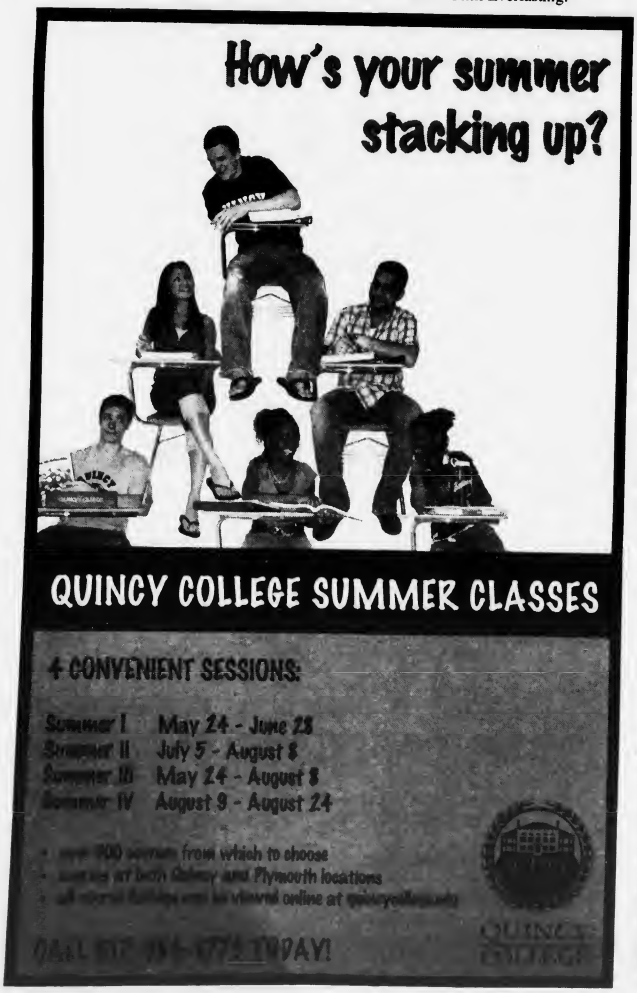


Meyer, the photographer, is a German, who grew up in Bavaria near many former POW camps and U. S. Military bases. He emigrated to the United States in 1995.

THAT'S ME. Ex-POW Robert Noble of Quincy shows his wife, Gloria (right), and daughter, Alicia, his picture on display among the POW memorabilia on display at the National Heritage Museum in Lexington.

RECOLLECTIONS. Robert Noble of Quincy recounts his experiences as a German prisoner of war during World War II at a reception for POWs at the National Heritage Museum in Lexington.

ROBERT NOBLE, shown here with his wife, Gloria, is featured in the new book, Journey Out of Darkness, which tells the stories of 19 former prisoners of war in Germany and Japan.



The Granite City

of the Granite Cutters International Union was located in Quincy for over 80 years.

The demise of the granite industry in Quincy came slowly, and can be attributed to many factors, too many to explain here. But by 1940 there were only 60 granite companies still in business. Then, World War II was a serious blow; granite was not an essential war material and the Quincy shipyard had thousands of steady jobs for anyone who could work. Today only a handful of Quincy companies remain in the granite business and you cannot buy a piece of Quincy granite anywhere for use as a monument. After serving as swimming holes for many years, almost all the old quarry holes were filled, most with the city's refuse, and only a few deserted ones remain.

However, the sturdy Quincy granite structures and beautiful monuments in place around the country serve as testimony to the motto of the Quincy Granite Manufacturers Association: "Quincy Granite, Lasting Until Everlasting."

200 Guests Celebrate With Vin Moscardelli

Central Real Estate Marks 20 Years In Business

Central Real Estate recently celebrated 20 years in business along with 200 guests at the Neighborhood Club.

In 1986, Vin Moscardelli, former principal of Central Junior High School, decided to open the doors of Central Real Estate, proudly named after the school from which he retired.

His first location was at 1058 Hancock St. and he moved to 128 Mayor McGrath Highway in 1992. A second office was opened at 339 Hancock St. in North Quincy in 1999.

VIN MOSCARDELLI and 200 guests recently celebrated the 20th anniversary of Central Real Estate at the Quincy Neighborhood Club. Moscardelli, former principal of Central Junior High School, opened the doors to his new business in 1986. He proudly named it Central Real Estate after the school from which he retired. The photo above is a reminder of what local real estate use to sell for: a two-family home in Wollaston listed for $179,000 in the mid-1980s.

Due to the growth of the company, partners Jian Zhi Tan, John Boey and Patty Sullivan joined Moscardelli.

At the celebration, Jean Sawtelle, communications director, and Susan Marques, program director, both from Plymouth and South Shore Association of Realtors, congratulated and honored Moscardelli and his office as valued members of the association.

Moscardelli was presented with a Certificate of Appreciation for his commitment to the real estate industry and the Realtor Association.

State Sen. Michael Morrissey delivered to Moscardelli an official citation, recognizing Central Real Estate for its outstanding real estate services.

Former Mayor Frank McCauley presented an award recognizing Central Real Estate's credit to the city for having served numerous property buyers and sellers in the community for two decades and for participating in countless charitable events.

Moscardelli continues to support the Quincy athletic department and this year there was a basketball tournament in his name. Central Real Estate has also received in the past years several national awards for its help to raise more than $85,000 for the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Building Tips For Homebuyers

(NAPS) The life-changing event of purchasing a new home can be both exciting and overwhelming. With homebuyer horror stories of houses plagued with mold, leaky roofs or worse, it's no wonder some homebuyers get cold feet. Prospective homebuyers can save themselves from headaches by working with their builder on these useful construction do's and don'ts:

• Help prevent mold before it starts. Ask a builder to use vapor retarders in addition to insulation in the home's walls. Smart vapor retarders like CertainTeed's MemBrain allow wall cavities to "breathe" so excess moisture within the wall can escape. This helps prevent the growth of mold and mildew. Other vapor retarders can trap moisture in walls, creating an environment that supports mold growth.

• Work with the builder to ensure that no mechanical equipment, ductwork or plumbing is built into exterior walls, vented attics or vented crawlspaces.

• Take control of the home's temperature and acoustics by ensuring the contractor insulates with correct R-value for the region. Regional R-values can be found online at www.certainteed.com

• Windows are often the largest single source of heat lose and heat gain in a home. Select vinyl windows with low-E glass and a high-performance glazing system that reduces heat transmission through the glass.

• Know what's under the roof. For instance, waterproofing shingle underlayments go under asphalt roof shingles to further protect the interior from winter leaks caused by ice dams and wind-driven rain.

For more information on materials for proper home building, visit the CertainTeed website at www.certainteed.com or call 800-782-8777.

Lawn Mower Maintenance

(NAPS) Those with lawn mower problems are not alone. More than 63 million lawn mowers are revving up for lawn season, and many will need a little TLC. Experts advise that an hour or two or maintenance a year can make a big difference in how well equipment operates and how long it will ultimately last.

For a trouble-free season of lawn care, here are some tips from the experts at small-engine maker Briggs & Stratton Corporation on how to maintain lawn care equipment so it will start easily and run trouble-free:

• Use a fuel preservative. Gasoline goes stale in about 30 days, making lawn mowers and other outdoor power equipment difficult to start. The FreshStart gas cap is a convenient way to keep fuel fresh for six months. The cap, which replaces the equipment's original gas cap, contains a replaceable cartridge of concentrated fuel preservative that drips into the fuel tank.

• Check and change oil. Check the mower's oil level regularly and change the oil after 25 hours of operation under average mowing conditions. Use a 100 percent synthetic oil, which is made for use in all engines, or use an SAE 30 detergent oil for the mower. Look for the bottle that says "Lawn Mower Oil."

• Add oil to new equipment. When purchasing a new mower or another piece of power equipment, be sure to check the oil before running it for the first time. New equipment is often shipped without oil. Running power equipment without oil will damage the engine.

• Tune up the lawn mower once a year. It takes about 30 minutes, and convenient Tune-Up Kits are available with oil, spark plug(s), filter(s) and fuel preservative.

To learn how to easily tune up a lawn mower, visit www.yardsmarts.com.

Hiring A Reputable Roofing Contractor

(NAPS) Curling or cracking shingles. Leaks in the ceiling. Too many asphalt granules in the gutters. Any one of these telltale signs can mean it's time to replace the roof. So where to start? With a reputable contractor. Schedule time to sit down with three or more recommended roofers and ask the following questions:

• What is the full name and address of the company? This will verify that the company is credible.

• Does the company carry insurance? Contractors should carry both comprehensive liability insurance and worker's compensation to protect the homeowner in the event that an accident occurs.

• Is the company a licensed or credentialed contractor? Although not all states require licensing, it is a good indicator that the contractor is knowledgeable and dedicated.

• How long has the company been in business? The longer the company has been in business, the better; the lifespan for most small businesses is three years.

• Will the company provide referrals or references from previous jobs? Ask for a list of names and phone numbers of previous employers and try to get photos of the roofer's completed work.

• What is the company's workmanship warranty? Warranties that cover the installer's work should typically cover a minimum of a one-year time span.

McNamee Seeks To Halt Pre-Release Center On Long Island

Long Island, which is accessible by land only through Squantum, has become a dumping ground for Boston's ills and Ward 6 City Councillor Brian McNamee wants it stopped.

McNamee says he has heard that discussions are underway to locate a pre-release center on the island alongside the homeless shelter, the firing range and the bomb disposal facility.

"I want to nip this in the bud before they even think about it," he said.

That's why McNamee has fired off a letter to Boston Mayor Thomas Menino asking him to "either confirm or deny the contemplated use of a Pre-Release Facility on Long Island.

"If there are to be any further institutional uses of Long Island the city of Quincy and its citizens should be notified and be given an opportunity to comment on the proposed use."

McNamee said the Boston mayor desires a pre-release center so that some prisoners can be let out of jail before their time to make room for more hardened criminals.

"Boston is trying to warehouse its more troublesome elements on Long Island and it's unfair," he told The Quincy Sun. "It's not only Squantum. They use our transportation corridors through North Quincy to get there"

Long Island is part of Boston but connected to the Squantum section of Quincy and the mainland by a causeway to Moon Island and thence to Long Island by bridge.

McNamee said he heard of the plan to site a pre-release center on Long Island through an anonymous city of Boston employee who has access to such information.

BRIAN McNAMEE

"North Quincy, Marina Bay and Squantum in particular have long endured the Boston programs located on Long Island," he said in his letter to Menino.

"While you sweep the troubles of Boston under a nearby rug called Long Island, you adversely affect the residential quality of Ward 6. This is not only unfair, it is unconscionable.

"Why is it OK to make Boston nice for the tourists by exporting your problems to Long Island at the expense of our public safety?

"Our city's main thoroughfares, public transportation hubs and businesses play host daily to the elements you want to keep out of sight in Boston.

"In addition to the human service programs on Long Island we endure the noise and traffic associated with Long Island's shooting range, fire academy and utilization by Boston's Bomb Squad.

"It is time someone said 'Stop.'"

Pothole Repair Schedule

(Cont'd From Page 1)

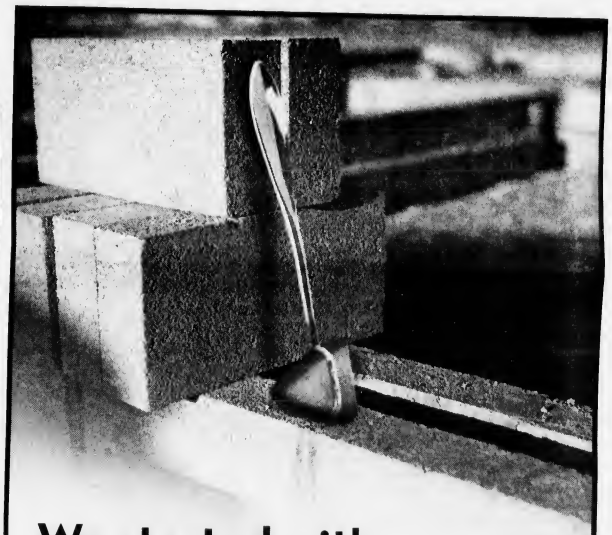
July 24-26, Squantum
July 27-28, North Quincy

City personnel has been regularly addressing potholes since the spring began. The new scheduled approach will provide crews with a more efficient use of time. They will spend a smaller percentage of time traveling to calls and more time on the street addressing problems. The goals is to upgrade the overall condition of roadways as much as possible.

A relatively mild winter and the city's paving efforts had generally reduced the overall number of potholes, Phelan said. However, the wet spring weather has caused a large number of potholes to appear later in the year than usual.

DPW Commissioner Steve O'Donnell noted: "By this time most years, the pothole problem has largely been addressed. This spring weather has caused a large number of new problems and the mayor has instructed us to get the job done."

A citywide survey called by Phelan showed the general condition of streets and roadways was the main concern of city residents. In addition to the added effort to fix potholes, Phelan included $1 million in the municipal budget to continue the city's Pavement Management Plan.



"The people have spoken through the survey and the 16 neighborhood meetings and we are following their lead," Phelan said. "Our residents will play a large role in determining how our resources are utilized in the upcoming year."

Adams Memorial Dinner Fundraiser Friday Night

actual construction itself has to be paid for with private funds raised by the Foundation.

Other speakers on the program at Friday's dinner include State Treasurer Tim Cahill, and two John Adams descendants, Ben Adams, president of the Foundation, and Peter Boylston Adams, the treasurer.

We started with a strong foundation of health care.

Now we're building on it.

Things look a bit different at Milton Hospital these days. Yet even with all the progress, our tradition of putting people first means it's business as usual. From the main entrance to the OR, the parking lot to the ED, easy access is assured for all patients and visitors.

So what is changing? We're creating a medical center infused with the latest in technology and more people-friendly features than ever before. The size of the Emergency Department is doubling and we're renovating our Surgical and Endoscopy Departments. We're also making it easier for outpatients, adding parking and much more.

Through all phases of construction, the impact on our patients will be minimal. Once the project is completed however, the impact will be immeasurable.

Morrisette Impressive In Opener, Wins 8-2

LEGION BASEBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

The Morrisette American Legion baseball team opened the season Monday night with an impressive 8-2 victory over Stoughton at Adams Field.

Morrisette rode the arm of pitcher Steve Sullivan, who turned in an overpowering outing. The right-hander struck out 15, walked just one and allowed the two runs on four hits in a complete-game effort.

"If we get more pitching performances like that, we'll win some games this year," said manager Ray Cattaneo. "I was very pleased with the way we played in our opening game. I was pleased with the way they handled themselves. A lot of them have never played Legion ball."

Morrisette, which just missed the playoffs last season with a 10-9-1 record, will take on Cohasset today (Thursday) and Holbrook Friday, both games starting at 8 p.m. at Adams Field, and it will clash with city rival Quincy Sunday night at 8.

Offensively, Morrisette capitalized on Stoughton's three errors and nine walks by smacking nine hits.

After Stoughton took a 1-0 lead in the first inning, Morrisette responded with a handful of runs in the bottom half.

First-year center fielder Joe Vialpando of B.C. High led off with a walk, stole second base and scored on Ray Marchand's single. Newcomer Joe Garland of B.C. High and Brian Sullivan each walked to load the bases.

With two outs, Steve Connolly of Quincy High School reached on an infield error allowing Marchand and Garland to cross home plate. Matt Haskins followed with a two-run single.

Stoughton scored a run in the second to make it 5-2 before Sullivan found his groove and silenced them the rest of the way.

"Steve Sullivan pitched a great game, the best game I've seen him pitch," Cattaneo said. "He gave up runs in the first two innings and then he settled down and they did nothing against him the rest of the game. He wasn't wild at all. He just threw and threw hard for seven innings. He mixed it up with a change-up and curveball."

Morrisette got the run right back in the second inning when Garland plated Vialpando with a two-out single. Joe Lousararian of North Quincy High School singled home Connolly in the fifth and Morrisette closed out the scoring in the sixth when Brian Sullivan walked and rounded the bases on consecutive infield errors.

"The young kids looked good and the old-timers looked good," Cattaneo said. "Everyone did their job. It was nice to watch on opening day. We had some fun. We only made one error. I'll take that. When you make three or four, a lot of things can happen."

Rounding out the roster are returnees Mike Burke of Milton and Brandon Ranalli of B.C. High.

Newcomers are North Quincy's Joe Ferris, the backup catcher, and Patrick Totten, and Quincy's Jonathan Pelletier, the backup first baseman who will also pitch, and Rick Salvucci, who will play third base, outfield and pitch.

North Quincy's Chris Boyd and Alex Tragellis will be splitting time between Morrisette and Senior Babe Ruth.

Jim Connor New Coach Of Red Raiders

New Era For North Football

Jim Connor has been named the new head coach of the North Quincy High School football team.

"It feels great. I'm definitely honored," said Connor, who served as an assistant coach the past two seasons.

Connor, 25, replaces Bill Shaughnessy, who stepped down this offseason after two years at the helm.

Connor, who teaches history at North Quincy, will have his work cut out for him as he tries to rebuild the program.

"Obviously, the goal is to turn the program around," Connor said. "I'm just going to do what I feel is necessary. We have a lot great players. They have the talent and work ethic and they just need to put it all together. I know they have it in them."

His staff will include long-time assistants Peter Chrisom and Tom Carter along with Mike Connor (no relation). He is still looking to fill two positions: junior varsity defensive coordinator and a varsity coordinator.

Connor graduated in 1999 from Strathaven High School, just outside Philadelphia, Pa., where he played football, basketball and baseball. He earned a full football scholarship to Boston College as an offensive lineman.

After graduating from BC in 2003, he got the teaching job at North Quincy and coached the freshman boys basketball team.

He joined Shaughnessy's staff as the defensive coordinator in 2004 and switched to offensive coordinator last season. He also coached the JV softball team this past season.

Quincy Bows In Opener, Plays Morrisette Sunday

After what felt like 40 days and nights of rain, numerous canceled games and practices, the American Legion baseball season finally got underway Sunday night at Adams Field.

Unfortunately for Quincy Post 95, it came out on the short end of a 5-3 loss to West Roxbury.

Quincy, which hosted Stoughton Wednesday (8 p.m.), will head to Milton Friday at 5:45 p.m. before battling cross-town rival Morrisette Sunday night at 8 at Adams Field.

Quincy is looking to follow up last year's very successful 11-9 record when it qualified for the playoffs in what was one of its most successful seasons in recent memory.

Quincy got off to a good start as it jumped out to an early lead in the first inning. With one out, center fielder Tom Power, a league all-star from North Quincy High School, singled, stole second and scored on a clutch, two-out single by Kevin Bossart, who ripped a shot just fair down the left field line.

Bossart, who is coming off an excellent year at Archbishop Williams in which he was one of the leading hitters in the Catholic Central League, finished the game 3-for-3.

The lead was short-lived as West Roxbury scored four times in the second. A lead-off walk started the rally and three straight singles followed to tie the game. A routine double play ball was bobbled to extend the inning and West Roxbury added another run on a walk and groundout.

West Roxbury took a 5-1 lead in the third on a single, an error, another walk and a single. Right fielder Dave Guerriero of North Quincy made a great throw to the plate and with a fine block of home by Bossart cut down another player to keep the game close.

Sparked by the great defensive play, Quincy rallied in the third inning. Co-captain John Fitzgerald singled and stole second with two outs. Tom Conley, the starting catcher as a sophomore for top-ranked B.C. High, drew a walk and once again Bossart delivered with an RBI double to left-center. Conley was thrown out at the plate on a very close play as West Roxbury executed a perfect relay.

From that point on, ace pitcher Dean Sandonato (4-1 record last year) settled down. Shaking off the rust from a year of inactivity, Sandonato allowed only one bloop single over the final three innings. He ended up allowing two earned runs on six hits and three walks with two strikeouts. He also started a nifty 1-6-3 double play to end the fourth inning.

In the fifth, Quincy cut it to 5-3. Guerriero walked, advanced to second on an infield out and scored on co-

BOWING TO PRESSURE

Tires usually lose about one pound of pressure per square inch (psi) per month. So, give your tires a quick visual inspection at every fill-up, and try to use a digital tire pressure gauge as often as possible. Properly inflated tires are safer, improve gas mileage, and extend the life of tires. On the other hand, neglected, under-inflated tires can get dangerously low, build up heat, wear unevenly, and wear out prematurely. All of these undesirable factors will likely lead to poor handling and reduced mileage. To get an accurate pressure reading, check the tire pressure when the tires are cold. Look at the owner's manual or the label on the driver's side post for proper inflation pressure.

If you have any questions regarding the integrity of your tires, consult the tire experts at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Your safety is our number one concern. Every action we take with you and your automobile has your safety in mind. If you ever have questions, or concerns with your automobile, please contact us. You can call us at 781-843-1550, or come see us at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree. We are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles.

HINT: To see if your tires need to be replaced, take a penny and stick it head-down in the middle of the tire tread. If you can see the top of Lincoln's hair, your tires should be replaced.

captain Drew Loud's single. Loud stole second, moved to third on a groundout and caught some tough luck when he was tagged out trying to score on a wild pitch.

Undaunted, Quincy had a great chance to tie or take the lead in the sixth. Bossart blasted a deep shot to right-center for another double and went to third base on a fielder's choice.

With no outs and runners on the corners, the West Roxbury pitcher got tough as he struck out two straight hitters and got the third to ground out to second base.

In the top of the seventh, Guerriero made a spectacular, fully extended diving catch to take away extra bases. Quincy went down in order in the last inning to end the game.

First baseman Steve Matos of North Quincy, making the transition from catcher, made two nice scoops. Third baseman Matthew Jaehnig of B.C. High played well defensively, cutting down a run at the plate with a backhanded stop and strong throw to home.

Rounding out the roster are pitchers John Allen, Jared Kenney, Matthew Tobin and Glen Misho. Allen, the ace at North Quincy, will step in as the second or third starter and Kenney, a transfer from Weymouth, is a powerful hitter and figures to serve as the closer. Tobin has returned to the team after a year sabbatical and Misho of Catholic Memorial was one of the top pitchers on last year's 15-year-old Quincy Babe Ruth All-Star team.

Michael Jay is another member of last year's 15-year-old Quincy Babe Ruth All-Star team who will provide some depth in the outfield. Jay Lewis will see time in left field, third base or DH.

Steve Kussman of Quincy High School is a powerful hitter who will see time at DH and provide a left-handed pinch-hitter off the bench. Mike Lebel also of Quincy can play any position on the field.

Doug Melanson, a 19-year-old transfer from Weymouth, provides a powerful right-handed bat off the bench and defensive help at first base.

Mark Jaehnig returns for his fifth season as manager of Quincy Post 95. Assistant coaches are Lenny Seitz, Dave Power and scorekeeper Charlie Jaehnig.

Diana DeForge, Kara Lantier Participating In Breast Cancer Walk

Quincy residents Diana DeForge and Kara Lantier will take part in the Boston Breast Cancer 3-Day Aug. 4-6 to benefit the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation and the National Philanthropic Trust.

The participants will walk 60 miles during the three days to raise breast cancer awareness and to raise money for critical research and community outreach programs.

"I am walking for my third year and I walk because I do believe we can find a cure; it just takes research and that takes money," DeForge said. "In the past few years I have seen so much strength and determination in the eyes of a few women faced with this battle. They are survivors and they are my inspiration."

More than 200,000 new cases will be diagnosed in the United States this year and more than 40,000 men and women will lose their life to the disease. One woman is diagnosed with breast cancer every three minutes.

"With sobering statistics like that I feel the least I can do is walk 60 miles if that will help find a cure," Lantier said. "Knowing that the Komen Foundation and the National Philanthropic Trust are involved in Breast Cancer 3-Day assures me that the events will be well managed and that the millions of dollars we raise will support the fight against breast cancer."

Sean Hannon of Outback Steakhouse will host a fund-raising luncheon for DeForge and Lantier Saturday from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Only 50 tickets are available for $20 apiece.

Call DeForge at 781-267-5656 for ticket information.

Spotlight On Health & Fitness

FROM START TO FITNESS

A Fish Out of Water

Q: I really enjoy exercising in the pool, but I'm not sure of the benefits compared to regular exercise on land. I don't have much experience with land exercises and wouldn't know where to begin. Is it enough just to work out in the water three days a week?

A. Aquatic exercise is an excellent way to work out and has terrific health benefits. Whether it is walking, deep-water exercise, toning, water aerobics, resistance training or just plain swimming, the water has much to offer both swimmers and non-swimmers.

Water cancels approximately 90 percent of a person's body weight when submerged up to the neck. This buoyancy can allow low- and no-impact exercise without the stress on the skeletal system and connective tissue. Aquatic exercise is a great workout for people who need to reduce stress on the joints of the hips, knees and ankles. Through water exercise you are able to improve strength, flexibility and cardiovascular endurance.

Designing a comprehensive exercise routine that contains all of the elements you need for a well-rounded workout can be complicated. To decide which type of exercise will help you the most, look at your fitness goals.

Aquatic workouts can help improve strength, flexibility and cardiovascular endurance. So if progress in these areas is your goal, then you know aquatics is for you. However, if you also want to jog, improve your upper-body strength and become more agile to run after your children, you may need to add land-based exercises to your routine to help reach those goals.

Although you can improve those skills while in the water, you would also have to work on them on land — which is where you spend the most of your day. This would not require you to give up aquatic exercise, but to simply find a balance between the two.

The level of experience with certain forms of exercise often determines what exercises a person completes. A new workout or activity that seems difficult, confusing and intimidating can hold a person hostage to one form of exercise. If you enjoy aquatic exercise and feel comfortable and confident while completing your workout, then continue to work hard, but stay open to the idea of trying new forms of exercise. This can not only give your body an added challenge, but can also help you reach your fitness goals.

Consulting a fitness professional is an excellent way to become familiar with land-based exercise in a safe environment. A certified trainer can help you find the type of exercises that will lead you toward your goals, and develop a workout program that includes the water exercise you enjoy along with new land-based exercise, which you also could grow to like.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program.

Easy Ways To Understand Nutrition Information

(NAPS) Low fat, trans fat, no fat; the health benefits (or not) of chocolate, milk, nuts, coffee, etc., all of this conflicting information is leaving Americans confused and mystified about how to take care of themselves. With the abundance of health and nutrition information in the news every day, it is no wonder that Americans are suffering from health information overload.

In fact, according to The Healthy Boomer Survey of 1,086 baby boomers conducted on behalf of www.eatbetteramerica.com, more than one half are frustrated and confused by conflicting health and nutritional information available today.

Although boomers are actively searching for simple ways to stay healthy, half of all boomers surveyed find it difficult to stay current on all the new health and nutritional information. Additionally, more than four out of 10 boomers are overwhelmed by all of the inconsistent health reports and they feel that they hear too much data about health and nutrition that is not relevant to them.

Americans look for simple, easy ways to answer their questions. Currently, three fourths of boomers receive most of their trusted health and nutritional information from doctors and nutritionists. Following closely as a trusted source are health-related websites; however, boomers revealed that they actually utilize these sites only about a quarter of the time when searching for information. The reason may be that most of the information on current sites is boring, confusing and just plain difficult to follow.

A new, innovative website called eatbetteramerica.com was created specifically with baby boomers in mind. The site acts as a trusted resource center to provide useful, educational and engaging food and nutrition information to lead a healthy life. The site allows users to set up personal goals and provides recipes and suggestions to help maintain and follow a successful path. The site also provides a community of support and offers simple changes to improve health and lets people users know that they are not in this alone.

Amy Fahy Runs Marathon To Benefit Stroke Association

Amy Fahy of Quincy recently ran the 2006 San Diego Marathon to raise money for the American Stroke Association's Train to End Stroke program (TTES).

As a past participant, her goal was to raise $3,900.

Train to End Stroke was created to raise vital funds for stroke research and educational initiatives. Each participant runs or walks a full marathon (26.2 miles) or half marathon (13.1 miles) in honor of a "Stroke Hero."

Stroke is the third leading cause of death in the United States, and the leading cause of severe, long-term disability. About 700,000 Americans suffer a new or recurrent stroke every year, and nearly 160,000 of them will die. More than 60 percent of stroke victims are women.

The goal of the American Stroke Association, a division of the American Heart Association, is to reduce disability and death from stroke through research, education and advocacy. In its 2004-2005 fiscal year, the association spent more than $151 million on stroke.

DENTISTRY for the 21st century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

EASY DOES IT!

If the thought of an injection of Novocaine makes you uncomfortable, you should know that dentists have perfected ways of giving painless injections. First, the dentist uses a topical anesthetic to numb the surface of the gums. Then, once the injection site is numb, the dentist slowly inserts the needle, pausing frequently. This provides time for the tissue to become numb, just ahead of the path of the advancing needle. The slow injection also allows the Novocaine to enter the gum tissue slowly, without any potentially uncomfortable pressure. In addition, dentists know how to apply pressure to the gums and/or jiggle the cheeks in an effort to reduce pressure and distract the patient's attention.

Millions of people avoid dental care due to fear. As a consequence, many people suffer from dental maladies that could easily be avoided. We would like to stress the importance of regular dental checkups. We believe it is our responsibility to share our acquired knowledge and understanding of oral health with each and every patient, one on one. All of our patients are individuals, and as such will achieve our goal in different ways and at different paces. No two patients are alike, so no two treatment programs will be the same. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule your next dental checkup. Let us help you keep that winning smile. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. In some cases, dentists utilize computerized syringes that are programmed to inject at the optimal pace without causing the patient pain.

A Job Well Done

Many of the articles I have written involve arrests; however, the majority of the calls in Quincy are service related. Here's one case:

LT. DAN MINTON

On Tuesday, May 30, at approximately 8:50 a.m., Officers Lauren Lambert and Paul Matthews were dispatched to the low numbers of Quarry Street on a report of "A found child."

Upon arrival, Officer Lambert spoke with witness Jason Morris of Quincy (with permission), who stated he was driving on Quarry Street when he observed a child, believed to be 2 years old, walking along Quarry Street near Kidder Street.

Concerned for the child's safety, he backed up and removed the child from the street. A second witness, who was walking on Quarry Street, stopped and together they looked around for a parent for a few minutes before calling the police.

Officer Lambert examined the boy and noted he had a soiled diaper and food all around his face. Officer Matthews started going door to door looking for a parent or someone who might recognize the child.

Fifteen minutes after the initial call, a female walked out the door she left open. The officers told her that her child was safe and as they started to ask questions, the mother said she had to go back home because her 1-year-old daughter was home alone in her cradle.

Officer Lambert advised her they would accompany her back to her home to check on the well being of the daughter, as well as the living conditions in the home. As they walked up the steps to the second-floor apartment, Officer Lambert detected "a very foul odor."

She observed cereal all over the floor in the hallway and piles of food and trash all over the kitchen floor. The mother stated her 2-year-old made the mess. Officer Lambert retorted there was no way possible a 2-year-old could have strewn raw meat, three boxes of cereal, melted ice cream, cherry pie, jugs of curdled milk, etc. all over the floor.

The mother admitted she and her husband had a fight last night and he had thrown the trash about. A further scan of the apartment showed the entertainment center with television had been turned over.

Officer Lambert walked into the first bedroom and found the 1-year-old daughter sitting on a plastic-covered mattress with no bedding, covered with ketchup, broken cigarettes and dirty clothing. The daughter was eating a cigarette, holding a lighter and a set of keys. She was covered in ketchup and had tobacco stuck to her face, attempting to drink from a bottle containing curdled milk.

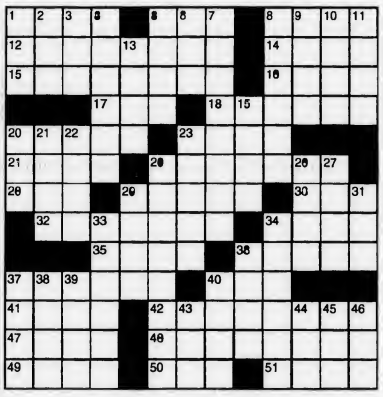
Sergeant Sean Duggan arrived on scene with a camera to photograph the apartment. The mother continued to change her story and said her husband was not home, but refused to say where he was or how he could be reached.

Sifting through the rubbish, Officer Lambert was able to find a receipt from a local video store and called there to get his cell phone number. She spoke with him and advised him to come to the scene.

The Department of Social Services (DSS) were notified and responded to the home. During the short wait, the mother attempted to clean up the house, failing to change the soiled diapers of both children.

Sergeant Duggan returned to the apartment with milk for the children and unbelievably watched and intercepted the mother as she poured the milk into the two bottles that were contaminated with the curdled milk.

Based on the thoroughness of the interview by the officers and observations of the deplorable living conditions, the DSS worker removed the children from the home. The children were transported by Fallon Ambulance to Quincy Medical Center for multiple reasons: they needed medical examinations, they needed to be checked for ingestion of raw meat from the floor and they needed their diapers changed, since there were none in the apartment.



Officer Lambert advised the mother of the protections afforded to her under the domestic violence laws, but she refused any assistance, stating the incident was verbal only. Copies of the files were turned over to DSS, a domestic violence report was filed and the Special Investigations Unit will follow up on the case. Nice work!

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Many prominent men through the years have been chosen as "Father of the Year."

Our selection this year, and every year, is and has been plural. These fathers are seen everywhere. . . are known everywhere in every community. These fathers are making their presence known from diaper time to diploma time. . . In their circle of family and friends these typical fathers deserve the distinction of being father of the year just as much as the nationally publicized men. These fathers have devoted a lifetime to the needs of their families. They are loyal employees. They are considerate and thoughtful employers. They have shown, by example, how to face realities; how to be loving and tender; how to have humbled trust in God.

To all Fathers of the Year . . . everywhere . . . we hope it is a day of love and understanding. We salute every one of you. . .

HAPPY FATHER'S DAY . . .

SOME OF THE 27 English Language Learners at Quincy High School who recently participated in a Stock Market Investment competition. The students, whose first languages include Mandarin, Cantonese, Vietnamese, Spanish, Portuguese, and Thai, explored complex concepts like stocks, bonds and mutual funds; while they invested a $100,000 in a simulated stock portfolio. The QHS students competed with other high school students in Massachusetts and one Quincy High School team placed second in the division for the state. The winning team of seven students were recently recognized at a special luncheon sponsored by the Boston Globe and Morgan Stanley.

Code Enforcement Officer Approved By Council Committee

city. But in my opinion, it's not getting done," said Councillor John Keenan, who made the motion to pass the resolution.

"They just aren't getting addressed. A code enforcement officer can take care of those things on a regular basis. I think it's long overdue, and I think we're losing the battle under current conditions.

"It's going to affect our neighborhoods. It's not going to be perfect, but it will be an improvement," said Keenan.

"I believe it's proactive. I think it's money well spent."

"Residents really are policing their own neighborhoods, and that's causing issues between neighbors," said Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin.

"We have serious enforcement issues," said Finn, "but one thing I've learned over the years is nothing's ever fixed by throwing money at it. I just don't see this fixing that particular problem."

"I see the importance of a code enforcement officer," Gutro said. "But I think it could be done with a little bit of leadership. I haven't been convinced it can't be done... I know it hasn't been done."

"I could write 700 tickets," said Duca, "but the key is to have someone enforcing them. It's not just writing tickets. It really takes a lot of follow up."

"I understand the frustration," said Raymondi, "but I don't think this is the solution. I'm convinced that there's a problem... I don't think throwing another position at it is going to work. A code enforcement officer can not write tickets, only a police officer can."

Raymondi estimated that the position would cost the city around $45,000 annually.

Reward Is Offered For Hit-Run Driver

The Bridges brothers are offering a $5,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the hit-and-run driver who struck and killed their brother, Donald, 53, in Quincy Center June 2.

Donald Bridges died in Boston Medical Center June 6 four days after he was hit by a vehicle described as a dark-colored SUV or a pickup truck behind the Blockbuster store.

The reward was posted by his brothers, Tom and Paul Bridges, in hopes it would jog the memory of someone who saw the accident or witnessed the vehicle drive away.

Police are viewing surveillance tapes from nearby stores in case the incident happened to have been caught on the cameras.

Anyone with information on the accident should call the Quincy police traffic division at 617-745-5811.

Middle Schools Release Day Moved To June 19

Release day at Quincy middle schools, originally scheduled for Tuesday, June 13, has been moved to Monday, June 19.

This will make June 13 a full day for all middle school students while making June 19 an early release say for all students through Grade 8.

Elementary schools remained open Tuesday, March 28, to allow fourth grade students time to complete the long composition section of the MCAS.

That day should have been an early release day. In order to replace it, June 19 will be a release day for all elementary schools.

No change will be made in high school schedules since they will be administering final exams on June 19.

Council Approves $237.5M Budget

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Mayor William Phelan's proposed budget of $237,502,017 for FY07, an increase of $10,719,712 from FY06, was approved by a 7 to 2 vote at Monday night's City Council meeting, with Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, and Councillor Joseph Finn in opposition.

Projected revenues for FY07 are estimated at $238,860,942.

Raymondi made a motion to cut $221,000 from the budget, but the motion was shut down when only he and Finn voted favorably for it.

"I'm not going to vote for the budget," said Raymondi. "I know it is symbolic. I think we could have done a better job."

"The truth is, when we come down to it, I think the mayor did his job," said Finn. He has presented a budget. It's our job to scrutinize that budget. It's incumbent on us to make those cuts. There are people out there who barely make ends meet."

When the budget doesn't reflect what is being spent, "why have a budget at all?" said Finn. "I will be voting no on the budget."

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said that although he would vote favorably for the budget, next year he will "turn (his) nose up at these one percent cuts."

"All we can do is nibble around the edges," said Councillor John Keenan, who made the motion to approve the budget. "It's my hope that next year this budget development will be improved."

Phelan's FY07 budget proposal includes:

- An increase of five percent in the Education budget for Public Schools.
- A decrease of 100 in the number of city employees.
- $1 million appropriation to continue the efforts of the Pavement Management Plan.
- $200,000 for neighborhood tree-planting; the first budget appropriation of it's kind.
- $50,000 to study safety improvements along Sea Street, the first step in a major effort to redesign this important yet dangerous

Meteorologist Sees Above Normal Hurricane Season

Glenn Field, a warning coordinating meteorologist for the National Weather Bureau, warned Quincy officials Tuesday that early signs point to another above normal hurricane season.

And one of the major storms might make it to New England after nearly a half century.

The indicators include warm Atlantic Ocean waters and the lack of an El Nino, the Pacific Ocean current that controls so much of the world's weather.

He stressed the importance of being proactive rather than reactive in preparing for and responding to weather events to an audience that included most of Quincy's emergency responders.

In the years 1938 to 1954, he said, there were four major Category 3 hurricanes that struck New England.

It has been 52 years since the last Category 3 passed through the area.

And if you want Field's pick for the biggest storm of the year, it's the ninth storm, Isaac.

"It's the only name on this year's list with Biblical proportions.," he said.

Long Wait Ends For Return Of Granite Ball

By TOM HENSHAW
and MIKAELA SLANEY

It was a moment that Elmer "Mike" Fagerlund had waited for for 50 years.

The veil was removed and a rededicated 9 1/2-ton granite ball, agleam in the June sun, was once again the centerpiece of Constitution Common just outside City Hall.

The ball, a gift of the Quincy Granite Manufacturers Association, was placed there originally in 1925 but moved to the Fore River Rotary in 1937 and now it was back home.

"My wish for the past 50 years has been the return of the granite ball to its rightful spot," said Fagerlund, a past president of the Granite Manufacturers Association.

"This ball of shining Quincy granite reflects the image of all who look upon it; it reflects the great history of Quincy and its historical contribution to the fortune of our great country.

"I don't look at this ball as a monument. It's a great symbol of the city's great past, its present and future and the love for freedom and liberty we all cherish.

"In keeping with the slogan of the Granite Manufacturers Association of Quincy, 'lasting and everlasting,' may this symbol we dedicate tonight be everlasting."

The stone for the granite ball came from Swingle's Quarry, the last active quarry in Quincy when it gave out in 1963, so it was fitting that Jonathan Swingle's granddaughter, Joanne Swingle Hennigan, should unveil the ball.

John Ricciuti, another past president of the Granite Manufacturers Association, paid tribute to the unidentified but skilled workers who polished the ball to such a lustrous finish that it became known as "the Gazing Ball."

"In those days," he said, "our industry did not have exotic machinery. We didn't have lathes. But I would say to you today that if we were to build this we would be challenged to do it as well.

"The granite men in those days built wonderful buildings. They did great work in monuments. But they wanted to showcase their work. So they built this, this technically almost impossible thing to do. And they did it.

"You've done a wonderful thing here. You who are the proponents of putting this back. I know that there was opposition to it, but I hope that after you see this location, the opposition will say this is a fitting place."

Mayor William Phelan called the ball "this immodest granite sphere (that) embodies the strength and scope of Quincy's granite industry" which did so much to build the city's neighborhoods.

""People came from throughout Europe not just to find work in our quarries but to find hope and opportunity in the new world. Granite workers and their families established the neighborhoods that we live in today," he said.

"They built the character of our neighborhoods. So may this beautiful monument capture the memory of the people who built this city that emulates the strength and beauty of this granite masterpiece."

City Council President Doug Gutro said he recently took a guided tour of Mount Wollaston Cemetery with historian Tom Galvin on its 150th anniversary, noting particularly the graves of the leaders of the granite industry.

"Behind the walls along Southern Artery and Sea Street not only will you see magnificent granite that really speaks to an era gone by, but the true story is the people who are buried there," he said.

"The leaders in the granite industry that made our city what it was earlier in the 1900s and prior to that. These were impressive people who define the character of our city."

THE GRANITE BALL gets an affectionate touch from Joanne Swingle Hennigan after she unveiled it on Constitution Common at City Hall where it was returned there after a 69-year absence. She is the granddaughter of quarry owner Jonathan Swingle, who donated a 25-ton block of granite from which the 9 1/2-ton ball was carved and gifted to the city by the Granite Manufacturers Association June 12, 1925.

A LARGE CROWD was on hand to see the unveiling of the "Gazing Ball" so called because of its mirror-like reflections in its polished granite. Many of those attending the rededication ceremony couldn't resist stepping up to touch the ball and see their reflection.

Archdiocese Disagrees

Star Of The Sea Sees Another Victory

By TOM HENSHAW

Friends of the Star of the Sea Church in Squantum, still fighting suppression by the Archdiocese of Boston, believe they may have scored a major victory in their nearly two-year effort to keep the church open.

Friends Co-Chairs Maureen Mazrimas and Sean Glennon announced Tuesday that Sean Cardinal O'Malley's decree suppressing the church had been suspended indefinitely pending the results of their appeal.

The decision by the Vatican's Supreme Tribunal of the Apostolic Signatura to suspend the suppression, said Glennon, "is perhaps the most significant development to occur since the original decree was issued."

Not so, said Kevin Shea, spokesman for the Archdiocese. "Nothing has changed. The letter from the Vatican merely confirms what the Cardinal did when he said he would preserve the assets of the church until the appeal is finished."

The reaction of the Archdiocese left Glennon confused.

"It doesn't make sense," he said. "The Tribunal, like the Supreme Court, has the authority to decide what to hear. They have decided to accept our case. If they are only confirming what the Cardinal did, then there is no reason to take the next step."

The last Sunday mass at Star of the Sea as a parish was celebrated Oct. 24, 2004. It was allowed to reopen last year as a chapel under Sacred Heart Parish of North Quincy with one Sunday mass per week and no baptisms, weddings or funerals.

The Friends' first appeal to the Vatican was turned down but they managed to raise $6,000 to hire a Canonical advocate in Rome to continue the fight before the Apostolic Signatura, a process that could take several years.

One section of the Vatican decree that both the Friends and the Archdiocese can agree upon is that which keeps the case alive before the Apostolic Signatura.

"Through their decision," said Glennon, "the Tribunal admits that our case has merit and requires further review."

Mazrimas indicated that a good deal of the Friends' appeal is based on the need for the religious education for 143 young people who were in the program when suppression disrupted their participation.

"The children are the hope for the future of the church," she said.

"The sooner they become involved, the more likely they are to remain active participants as adolescents and adults. A great many parishioners have mentioned how much they miss not having the children participate as altar servers or in the children's choir."

Even the Friends' advocate in Rome is basing his plea partly on the need for youth in the church, citing the work of Glennon himself, who turns 27 today (Thursday).

"Mr. Glennon is young and he cannot be accused of senility, nor being attached to memories, which, by the way, is not without merit or consideration," said the advocate's brief to the Tribunal.

"The effort to maintain the life of the parish is the best warranty for the future of Mary, Star of the Sea.

"Of people like him, the church of Boston (and the Universal Church) is in need to get over the difficulties of these times and to foster the virtues of hope."

THE TRAVELING VIETNAM Veterans Memorial, "The Wall That Heals," was escorted into Quincy Tuesday by Quincy and State Police. It will be on display beginning today (Thursday) through Sunday at the Richard J. Koch Complex, One Merrymount Parkway, Quincy.

Protecting Old Glory

There was a time when Americans wouldn't let their flag touch the ground out of respect.

Even in battle.

But for 17 years now, protesters have been able to burn Old Glory as a so-called expression of freedom of speech.

They were given that right in 1989 by the U.S. Supreme Court on a whisker 5-to-4 vote that a Texas law against flag burning violated the First Amendment's guarantee of freedom of speech and expression.

The case involved a protester who tore an American flag down from a building and burned it in the street.

By a scant single vote margin, abusers actually got more than just the green light to burn the flag. They can now do just about anything they want to do with it.

They can spat on it, stomp on it, rip it to shreds, wrap garbage in it or wear a version of it on the seat of their pants. And, whatever else they can think to do with it.

The 147 organization Citizens Flag Alliance since 1989 has been trying to undo that Supreme Court ruling through a Constitutional amendment to protect the flag from abuse.

Quincy's John "Jake" Comer, past national commander of the American Legion, is a driving force in that goal — a man on a mission.

COMER

The proposed amendment has been passed by the U.S. House of Representatives 10 times. Only to be stonewalled in the Senate.

Comer says this year is the closest the alliance has ever been to winning Senate approval.

"Sixty-seven votes are needed in the Senate," he notes. "And we have 66 votes confirmed. We need just one more."

The amendment simply reads:

"The Congress shall have the power to prohibit the physical desecration of the flag of the United States."

If passed, the amendment still has a way to go to mission accomplished. It would have to be ratified by three-fourths of the states. And then, an actual law protecting the flag from abuse would require a 50 percent vote approval both in the House and Senate.

"This is the democratic way," says Comer. "The people speaking. Not the Supreme Court imposing its will on the people by a single vote.

"The average American is outraged by the Supreme Court ruling and want it changed. National polls consistently reflect that 75 percent of the American people surveyed favor a Constitutional amendment to protect the flag."

He says that percentage holds true in Massachusetts even though Senators Edward Kennedy and John Kerry oppose the amendment on the grounds it restricts freedom of speech and expression.

The American Legion, one of the 147 members of the Flag Alliance, argues that burning the flag is not protected "speech" as defined by the First Amendment.

Says the Legion:

"Our Founding Fathers wisely did not include the term 'expression' in the First Amendment because they had the foresight to realize that hateful physical acts might overshadow thoughtful debate and the discussion of ideas. Speech in the First Amendment meant the spoken word, not expressive conduct. Those who are against the flag amendment often will argue that flag desecration is expressive conduct.

"However, the words 'expression' and "expressive conduct' are not in the Bill of Rights and for a good reason."

Other members of the Flag Alliance include the AMVETS, Congressional Medal of Honor Society, Marine Corps League, Veterans of the Vietnam War, Gold Star Wives and other veterans, fraternal and law enforcement groups.

The Senate is scheduled to vote on the amendment next week. And if that one vote that is needed isn't there, what then?

"We'll go back next year," vows Comer. "And keep going back if we have to. We won't give up."

To which I would like to add a few personal observations.

John Adams, Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin couldn't have had flag burning as a right when here in Quincy they wrote the Massachusetts Constitution which became the model for the U.S. Constitution.

As a longtime newspaperman, I don't want to see censorship or to lose the right to stand up and speak out on issues or the right to criticize elected officials.

But I don't see giving our flag the respect it deserves as a threat to freedom of speech. Do you really think we would perish as a democracy if people no longer had the right (by a single vote) to put a match to Old Glory?

Opponents say not having that right is a threat.

Why do they have to burn the flag if they are trying to make a point? Are they incapable of expressing themselves with words instead? Do they just like the attention? Does it make them feel important? Do they even think of all the men and women who have fought and died for that flag?

And when they can burn or abuse the flag and get away with it, what else will they soon be able to do and get away with it, too.

When they abuse the flag, they are thumbing their nose at our country and chipping away at our democracy.

There has been enough chipping already: prayer in the classrooms, the Pledge of Allegiance, banning God from graduations.

It makes you wonder if we are going to be smothered under more chips in the years to come.

Being allowed to burn or abuse the flag is a chip that shouldn't be.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1906 postcard view of the public landing behind what is now the Houghs Neck Maritime Center at the end of Sea Street. The pier was built in the late nineteenth century. In 1901 a channel was dredged to allow steamboats to come here at low tide as shown here. Steamboat fares were only 25 cents for a two-way trip from Boston. Today the building and other structures shown here are gone and passenger steamboats no longer come to Houghs Neck, but the pier remains as an active public landing. Owned by the city, the pier and its floats are currently being spruced up by a group of Necker volunteers. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

U.S. Flag Traditions And Customs Of Display

Quincy Sun reader Francis J. Derwin, of Quincy, is confused in his understanding of the traditions and customs of display of the United States flag on yacht club grounds according to United States Flag Code.

The yacht club burgee is displayed in a higher position, but not above that of the United States flag. By the Flag Code provisions, this would seem to be an incorrect display. The tradition of the seas, however, is to hold the gaff as the position of honor, thus the intent of this tradition and display is to give proper respect to our United States flag.

The gaff extends to the rear, and a mast on yacht club grounds faces seaward. Therefore, the gaff will (or should) be directed toward the land. The observation point then becomes a point somewhere on the sea side of the mast. This then makes the placement of the United States flag in regard to the foreign ensign conform to Flag Code provisions.

Your reader has a proposal before the Massachusetts Legislature (S520) to outlaw display of the burgee above the United States flag, which is a clear violation of Flag Code etiquette. However, the place to make changes to the code is in the U.S. Congress, not the Massachusetts Legislature.

Backs Neponset River Pathway

The Neponset River Watershed Association should sue the city's Conservation Commission for its shortsightedness in denying a request for modifications along the Neponset River by the bridge.

The environmental group to its credit wants a five-mile path along the riverway stretching from Boston to Quincy and Milton.

The developers of the twin 10-story residential complex at the Neponset bridge had agreed to install a 10-foot wide pathway for bikers and walkers. The developer had agreed to placing benches, lighting, a visitor's kiosk and greenery along the banks of the Neponset.

However, the Conservation Commission nixed almost everything. Said Conservation Chairman Bill Keener, "I put the environmental concerns over recreational." I agree with the watershed group that you protect the river by getting people to it. The city commission even nixed pooper scooper kits.

Keener thinks even lighting disturbs the environment but without lighting you can't have any riverwalk project.

Quincy is going in one direction here and it is against sound environmental practices. We're going against the flow of traffic.

The City of Lowell on the banks of the Merrimac River is trying to make sure the next generation will not be less healthier than this one.

They've opened up the city to the Merrimac. People are walking and in a safe environment.

I'm sure the city's Conservation Commission thinks it is doing the right thing but any objective view of the situation finds the commission's actions objectionable.

Takes Issue On School Budget

Open letter to Mayor Phelan:

Regarding the "record high" school budget, please avoid ramming it through for passage. City officials need to discuss it; Quincy city government has a process that the budget goes through. That's why we have a city council, committees and oversight. And that's why we have "checks and balances" to stop what you're trying to do.

Muriel Goudey Retires As Teacher, Plans School Committee Bid

Week Of June 19
1971
35 Years Ago

By FRANK McCAULEY

Miss Muriel Goudey, head of the Quincy High School English Department for the past 10 years, retires next week after 43 years as a school teacher. The next day she will be taking out nomination papers for the Quincy School Committee.

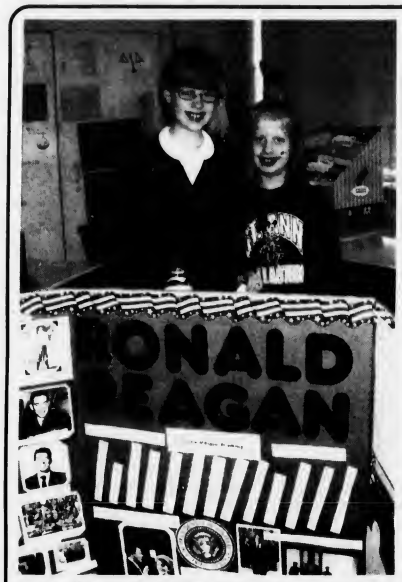
And Miss Goudey, who says "I have never applied for a job in my life," will have to ask a lot of citizens "will you vote for me for School Committee?" Miss Goudey, a Quincy High School graduate, received her bachelor's and master's degrees from Boston University and did practice teaching in Quincy. This qualified her for her first teaching job at Central Junior High at $1,300 per year.

The School Committee election is considered wide open as all three incumbents, whose terms expire this year, are retiring.

$25,975 GRANT FOR HOUGHS NECK OPEN SPACE

A grant of $25,975 to Quincy for an "Open Space Land Program" in Houghs Neck near Rock Island Cove has been awarded by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

It has been proposed that this marshland off Rockland Street be protected as a wild life source for nearby Quincy Bay. Announcement of the grant was made by Congressman James Burke and Sen. Edward Kennedy.



KEEPING UP WITH THE RED SOX

The Red Sox, with a 32-26 record, were in third place in the six-team American League East, five games behind the first-place Baltimore Orioles. Ray Culp with a 7-4 record has become the club's stopper of losing streaks in three of his last four starts. Boston's first pick in the baseball draft was an 18-year-old outfielder from Anderson, Calif., by the name of Jim Rice.

Fifth grade students at St. Ann School in Wollaston may know more about more presidents than anyone else in Quincy.

Starting in September, they began reading and studying information about George Washington, finally finishing up with George W. Bush in May.

The students wrote away to libraries, foundations and Congress for information, researched the Interment for both information and pictures.

Along with the research report, the students worked on a project board, a place where they could be creative with time lines, maps, borders, anything interesting.

"The results were spectacular," said Mrs. Alanna Edstrom, the Social Studies teacher.

Quincy Farmer's Market Opens 25th Season Friday

The Quincy Farmers' Market will open its 25th season tomorrow (Friday) at the Hancock Municipal parking lot across from Quincy District Court.

The market will be open every Friday through October, 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"The Quincy Farmer's Market is not only a great opportunity to promote and support agriculture, it provides a wonderful venture community gathering in Quincy Center," said Dean Rizzo, executive director of Quincy 2000 Collaborative.

"The Quincy Farmer's Market is an important component of vibrant and diverse downtown environment that is beginning to take shape in Quincy Center."

Valerie Burrows, Administrator of Quincy Community Action Programs said:

"Shopping at the Quincy Farmers' Market keeps local agriculture viable. It is also a fun and festive way of shopping outdoors in the sunshine under the farmers' colorful umbrellas and tents, and adds much to the unique character of Quincy Center's shopping district. People are looking forward to this annual summertime festival activity in Quincy Center.

Since Quincy is recognized as South Shore's restaurant city, local chefs are invited to check out the produce farmers have to offer for their direct-from-the-farm seasonal dishes.

Now at the market are lettuce, radishes, strawberries, hot house tomatoes, peas, scallions, herbs, and bedding plants. A full array of produce becomes available as the growing season advances. Special 25th Anniversary Celebration brochures are now being planned for July.

For more information, please contact Anneli Johnson at 617-479-1601 or write to Annelijohnson1@netzero.net.

Same-Sex Marriage Splits Wollaston Church From UCC

The Union Congregational Church of Wollaston has voted to secede from the United Church of Christ, apparently in protest of same-sex marriage.

"Many social and religious concerns led the church to recognize that the denomination no longer reflected the congregation and its views," said the Rev. John Swanson, the minister.

He agreed that same-sex marriage was one of the social concerns that played a big role on the decision.

Swanson was outspokenly critical of United First Parish Church in April when that Unitarian congregation affixed a banner supporting gay marriage across its facade.

He called the banner a "narcissistic" display of an "in your face attitude" and a "travesty" that desecrates the final resting place of John Adams.

JACK SWANSON

One of the assumptions the Founding Fathers made when they wrote the U.S. Constitution, he said in a letter to The Quincy Sun, was that "the family unit of a mother and father would always be intact."

Swanson said the congregation of his church met following worship service Sunday, June 11, and voted unanimously to withdraw from the United Church of Christ.

"Union Church is in the process of affiliating with the Massachusetts Association of Congregational Christian Churches and the National Association of Congregational Christian Churches," he said.

"Union Church was founded in 1895 and became affiliated with the United Church of Christ in 1963. The church enjoyed a happy and productive ministry with and within the UCC for over 40 years and the parting is amicable."

He said the new affiliation with the Congregational Christian Churches should be accomplished by the end of the year.

Herb Chambers Takes Former Morrisette Site

The Saturn Automobile site at the former Cyril P. Morrissette American Legion at 54 Miller St. will now be Herb Chambers of Quincy. The site has been vacant since Saturn left two years ago.

The License Board Tuesday granted a Motor I, Motor II and gas repair license to James Xaros, manager.

Atty. Richard Barry, counsel for Xaros said Chambers will sell new cars as well as used cars.

He said there will display 70 cars at the Miller St. site and 80 cars at a site on Furnace Avenue.

Chairman Joseph Shea said the area on Furnace Avenue is very crowded with one house and one corner and Callahan's Bar on the other. He cautioned that when deliveries are made that they not park around the corner of the avenue.

Barry said there will be no early morning deliveries and instead be only done during business hours.

Salary Increases For 48 Move Ahead

By MIKAELA SLANEY

An ordinance that upgrades the salaries of the mayor and 47 city employees, most of them high ranking, was referred to the Ordinance Committee for required advertising in a 7 to 2 vote.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi and Councillor Joseph Finn voted in opposition.

The upgrading, proposed by a Salary Review Committee, was sent to the City Council by the mayor's office, where the matter was tabled by Finn, automatically halting any action.

"I objected at that time without giving my reason," said Finn. The City Council did not have enough information before hand, and although the concept of having a study is a positive thing, the City Council needed prior knowledge of how the steps work, he said.

"We did the best we could," said Councillor John Keenan, who made the motion to pass. Keenan was a member of the Salary Committee that reviewed non-union appointed positions within the city, by comparison to other city employees, and to similar positions in municipalities similar in population and budget.

"I will support it," said Keenan. "I know it won't be a popular thing, but a true leader doesn't vote on what will get you reelected. You vote on what you think is right."

Other members of the committee include Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, Keenan, Human Resources Director Roberta Keta, Assistant to the Mayor David Murphy, and resident Arthur Foley of Century 21 Annex Realty.

"I find it frustrating when we make a committee, then pick holes in it," said Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis.

The Salary Review Committee submitted that:

There is a need for a salary range for each position to aid in the hiring process, to give prospective employees a clear statement of expected salary levels at the time of hiring and expected step increases.

The salaries have not kept pace with increases in the Consumer Price Index or other municipal employees.

Direct comparisons of salaries of similar positions is not always possible, given that job responsibilities and terms of appointment vary.

The council order is expected to establish salary uniformity, provide salary ranges to be used in the hiring process, establish a step scale and set competitive salaries that attract and retain qualified and committed public employees.

"There are 65 employees making more than the mayor," said Keenan.

"If you're going to say that these are the highest paid employees in the city, that's just not true," said Keenan. "There are people who answer to the department heads that make more than the department heads."

Keenan said that the non-union city employees are subjected to a "flawed" process where they have to submit themselves every couple years to have a pay raise approved.

"The salaries have not kept pace with similar positions," said Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, who authored the resolve that established the Salary Review Committee.

"I have voted for salary increases in the past, I'm not going to take that position on this one," said Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi. He said the pay-raises would increase taxes for residents.

Of the $236 million budget, "not a penny" will go to repairs to the Fore River Clubhouse, he said, with an estimated reconstruction cost of $25,000 for plumbing, damaged floors, and heating.

"We do what we can afford to do," said Raymondi. "When it's time to vote, I'm going to stand with my constituents who want the money better spent."

The upgrading would be in three steps, beginning July 1, the start of Fiscal Year 07. The next two steps would be at the start of Fiscal Years July 1, 2007 and July 1, 2008.

If the proposed new salary schedule is approved by the City Council, Mayor William Phelan's salary would go from $101,175 to $116,000, $119,196 and $122,474. His salary now is behind other mayors.

Not included in the recommendations are the salaries of Police Chief Robert Crowley and Fire Chief Timothy Pettinelli who now earn $101,158 and would remain at that figure.

Kelly Opposes Combining Two Fire Stations

Fire Department Study Submitted To Council

By MIKAELA SLANEY

An independent study report of the fire department was presented to the City Council Monday night, and immediately ran into opposition by Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly over the recommended closing of two stations.

The report suggests the closing of the Germantown and Quincy Point fire stations, and opening a new station between the two near the intersection of Sea Street and Palmer Street.

"In this study the closing of Germantown and Quincy Point stations is beyond my comprehension," said Kelly. "It's just not necessary and it just won't work. I just wont support (the report) with that in it."

Currently, there are eight stations: the Headquarters Station, the West Quincy Fire Station, the Wollaston Fire Station, the North Quincy Station, the Squantum Fire Station, the Houghs Neck Fire Station, the Quincy Point Fire Station, and the Germantown Fire Station

Mark Morse, president of MMA Consulting Group, Inc., the independent company that submitted the results, said that if the stations were designed today, only five or six stations would be constructed. The closing of a station would enable the stations to redistribute personnel, so there would be more people at remaining stations.

The report, which was designed to assist in the development of an improvement plan for the fire stations, was referred by the City Council to be reviewed by the Public Safety Committee.

Morse said the study includes interviews and surveys of the fire fighters and station visits.

The report cites presence of asbestos and physical deterioration of the stations.

"Fundamentally your facilities are in poor condition," said Morse. "They're all aging facilities and at some point they need to be addressed."

The study suggested an appropriation from the city for an additional $200,000 to $400,000 annually for at least eight to ten years to make necessary health and safety repairs and code compliance repairs. The stations are in such conditions that the $400,000 would not be used to improve the stations but "simply to keep them operating," he said.

The reports will be reviewed by the Department of Public Safety.

MMA Consulting Group, Inc. first submitted its findings in a report to the city's Fire Study Committee, which was established as the result of a resolve by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin who is a member of the committee.

Morse said that despite problems with the stations, fire fighters remain optimistic about their jobs. He said that surveys showed that "a high proportion loved their work... but were concerned about training and professional development."

MMA Consulting Group suggested organization of the Fire Department and its command structure, the establishment of an emergency communication system within the city, improvements in the conditions of the station, and the internal communications through the chain of command.

"There's a lot of things in there that we've been fighting for years," said Arienti. "But we feel that there are things we want that haven't been touched upon."

The priorities of the suggestions in the study are not consistent with those of the firefighters, he said. The firefighters wish to address first the safety of the men. Secondly, their health and well-being, and thirdly, the condition of their transportation.

He said he was glad to see funding requested in the study. "In the last 20 years, that I've seen, all we've put into the buildings is Band-Aids. Let's get it done."

The report also suggests the establishment of new positions in the fire department, including an Assistant Chief, an Assistant Chief, Operations Division, an Assistant Chief, Support and Staff Services Division, a Safety/EMS Officer and a Planning and Research Officer.

Major claims of the study include:

- The need to redesign the organization of the fire department and develop systems to ensure that command personnel are accountable.
- The current organization structure places a burden on the Fire Chief and limits the ability of the Chief to plan for the future of the department. There are not enough staff officers to effectively operate the department.
- There is a need for the city to consider a redesign of the emergency communication system.
- The facilities of the Fire Department are in such poor condition that the ultimate rehabilitation and repair costs may be prohibitive.
- The fire department lacks a systematic training and professional development strategy which builds the practical skills of personnel, and supervisory and management capability of officers.
- The department does not have a comprehensive set of standard operating guidelines or procedures (SOGs or SOPs).
- The full emergency medical capability of the Quincy Fire Department is not coordinated sufficiently with other emergency medical resources.

Sheets At Home After Mild Heart Attack

Former Mayor James Sheets returned home from Boston Medical Center Sunday after receiving treatment for what was described as a mild heart attack.

"He's feeling fine," said his wife, Joanna, Monday. "He had a stent inserted in one artery that was blocked. He doesn't want to talk to anyone right now. He doesn't even want to think. We're trying to figure out his medicines and diet now."

Sheets, who is 71, began feeling chest pains in the early morning hours of Wednesday, June 14, and was taken to Quincy Medical Center with what was thought to be gall bladder problems.

When it was diagnosed as a heart attack, he was transferred to Boston Medical Center where the stent was inserted.

Sheets, who was mayor of Quincy from 1990 to 2002, has said he regarded his successful effort to keep Quincy Hospital open as Quincy Medical Center as one of the crowning achievements of his six two-year terms in office

His time in the hospital forced him to miss the $250-a-plate black tie dinner Friday night that raised funds for the Adams Memorial Foundation of which Sheets is regional director.

Kilroy's Mini Golf Opens Friday At The USS Salem

The United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum aboard the USS Salem will open an 18-hole miniature golf course Friday at noon.

Kilroy's Mini Golf, measuring 205 feet by 165 feet by 90 feet, is located on the pier adjacent to the USS Salem at 739 Washington St., Quincy.

It is named after James Kilroy, a former rivet inspector at the Fore River shipyard whose "Kilroy Was Here" logo became famous worldwide during World War II.

"The theme of Kilroy's Mini Golf is historic Quincy," said Michael Condon, executive director of the U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum. "Quincy is rich in history and we wanted to highlight our heritage by replicating historic sites. At each hole, visitors can learn a bit of the history of the featured historic site."

For example, visitors can putt through the Abigail Adams Cairn and under the Granite Rail. Others feature a specific Kilroy hole, United First Parish Church, his and hers John and Abigail Adams hole, Bunker Hill monument, City Hall, Thomas Crane Library, Adams Academy and Adams birthplaces.

The hours of operation will be 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily. Admission for 18 holes of mini golf is $5 or golf may be combined with admission to the USS Salem for $8. Kilroy's Mini Golf and the USS Salem are available for birthdays, fund-raisers and special events.

Jonathan McCarthy Needs Help

Fundraiser June 30 For 5-Year-Old Cancer Victim

By MIKAELA SLANEY

A fundraiser to pay for medical treatments for five-year-old former resident Jonathan McCarthy, will be at the Weymouth Elks, June 30 from 7 p.m. to midnight.

Jonathan was diagnosed with a brain tumor described as the size of a cue ball, grade four: the most serious stage of tumor. His family was told that patients with this kind of cancer have a 10 to 20 percent survival rate.

Tickets for the fundraiser are $25 per person. There will be a raffle and a silent auction. DJ Doug Folsom will provide entertainment, and coffee and desserts will be served.

Jonathan's father, Daniel, has taken time off from work to be with his family during the illness. Daniel is a member of the Roofers and Waterproofers Local Union 33. Jonathan is one of four children.

"Jonathan is doing really well," said Michelle McCarthy, Jonathan's mother. "We saw the neurosurgeon today. He's clear to do anything but ride a bike.

JONATHAN McCARTHY

He was swimming again, but he gets a little tired. We're starting the third week of radiation treatment, and this when its supposed to start making them tired, although they say everybody is different."

"We want to thank everybody for their support. We've gotten a lot of nice letters. Actually words can't really say how thankful we are. A school (Thomas Hamilton School of Weymouth) has sent us a letter that they have a wishing well. Kids make wishes for Jonathan." People use the wooden lawn wishing well to drop paper wishes, she said.

"Cancer survivors have sent us letters. It's good to hear that, and that people are wishing and praying for Jonathan."

Jonathan's condition was discovered when he collapsed and started vomiting May 13 after swimming. A CAT scan revealed an unknown object on his brain. He was taken to Children's Hospital in Boston where they put a shunt into his brain to relieve the pressure. Most of his tumor was removed the next day, Mother's Day. His radiation treatments are five days a week for six weeks. He will get a month's break and then his treatments will start again. He has taken anti-seizure medicine as a precaution, has had physical therapy and radiation in addition to the chemotherapy.

Jonathan's grandfather James McCarthy Sr., a retired Quincy fire fighter, is undergoing radiation treatments at Brigham and Women's Hospital for bone cancer. The family is trying to schedule their appointments together.

Jonathan's school, The Johnson Early Childhood Center has collected donations. The Weymouth League of Women Voters has a committee headed by Helen Maloney that is raising funds.

The McCarthy Family Fund was set up by Maloney at Weymouth Bank. Checks can be made out the McCarthy Family Fund, Weymouth Bank, 744 Broad St., East Weymouth, MA 02189 and put to the attention of Robert Moran and/or Victoria Silberstein.

Businesses which are interested in donating to the fundraiser can contact Maloney, president of the Weymouth League of Women Voters at 781-331-0048.

Naked Fish Puts On A New Name

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The former Naked Fish, Red Sauce Restaurant at 516 Adams St. will now be known as the Red Wood Tavern.

The License Board Tuesday granted a change of managers from Gerry Fruggiero to Steven Vallarelli.

Chairman Joseph Shea said the site was once called The Hollow and considered a "West Quincy Landmark."

Shea said "I can't tell you how many phone calls I received asking me when the restaurant would re-open."

A few years ago, Joseph Crugnale purchased the business and called it the Naked Fish. It seemed to flourish for a while, and then the owner decided to change the menu and called it the Red Sauce.

About a year ago Red Sauce closed abruptly.

It was rumored that a Mediterranean style restaurant featuring gourmet pizza would be at the site, plus another popular restaurant would take over.

Now, this time the restaurant, still owned by Crugnale , and according to Vallarelli will feature a family type eatery with steaks, chicken seafood, sandwiches, salads, shepherds pie, and all kinds of appetizers and desserts.

Vallarelli said the reopening of the restaurant will be about the third week in July serving dinners only beginning at 4 p.m.

We started with a strong foundation of health care.

Now we're building on it.

Things look a bit different at Milton Hospital these days. Yet even with all the progress, our tradition of putting people first means it's business as usual. From the main entrance to the OR, the parking lot to the ED, easy access is assured for all patients and visitors.

So what is changing? We're creating a medical center infused with the latest in technology and more people-friendly features than ever before. The size of the Emergency Department is doubling and we're renovating our Surgical and Endoscopy Departments. We're also making it easier for outpatients, adding parking and much more.

Through all phases of construction, the impact on our patients will be minimal. Once the project is completed however, the impact will be immeasurable.

$2.2 Million Appropriated To Fix City Sidewalks

By MIKAELA SLANEY

The Finance Committee unanimously approved an appropriation of $2.2 million from free cash that will fund the restoration of sidewalks throughout the city.

Although the bond request was $2.2 million, preliminary cost estimates were only at $1.2 million, said Public Works Commissioner Steve O'Donnell, who met with the members of the Committee to discuss the designated repairs.

Although he voted to accept the appropriation, Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee first expressed concerns over the total costs of repairs. "Two million just to do sidewalks?" he asked.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, who made the motion to pass the appropriation, said he had particular concerns over the condition of sidewalks on Francis St. "It's really embarrassing to have a sidewalk like this," he said.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi expressed concerns over the conditions of sidewalks on Faxon Lane. "This street is in deplorable conditions," he said. "I get constant phone calls, and that's matched by Madison Ave."

Raymondi said he hoped the sidewalk plans would improve safety conditions for pedestrians, and mentioned a situation where a boy was hit by a car while crossing Independence Ave.

"It looks like this community is looking for leadership that will be making the streets safer," he said.

Raymondi asked O'Donnell to explore options to add raised crosswalks was part of the project, especially in Wards 2 and 3. "There's not one crosswalk," he said.

Raymondi asked O'Donnell to prepare information about the project, including completion target dates.

Streets designated in the improvement plan include:

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin mentioned worn out sidewalks bordering the Lincoln Hancock School. Dave Murphy, Assistant to Mayor William Phelan, said they can be replaced with funding from another source, and do not need to be included in the $2.2 million appropriation.

GRADUATES OF THE Quincy Drug Court (from left): Charlene Daly, Lee Shaw, the Honorable Diane Moriarty, presiding justice, Quincy Drug Court; Stephen Cohen, Scott O'Hara and James DeMarco. In an effort to address the rise in criminal offenses, fatalities and substance abuse related issues among probationers and to reduce the devastating effect of drug distribution in the community, Drug Court sessions were established. Drug Courts provide intensive substance abuse treatment with judicial supervision. The Quincy District Court established its first Drug Court session on March 2, 2001. The recent commencement honored its third group of graduates. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Noble

Eight Honored At Drug Court Commencement

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Eight graduates were recently honored at the third Drug Court Commencement at the Quincy District Court.

The seven who wished to be named include:

Stephen Cohen, Charlene Daly, Scott O'Hara, Kevin Sanchez, Paul Connors, James DeMarco and Lee Shaw.

The graduates completed Drug Court at different times throughout the year, said Carol Queeney, probation case coordinator. They all participated at the same commencement, since there is only one per year.

Probation Officer Jo Rothman Served as master of ceremonies. Mayor William Phelan greeted the audience, and presented certificates of recognition to the graduates.

Special Agent Tina Murphy, demand reduction coordinator, DEA, was keynote speaker.

Guest speakers included: Michael Botticielli, assistant commissioner of the Department of Public Health, Michael Bellotti, Norfolk County Sheriff, William Keating, Norfolk District Attorney, Drug Court graduate Ellen Gaumont, and Judge Diane Moriarty.

Moriarty, Ellen Quinn, and Queeney gave graduate profiles, and presented the diplomas.

While in Drug Court, participants completed four phases of treatment and supervision. Participants completed a stay at a halfway house, unannounced drug testing, substance abuse counseling, case management, group programs, job training (when appropriate), and court visitations.

Queeney said that there has been a shift in substances used by dependents.

"It used to be alcoholics, today it's mostly drugs. Drugs are their number one choice. It's cheaper," she said.

"You can get doctors to prescribe pain killers. A lot of them start with legitimate pain, but then they get hooked."

"It's very strict supervision," said Moriarty. "If they fail the program, I lock them up."

Between 72 and 75 percent complete the program, said Moriarty.

"Sometimes it takes them more than one try. A lot don't get it on the first try." Moriarty said she gives them a "three shots and you're out" policy, with the third "shot" resulting in jail time.

"Most said it was the most difficult program they've ever done, because they were long-term offenders," said Moriarty. "Most have tried to stop, but couldn't."

Of the graduates, "the ones that have a slip get right back into the program, call their sponsor, or go to an AA meeting. The program gives them the tools they need to stay sober," she said.

Graduates have "reestablished positive relationships with their families." Moriarty said the graduates all had family members present for the commencement.

"They also believe the program saved their lives because if they continued doing what they were doing, they would either die or be in jail for a long time."

Moving Scams

Getting scammed by movers is the last thing you need during the already stressful time of relocating. But mover scams are so common nowadays that it's worth the extra time and trouble to try have a relatively safe move.

Here are some of the most common scams:

—You hire Moving Company A and on moving day a truck pulls up out front that says Moving Company B on the side. Your move has been subcontracted out.

—Every single item on the inventory is marked as scratched or damaged in some way, even if it's brand-new.

—The mover insists on a large deposit.

—An online or phone bid will get you a low estimate. But when your belongings get to the other end, the company will ask for more money.

—You're told that a cubic footage estimate will get you a lower moving bill. If you agree to the estimate, the company will find a way to "prove" that your belongings came in at a higher cubic footage.

—Holding your belongings hostage until you pay an increased amount. This can be thousands of dollars. If you don't pay, your belongings go into storage, and the storage fees mount up.

Here are some steps you can take to increase your chances of having a carefree move:

- Insist on an in-person estimate, and don't rely on Internet or phone quotes.
- Get the company's motor carrier and DOT numbers, and verify them with the Department of Transportation. Call the Better Business Bureau.
- If you're traveling by car, pack some of your cherished items and take them with you.
- Mail your important documents to yourself at the other end.
- Get referrals from friends who've recently moved. Call real estate agents in your area and large companies who transfer employees.
- Insist on a binding estimate. That won't guarantee you're covered, but it might help.
- Put your name and address on every box.
- Before you hire a moving company, go to www.movingscam.com and see if your potential mover has had complaints. You'll be surprised at how long the list is — and how little the authorities are doing about all the scams.

What Real Estate Bubble?

By GEORGE DEMELLO
Senior Vice President Residential Lending, Bank of Canton

GEORGE DeMELLO

In December 1996, then-Chairman of the Federal Reserve Alan Greenspan delivered a speech before the American Enterprise Institute. These words became his most famous observation on the booming securities market:

"But how do we know when irrational exuberance has unduly escalated asset values, which then become subject to unexpected and prolonged contractions? We, as central bankers, need to be concerned if a collapsing financial asset bubble does not threaten to impair the real economy, its production, jobs and price stability."

"Irrational exuberance" was probably the most memorable phrase to emerge from Greenspan's 19-year tenure as the nation's premier economic soothsayer. However, there's another word in this quote that gives pause.

In this case, the "bubble" label applied to the speculative fever that drove high-tech and dot.com stock prices to "exuberant" heights throughout much of the 1990s. That surge was indeed a bubble, and when the realization set-in that profitless enterprise cannot prosper for long, the bubble "burst."

Today, we keep hearing about a different kind of bubble. Newspaper and magazine headlines, televised business commentaries and radio talk shows are indicating a quick-cooling housing market and predicting an imminent collapse in residential housing prices.

Actually, the more precise word to describe today's residential real estate market is "cooling," and that happens to be a positive development. If the stock market of the 1990s had experienced more "cooling-off periods," these "hot stocks" may have experienced better stability. However, that dot.com stock that sold for a paltry $10 a share at its initial offering, before shooting up to $100 a share, might still be around at $13 - 14 a share.

If the increasing annual gains in housing values slip from double-digit rates, where they've been churning for several years, down to a more modest single-digit pace, is that a harbinger of a bursting bubble? I don't think so. Instead, I would maintain that the current housing market - with its rising inventories, easing prices and the transition from a seller's to a buyer's market – has settled at a temporary "plateau."

David Lereah, chief economist for the National Association of REALTORS (NAR), agrees that there is no bubble bursting, but rather a "soft landing" for a nationwide housing market that has been expanding rapidly during an era of historically low interest rates that were reined-in by Greenspan's aggressive anti-inflationary policies of the Federal Reserve.

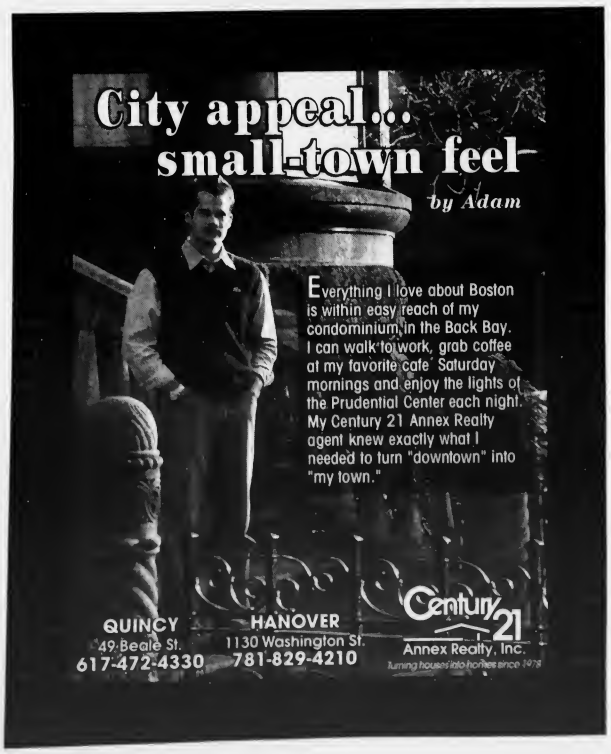
"We may see some minor slowing in home sales as interest rates rise, but the market is clearly stabilizing," said Lereah, commenting on NAR's most recent figures (March) on existing home sales. Still, Lereah stresses, 2006 is likely to be the third-strongest year in home sales on record.

According to NAR, total existing home sales nationwide, including single family, townhouses, condominiums and co-operatives, in March of 2006, were 6.92 million units, or 0.7 percent below the 6.97 million units sold in March of 2005. Total sales of existing homes in 2005 posted a record of 7.08 million units, and while NAR sees this year's total sales of existing homes dropping by around six percent to 6.65 million, the decline, while significant, hardly falls into the category of "bubble bursting."

NAR reported slippage in other areas as well: new home sales are expected to fall significantly just under 11 percent to 1.14 million from last year's all-time record 1.28 million; and housing starts are forecast at 2 million this year, or 3.2 percent below the 2.07 million starts last year.

In Massachusetts, the decline in sales of single-family homes was slightly more than double the national average from March 2005 to March 2006, but the decline nevertheless was modest. According to The Warren Group of Boston, the pre-eminent provider of real estate and financial data throughout New England, single family house sales dropped 1.5 percent, with 4,416 units sold in March 2006 versus 4,482 in March 2005. However, condominium sales increased 1.4 percent to 4,554 units sold in March 2006 compared to the March 2005 figure of 4,482.

The median sale price of a Massachusetts house in March 2006 slipped 1.5 percent to $325,000 from $330,000 a year ago, while the median sale price of condos jumped 6.2 percent, from $260,000 to $276,119.



Admittedly, these figures differ markedly from the comparable statistics we became accustomed to throughout the Greenspan era of basement-level interest rates. To categorize what is happening in today's real estate market as a "bubble burst" that is on-par with Wall Street's high-tech collapse, rather than as the modest correction that it actually is, is far-fetched.

I began this column with a quote from one retired Federal Reserve official. Let me close it with remarks from another: Richard F. Syron, formerly President of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston and currently Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Freddie Mac, a vital link in the nation's residential mortgage market.

Noting in a recent speech that housing has accounted for approximately 20 percent of the nation's Gross Domestic Product growth in the past three years, Syron said: "My own view is that we do not have a national house price bubble today. We will see a significant slowdown in housing, but this slowdown is from record-level highs. Housing starts and home sales will stay strong. Prices will likely rise at rates more in line with long-term historical averages, not at the double-digit rates we've seen recently. And a nationwide decline in housing prices remains highly unlikely, based on both history and the underlying fundamentals."

Isn't it about time all this "real estate bubble" talk just floated away?

Vinyl Siding Adds Appeal And Savings

(NAPS) To get the most in home improvement dollars, insulated siding can be an investment that pays dividends in more ways than one. Some of the latest developments in vinyl siding, for example, make it possible to reduce maintenance, add curb appeal and improve home energy efficiency all at the same time.

Heat tends to flow from warmer to cooler spaces. Insulation attached to exterior siding can decrease this heat flow by providing an effective resistance to the movement of heat. That means holding in the warm air in the cold weather and keeping it out in warmer weather, all of which can contribute to energy savings.

Some say that with the introduction of CedarBoards Insulated Vinyl Siding, a popular line of vinyl siding from CertainTeed, it's possible to have both energy savings and increased design options. Molded from real cedar boards, the authentic-style siding has a natural rough cedar texture and look of wideboard wood siding. Deep, straight-edge panel projections create a clean look of freshly sawn wood.

The siding is engineered for thermal and acoustical performance utilizing TrueComfort® Siding Technology. The polystyrene insulation backing of CedarBoards is custom contoured to the profile and can increase the R-value of a home's exterior wall by as much as 22 percent. The impact resistance of the siding is said to be five times better than traditional vinyl siding. This siding installs easily and precisely aligns nail slots with studs to ensure panels are securely fastened.

Accurate installation contributes to wind-load performance and helps avoid the hazards of nailing into plumbing and wiring located between the studs.

Don't Let Termites Become A House Guest

(NAPS) According to the National Pest Management Association, termites destroy more homes each year than fires or floods. Annual damage estimates $2.5 billion.

"Unless you live in Alaska, where it gets very cold, your home is at risk," said Bayer Advanced entomologist and Head of Product Innovation Dr. Ken Kukorowski.

Termites are attracted to houses because houses often contain two major food ingredients for termites: wood and water. They digest cellulose in wood for energy and require moisture to keep from drying up.

It's possible to have a very serious termite problem without even knowing it since evidence of termites is often hidden, such as mud tunnels or other signs that may be out of view.

"Think about where the wood in your house is located," said Kukorowski. "It's behind your walls and mostly out of view." Subterranean termites, including Formosan termites, can enter a house from the ground or from aerial infestations but the termites attacking the home will be connected eventually to the ground or another source of moisture in the house (water leak, condensation).

Preventing easy access to the home is a key defense against termites.

- Fix plumbing and roof leaks.
- Divert water at least 18 inches away from the house with properly functioning downspouts, gutters and splash blocks.
- Keep firewood at least 10 feet away from the foundation of the home.
- Do not let mulch or soil touch siding on the home. Better yet, keep it about a foot away.
- Eliminate all "wood/ground" contact near the home, except if the wood is pressure treated, permitted for soil contact.
- Seal foundation cracks (to help prevent moisture from entering).
- Hire a professional to conduct an annual inspection.

Toilet Won't Stop Running

Q. I'm a little annoyed right now, because every 20 minutes or so, all day and night, the toilet will suddenly start running. It will fill for about a minute and then shut off with that characteristic "clunk." It's driving me nuts; how do I stop it? — A.N., via e-mail

A. It's time to dive into that toilet tank and check for leaks! OK, you don't literally have to dive in, but it's clear that the tank is filling up with water, and then the water is slowly leaking out. Find out where the leak is occurring, fix it, and your days and nights will be clunk-free.

First, check the exterior of the tank. Are there any cracks or visible moisture on the tank or connecting water pipe or hose? If the tank is cracked, it needs to be replaced; this will run you from $50 to $250 or more. If the connector is leaking, you may simply need to replace the washers — or, if using a flexible hose, the entire assembly — which costs only a few dollars.

If no problems are visible outside, check the interior of the tank. Turn off the water supply (typically at the wall directly beneath the tank — otherwise you may have to turn off the main water supply). Remove the lid of the tank and flush the toilet, watching the water as it drains and observing the behavior of the tank hardware. Once the tank is empty, inspect the hardware, lifting the tank ball and flapper valve.

In many cases, the culprit in a leaky tank is an improperly closed flapper valve (the large rubber stopper at the bottom of the tank that lets water into the toilet bowl). Make sure the lift arm (or chain) that connects the ball and the flapper valve is properly connected, so that the valve opens and closes completely. A lift arm can be adjusted by bending it slightly; a chain by hooking excess links to the connecting wire to take up slack (or removing them, to create slack). Check all connections for mineral buildup or rust, and look at any plastic or rubber materials to see if they are deteriorating. Corroded hardware must be replaced; complete kits are available at your hardware store.

OH, MY AGING FEET!

The human body undergoes tremendous changes during the aging process—muscles shrink, tendons stiffen, and metabolism slows. Because a person's feet handle so much stress, taking special care of them during the senior years can enhance mobility and reduce pain, stiffness, and deformities. One of the best things seniors can do is exercise regularly. Taking a 20-to 30-minute brisk walk a few times per week does wonders for maintaining bone and muscle health. Swimming and bicycling are other good activities that promote overall health. Stretching regularly will help maintain joint mobility. Even while relaxing, rotate feet in circles, in both directions, to encourage blood flow to the area. See a podiatrist annually as you age for a complete foot checkup

The senior foot presents its own special concerns to the podiatrist. But whether feet are brand new or have a few miles on them, no one should wait to see if their foot problems will "just go away." Some conditions definitely won't, most others probably won't , and you certainly don't want to be left with more serious, harder to fix problems later on. Feet of all ages deserve the comprehensive attention you'll find here at 999 North Main Street Randolph, in the MEDICAL OFFICE BUILDING. Please call 781-986-3668 for an appointment for foot care for the family. Office hours are now also available at Quincy Medical Center and Milton Medical Building. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

HINT: Most foot ailments will not become serious if they are caught and treated promptly.

Staying Fit While Rehabbing Injury

Q. I tore my Achilles' tendon last week and underwent surgery. This could not have happened at a worse time, since I was training for a marathon. While it's unlikely I'll be able to run the marathon in seven months, how can I stay in the best shape so I don't have to start from scratch when I am released to begin running again?

A. Tearing an Achilles' tendon is not only painful, but requires diligent rehabilitation to bring your foot back to full strength and flexibility. Unfortunately, this injury is common and can occur from anything from running to tripping.

As part of the physical therapy to help rehabilitate your Achilles' tendon, you will likely do exercises to improve the range of motion and function of the muscles, ligaments, tendons and joints of your foot, as well as strengthen the muscles of your leg. These exercises can be done on both legs, even though you only had surgery on one foot. Maintaining the strength of both legs will be important to the return of full function, especially running.

Once your doctor has cleared you to work out on your own, there are certain exercises you can do to keep in shape and not hinder the recovery of your foot.

Maintaining as much strength, flexibility and normal movement patterns as possible is going to be imperative. Total-body strength training can include using machines, resistance bands, medicine balls, fitness stability balls or other exercise tools. Be cautious not to overwork the foot and leg on which you had surgery unless suggested from your doctor, especially if you are still in a cast.

Maintaining your cardiovascular conditioning is also important. Using your upper body to raise your heart rate is a great way to train without have to use your leg. An upper-body ergometer, or arm bike, simulates riding a bicycle, but instead of your legs you use your arms.

Swimming is another option to stay in shape while you recover. Ask your physician about using the water as a way to train. The buoyancy of the water can help with conditioning and possibly with rehabilitating your foot. Be sure to speak with your doctor before entering the water to ensure all incisions from surgery have healed and that using the water is safe.

You can definitely stay in shape while recovering from your injury, but be sure to modify your exercise program and be safe. Your physical therapist or physician can help you develop a program that will get you back on your feet in no time.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kfws@hearstsc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Creating A Cholesterol Plan

(NAPS) A number of Americans have put their hearts into lowering their cholesterol. Yet a recent American Heart Association survey found that many adults with high cholesterol still don't realize that they have an increased risk of developing heart disease.

According to the survey, 50 percent of respondents with cholesterol levels of 200 or greater, and who had risk factors such as high blood pressure or diabetes, did not perceive themselves to be at high risk for cardiovascular disease. Fifteen percent believed they were at low risk. However, the American Heart Association and National Cholesterol Education Program (NCEP) data indicates that many of these respondents are indanger of having a heart attack within a decade.

Cholesterol guidelines established by both groups show that people with multiple risk factors; smoking, high blood pressure, elevated cholesterol, etc., and people with coronary heart disease and other conditions are at high risk of having a heart attack within 10 years.

The findings are the focus of this year's American Heart Association's Cholesterol Low Down program, an effort meant to help teach people about their risk of heart disease. Anyone can join the program by calling 1-800-AHA-USA1 or visiting www.americanheart.org/cld. Participants receive a Healthy Heart Kit, which includes "the Cholesterol Low Down About Your Cholesterol" guide and a "Low Fat Favorite Recipes" cookbook. The Cholesterol Low Down is sponsored by Pfizer.

"Patients know that cholesterol is important; however, they neet to better understand that their high cholesterol and additional risk factors may lead to heart disease or a stroke," said Roger S. Blumenthal, M.D., associate professor of medicine in the Division of Cardiology at Johns Hopkins Hospital and School of Medicine in Baltimore.

Words Of Wisdom

The survey also found that 72 percent of respondents strongly agree that their health care provider is a partner in managing their cholesterol. Those who frequently discuss cholesterol with their health care provider report being well-informed about issues such as setting personal cholesterol goals and the importance of following treatment plans.

"Health care providers are an important and supportive resource for individuals at risk for heart disease and stroke because of their cholesterol and other risk factors," said Lori Mosca, M.D., Director of Preventive Cardiology at New York-Presbyterian Hospital; Associate Professor of Medicine at Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeions. "Patients should work with their doctor to learn if their cholesterol levels are healthy and to develop a plan that includes a healthy diet and physical activity to reduce their risk."

Treating Lower Back Pain

(NAPS) Regular exercise is an important component of any balanced, healthy lifestyle. Unfortunately, for many people chronic lower back pain makes exercise, or just about any other type of activity, painful and sometimes impossible.

Lower back pain affects each of us at some point in our lives and is one of the leading causes for physician visits. According to the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons (AAOS), approximately six million Americans each year see their physician because of lower back pain, and nearly 500,000 require hospitalization.

However, as medical professionals learn more about the causes and effects of chronic back pain, their approaches to treatment are changing. For example, fewer doctors prescribe bed rest. Not only can that course of treatment result in stiff or weakened muscles, but physical inactivity can lead to more serious long-term problems such as weight gain, heart disease and diabetes. Today's patients have a range of treatment options, with most encouraging at least some type of physical activity.

Experts say that moderate exercise, three to five times per week, will not only improve overall fitness but will also decrease the likelihood of further back injury. Here are a few tips from the North American Spine Society and The Physician and Sportsmedicine Journal to help get back on track to a regular exercise regimen.

• Use physician-approved stretches to loosen the lower and upper back and related muscles, including hamstrings and quadriceps.

• Strengthen muscles that support the back and work to improve the back's flexibility.

• Do exercise with proper form to maximize benefits and minimize strain.

"We always try to perform treatments that help patients maintain and even increase their level of activity. A person in good physical shape is much less likely than an inactive one to injure their back during work or daily activities," said Nagy Mekhail, M.D., Ph.D., chairman of the Department of Pain Management at the Cleveland Clinic. "Healthy living means lower-back-pain sufferers see better results. Those who cannot be active take longer to recover."

When lower back pain interferes with daily activities and exercise, patients should consult a physician to learn more about their condition and treatment options.

For some patients, nonoperative therapeutic treatments such as nonsteroidal antiflammatory drugs (NSAIDS) and physical therapy may provide relief. For others, lower back pain can be traced to the slow degeneration of the vertebral discs, a condition known as chronic "disc-related or discogenic" lower back pain.

With age or injury, cracks and fissures may develop in the wall of the disc. Small nerve endings find their way into the cracks causing chronic pain. Patients with this type of pain may benefit from aggressive procedures such as spinal fusion and disc replacement surgery or minimally invasive approaches such as the Intradiscal ElectroThermal Therapy (IDET) procedure.

Clinical studies indicate that 60 to 80 percent of IDET procedure patients achieve a 50 percent reduction in lower back pain following the procedure. Studies also show that patients require less medication after the procedure to manage pain, and are more likely to return to work.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

REPLACEMENT TEETH

If you have lost one or more teeth, you are a candidate for a denture. This removable replacement for missing teeth and adjacent tissues is made of acrylic resin (sometimes, in combination with other materials). A complete denture replaces all your teeth, and a "partial" fills in the gaps caused by missing teeth and prevents adjacent and opposing teeth from drifting into the spaces. Partial dentures are intended to provide a tooth-replacement solution for those who still have some remaining natural teeth. In addition to filling in gaps, dentures improve chewing ability and speech. They also provide support for facial muscles. Both full and partial dentures must be removed and cleaned daily.

Dentures are made to closely resemble your natural teeth so there should be no noticeable change to your appearance. In fact, dentures may even improve your smile and fill out your facial appearance. Your smile says a lot about you. Whether you're considering dentures, cosmetic dentistry, need answers to a dental problem, or just want to improve your daily dental care, you'll find we have the information you need to keep your smile in top shape. We're committed to your best interests. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. To maintain a proper fit, the dentist should inspect your dentures on a regular basis.

Morrisette Off To 4-1 Start, Defeats Quincy

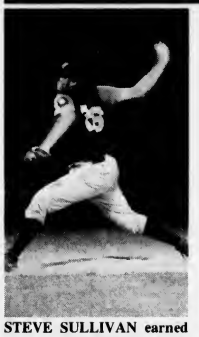
LEGION BASEBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

The Morrisette American Legion baseball team is off to a great start through the first week of the season.

On Sunday night, Morrisette cruised to its third straight win with an 8-2 victory over cross-town rival Quincy at Adams Field. The two will meet again in a rematch this Sunday at 8 p.m.

With a 4-1 record, Morrisette is in second place behind Milton (7-0) and Braintree (4-0) in the District 6 East Division.



"The kids are playing well, they really are," said manager Ray Cattaneo. "We're coming together as a team now and we're just having fun. They're hitting the ball well too. Some of the kids that had trouble in high school are hitting. If we continue to play like this, we're going to be OK."

Morrisette, which played Weymouth Monday, will travel to Braintree today (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m. and host Canton Friday at 8 p.m.

Quincy, which played Canton Monday and Weymouth Wednesday, will host Cohasset today (Thursday) at 8 p.m. and head to Braintree Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Steve Sullivan followed his gem in the season opener with another strong performance on the hill. The right-hander went the distance, giving up two unearned runs on four hits and a walk and striking out nine.

"He's throwing really well," Cattaneo said. "He's pitching with a lot more confidence. He thinks he can go out there and beat anyone. He's increased his velocity and he has better control. That year at Westfield State really helped him."

STEVE SULLIVAN earned his second win of the season in Morrisette's 8-2 win over Quincy.

DEAN SANDONATO rears back to fire a pitch.

Morrisette took a 1-0 lead in the first when 15-year-old Joe Vialpando led off the game with a triple and scored on Ray Marchand's groundout.

In the second, Morrisette sent nine batters to the plate as it pushed across five runs on six hits for a comfortable 6-0 cushion.

Matt Haskins and Jonathan Pelletier each singled and Joe Lousararian walked with one out to load the bases. Vialpando knocked in a run with a sacrifice fly, Marchand had an RBI double to left-center, Joe Garland stroked a two-run single to right and Brian Sullivan belted an RBI double over the right fielder's head.

Quincy got on the scoreboard in the third inning when Tom Power reached on an error, stole second and advanced to third on the play, and scored on Matt Jaehnig's groundout.

In the fourth, Kevin Bossart crushed a double that short-hoped the fence in right field with one out but Quincy stranded him at third base.

Morrisette added a run in its half when Brian Sullivan ripped an RBI double down the right field line, and it tacked on another run in the fifth when Pelletier doubled and scored on Lousararian's single.

DREW LOUD walks through a cloud of dust after crossing home plate with Quincy's second run of the game in the sixth inning.

MORRISETTE PLAYERS shake hands with Quincy manager Mark Jaehnig (44) following their 8-2 victory Sunday night at Adams Field.

Quincy closed out the scoring in the sixth on Tom Conley's RBI single that plated Drew Loud (two hits).

In the bottom half, Quincy made two great defensive plays when shortstop Loud and second baseman Joe Fitzpatrick turned a nifty double play and center fielder Power robbed Brian Sullivan of a hit with a diving grab.

The momentum didn't carry over into its last at-bat as Steve Sullivan punched out two hitters and Marchand picked off a runner at first base to end the game.

In previous action, Morrisette dropped a 6-4 decision at Milton last Wednesday when it gave up a two-run, walk-off home run.

Milton built a 4-0 lead through three innings before Morrisette chipped away. Haskins had a two-run single in the fourth and in the sixth, Steve Sullivan scored on an error and Pelletier had an RBI single to tie the game.

The following day, Morrisette came through with some late-inning magic of its own in a 6-5 home win against Cohasset.

Cohasset scored five runs in the seventh inning to overcome a 3-0 deficit before Morrisette came right back in its final at-bat.

Steve Sullivan and Brian Sullivan each walked and Mike Burke was hit by a pitch to load the bases. After Ricky Salvucci made it 5-4 with a sacrifice fly, Steve Connolly walked to fill the bases again before Pelletier delivered a two-run walk-off single.

Last Friday, Morrisette again came back late in the game to edge Holbrook, 6-5, at home. Steve Sullivan had a two-run double and Burke an RBI single for a 3-0 first-inning lead.

After Holbrook scored a pair of unearned runs in the second, Morrisette got one back on Marchand's two-out RBI double for a 4-2 lead.

Holbrook, though, scored a run in the third and two more in the fourth to go ahead, 5-4.

Morrisette tied the game in the fifth on Burke's RBI single and scored the winning run in the sixth on Vialpando's two-out single that brought home Connolly.

Wollaston II Defeats Wollaston I, Bows To Marshfield

SENIOR BABE RUTH

The Wollaston II Senior Babe Ruth team split its first two games of the season last week.

Danny Myers of Quincy High School struck out 16 batters in a 6-1 win over Wollaston I last Tuesday at Adams Field.

Brendan Carnell powered the offense with a bases-clearing triple in the second inning. Also with hits were Rob Mann, Dave Griffin, Alex Tragellis and Nick Masone.

For Wollaston I, Paul Doolan had two of his team's four hits. The other two were by Joe Griffin and John Orlando, who made several spectacular plays at shortstop.

Last Saturday, Wollaston II fell to Marshfield, 3-1. Mann, Matt Edgerly and Eric Moreschi pitched well as they held Marshfield to four hits.

Tom Pepe had a pair of hits while Dave Regan, Chris Boyd and Edwin Nunez each had one. Edgerly scored the lone run.

SENSING TROUBLE

If your vehicle has drivability problems or is using an inordinate amount of gas, you may have a failing oxygen sensor. This sensor sends a signal to the engine computer based on the amount of oxygen in the exhaust gas. The computer then uses this information to fine-tune the mixture in order to achieve the optimum level of maximum catalytic efficiency and longevity. A worn-out oxygen sensor can lead to excessive gas consumption, higher exhaust emissions, and accelerated catalytic converter damage failures. If can also cause engine performance problems such as surging and hesitating. Any of these symptoms, as well as the appearance of the "Check Engine" light, should prompt a professional check of the oxygen sensor.

If your "Check Engine" light is on, come to LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO to have it checked out. If the problem is a failing oxygen sensor, we will professionally handle your repairs. Preventative maintenance saves you money over the life of your car; bring your car to 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree today to have it checked. Questions? Call 781-843-1550. Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. Open: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

HINT: Worn out oxygen sensors are the primary reason for excessive emissions in fuel-injected engines.

Jimmy Kennedy Race For ALS Raises $38,000

Rainy weather couldn't dampen the spirit of the recent ninth annual Jimmy Kennedy Run for ALS.

Nearly 300 of the 400 registered runners showed up at a wet Pageant Field for the event, also known as the Squirrel Run.

Proceeds are expected to reach between $36,000 and $38,000 and will benefit the Angel Fund, a non-profit organization dedicated to funding ALS research at the Cecil B. Day Laboratory for Neuromuscular Research at Massachusetts General Hospital.

Jimmy Kennedy lost his courageous battle with ALS, better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, in 1997 at the age of 31. His father, Robert, also died of ALS.

"We got buried in the rain," said Rich Kennedy, Jimmy's brother and president of the Angel Fund. "Despite that, there was a great turnout and great enthusiasm under those circumstances. I was very pleased. Overall, just a very, very successful day."

Red Sox pitcher Mike Timlin and his wife, Dawn, were on hand to serve as the official starters of the race.

Keiron Tumbleton of Hopkinton was the overall winner with a time of 25:43 and Holly Madden of Scituate was the overall female winner with a time of 31:50.

The top three Quincy male runners were Ed Gardner (29:06), Stephen Warren (30:34) and Hassan Haydar (31:37) and the top three females were Lisa Bina (31:50), Rita Senier (37:06) and Mary Varden (38:06).

A Job Well Done

On June 8, at approximately 2 p.m., Officer Chuck Landry was on routine patrol when his Lojack scanner indicated a "hit" for a stolen car in the area.

LT. DAN MINTON

As the signal became stronger in the area of Centre Street, the dispatcher gave the description of the stolen car as a blue Mercedes. Officer Landry followed the strengthening signal to a driveway on Trafford Street, where he found the vehicle parked in a driveway, running and with the brake lights on.

After informing communications of his location, Officer Landry slowly approached the driver and ordered him to put his hands on his head. As Officer Landry opened the driver's side door, he observed a medium size knife attached to the driver's pants and keys in the ignition.

Officer Paul Jackson arrived on scene and the driver was then removed from the vehicle and handcuffed. The suspect said the car belonged to a friend and he knew the plate on the car came from a different car.

Officer Dan Francis arrived on scene and informed the officers the plate had been reported stolen the day before and the Mercedes had been reported stolen earlier in the day.

The driver (suspect) was placed under arrest and the following items were found on him: two cell phones, two stacks of cash in multiple denominations folded in half in one pocket, with two additional stacks in another pocket, totaling $234. A check of the suspect's baseball hat revealed an off-white substance appearing to be crack cocaine wrapped in plastic. A search of the stolen car showed the following: a crack pipe, sandwich bags, a sandwich bag with crushed pills inside and a steak knife.

Officer Landry gave the suspect his Miranda rights and asked him for his real name, since the license the suspect gave did not match his facial features on him. When the suspect refused to give his name, he was advised that his fingerprints would provide his identity.

The suspect gave his name and stated he had warrants. During the booking process, it was determined the suspect had nine outstanding warrants from four different courts and a prior conviction for "Possession of Class B Drug" in 2005.

The suspect, a 20-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with "Receiving a Stolen Motor Vehicle," "Possession of Class B Drug with Intent to Distribute," "Operating a Motor Vehicle after License Suspension" (subsequent offense). Nice work!

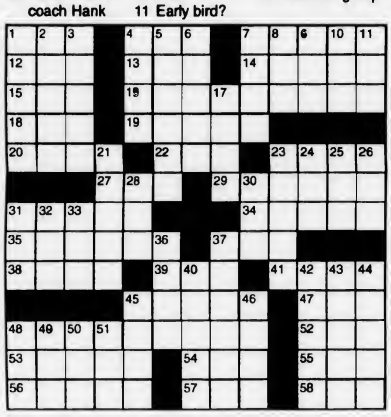
On June 12, at approximately 2:30 p.m., a call was received from a local assisted living facility that one of its residents was missing and suffers from dementia. The senior citizen had last been seen at around 1 p.m.

Based on the physical description provided, a general broadcast was made to all officers and surrounding departments as well as the MBTA and local hospitals. A search of the general area was conducted to no avail.

At approximately 11 p.m., communications called the Boston Medical Center to see if the missing person had shown up there. Personnel in the emergency room verified the missing person was there.

Apparently, the senior, who was found in Dorchester bleeding from a head wound, had fallen and was transported by ambulance. The Quincy Police Department informed his family members, who were very grateful for our efforts in the field and through hours of phone calls tracking down him.

In this case, the ending worked out well, but not all are as fortunate. The Quincy Police Department offers a free program called "HELP," available to citizens of any age who may have a tendency to wander from their home, community program or medical facility.



The purpose of the program is to assist the police and other emergency personnel in locating and returning these citizens home safely. To learn more about this program, contact Lieutenant Dan Minton at 617-745-5719 or Dispatcher Carol Flynn at 617-745-5700 (after 4 p.m.).

Greg Buck Fund Day At PawSox Game Aug. 6

The second annual Greg Buck Fund Day will be held Aug. 6 at a Pawtucket Red Sox game.

The scholarship fund is in memory of Greg Buck, who graduated from North Quincy High School in 1992. He received a bachelor's degree in design of the environment from the University of Pennsylvania and went to Harvard University where he was studying to complete a master's in architecture at the time of his death in 2004.

The scholarship is awarded each spring to a senior who will study architecture or a related field at a four-year college and has been involved in activities at North Quincy High.

Buck was a runner and three-season captain of the track team at North. He was also a winner in the Massachusetts Science Fair at MIT three years in a row, winning second place twice and third place once.

This year, Mandy Li, a senior who will be studying architecture at Northeastern University in the fall, was the recipient of the scholarship. The two previous winners were Piya Wiwatytukhan (2005) and Prasert Wiwatytukhan (2004), who are studying at Wentworth Institute of Technology.

For more information about the game, contact Peggy Walker at 617-471-4279 or Cassian Jae at 617-328-9792. Tickets include an all-you-can-eat barbecue, a ticket to the 1:05 p.m. game vs. Syracuse Sky Chiefs and a contribution to the scholarship fund.

YMCA Golf Classic July 12 At Pine Hills

The South Shore YMCA will host its 10th annual charitable Golf Classic Wednesday, July 12, at Pine Hills Golf Club in Plymouth.

Proceeds from the event will benefit the YMCA's Strong Kids Annual Support Campaign, which provides $1 million in direct financial assistance and youth programming to thousands of families each year.

Event Chairman Bob McCormack of Samuel F. McCormack, Inc. expects 260 golfers to attend.

Players have the choice of "scramble" or "own ball" at the tourney that makes use of both A-rated golf courses.

Spots can still be reserved to golf as a single, pair or foursome. The day includes lunch, golf shirt (provided by Talbot's in Hingham), 18 holes of golf, dinner, and a live and silent auction.

Meridian Investments in Quincy is the event's lead sponsor.

To register or those interested in donating an auction item, contact Jill Donovan at 617-479-8500, ext. 146.

16 Residents Riding In Pan-Mass Bike Challenge

Sixteen Quincy residents will ride Aug. 5-6 in the 27th annual Pan-Massachusetts Challenge, the nation's original bike-a-thon for charity that today raises more money than any other athletic fund-raising event in the country.

They are: Elizabeth Binari, Kerry Byrne, Joshua Dubin, Patricia Fraser, Jean Kenney, Michael Leonard, Patrick McDermott, Theresa Mulcahy, Joshua Person, Sarah Rydwansky, Liz Shallenberger, Harry Walden, Karen Walsh, Annmarie White, David White, Jeffrey Zella.

They will be among the more than 4,500 cyclists who will ride with the collective goal of raising $24 million for lifesaving cancer research and treatment at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through its Jimmy Fund.

The PMC has donated more than $145 million to the Jimmy Fund since its inception in 1980. Last year, the PMC gave 99 cents of every rider-raised dollar directly to the Jimmy Fund, a rate of fund-raising efficiency that is nearly unequaled within the $1 billion athletic fund-raising event industry.

The PMC offers cyclists eight routes that range from 70 to 192 miles over one or two days through 46 scenic Massachusetts towns. Cyclists must raise $1,300 to $3,300 to ride in the PMC, depending on the chosen route, yet the average PMC cyclist raises $5,700.

To become a volunteer, a virtual rider or make a financial contribution to a rider, visit pmc.org or call 800-WE-CYCLE. Checks can be made payable to PMC, 77 Fourth Ave., Needham, MA 02494.

CUSTOMS AND BORDER PATROL (CBP) Public Affairs Chief Ted Woo and Lieutenant Dan Minton of the Quincy Police Department coordinated a tour of the CBP seaport container facility located in South Boston. Students from Quincy High School were able to get a first hand look at CBP's various tools and equipment such as the Radiation Portal Monitor and the MTXR Truck that are use on a daily basis to help keep the country safe from terrorist and instruments of terror. Chief Woo explained that the U.S. has essentially "pushed our borders out" and that CBP Officers are located in over 40 countries across the world pre-screening containers before they even reach the United States. Once a container arrives, CBP utilizes various non-intrusive equipment to detect questionable goods. In addition, select containers are opened for inspection and CBP Officers and K-9 Dogs are used to inspect the containers before they are released from CBP's control. Pageant Field Preferred Location For New Track

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Pageant Field is the preferred location for the new 400 meter track, City Solicitor Monica Conyngham told the Park and Recreation Committee of the City Council, Monday night.

Construction estimates at Pageant Field are between $800,000 and $1 million, which is lower than estimates of other locations in the city, she said.

The new track was to be built from a $1 million bond set aside for construction with the new high school, but building on Pageant Field would make the new track a park facility, not a school facility, so a different source of funding would be used, said Conyngham.

"The next step is to go back to the interested community and to present it to them, and see what they think of Pageant Field as a viable alternative," she said.

Conyngham said a committee that Mayor William Phelan assembled will review track layouts and information. The proposal would then be reviewed by the Park and Recreation Board.

If the million dollar bond is taken from the high school construction costs, the decision would need to be approved by the City Council, and according to Conyngham, would only go to state legislature if there were discrepancies.

City Council President Douglas Gutro urged Conyngham to submit a timeline for the completion of the new track.

"A number of concerned parents have contacted me with concerns that all of the (track) meets were away," said Gutro.

Faxon Field is another location that was studied and dismissed. Conyngham said the field just barely had enough room for the track.

Construction costs estimates for Faxon Field are between $2 million and $3 million, Conyngham said, which well exceeds the $1 million bond appropriation. The field is also protected under a Wetness Protection Act, and they would first need a permit to build there.

Cavanaugh Field was also discussed as an option, but according to Tom Koch, executive director of the Park and Forestry Department, the field doesn't have enough space for a 400 meter track.

HEALING WALL is examined closely by some of the 4,500 who visited the replica during the four days it was in Quincy. uincy Sun photos/Robert Noble

Attracts Over 4,500 Viewers

Healing Wall Names Speak Of What Might Have Been

Tom Lyons, a Marine Corps veteran of Vietnam from South Boston, found the most fitting words for the occasion.

"To look at the wall is to wonder what might have been," he said. "What contributions were lost? What discoveries went undiscovered? What dreams went unfulfilled?"

Behind him loomed the traveling replica of the Vietnam Healing Wall in Washington with the names of more than 58,000 men, including 48 from Quincy, who died in the Southeast Asia war.

Lyons, who lost two boyhood friends a day apart in the fighting, was the guest speaker at closing ceremonies Sunday as the Healing Wall ended its four-day visit to Quincy.

"We marched off to war wearing the emblems of different armed services," he said.

"But these names pierce the landscape of eternity as sons and daughters, husbands and wives, friends and neighbors.

"They speak to us as human beings.

"They live in our hearts as the best part of ourselves. In that sense, they transcend all military guidelines to really become citizens of eternity."

Then, Vin Dolan, commander of the Quincy Veterans Council, and Larry Norton of the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces, read the list of the dead and responded "absent."

Don Murphy sounded "Taps;" the Second Marine Division fired a rifle salute; Maura Finn sang "Amazing Grace" and the traveling wall was off to the next stop, Aiken, S.C., on its 20-city tour.

GUEST SPEAKER Tom Lyons of South Boston recalls his days as a Marine in Vietnam.

The wall drew an estimated 4,500 people from

Council Raises Questions On New Quincy High School

Public Hearing On Woodward Ave. Closing July 5

By MIKAELA SLANEY

A public hearing to discuss the closing of a 400 foot section of Woodward Avenue, between the Coddington Street and Huntley Road intersections for construction of the new high school will be held Wednesday July 5 at 6:30 p.m. at the City Council chambers.

Plans for the new high school and a bond of $143,500,000 are still in limbo as parties continue discussions of construction estimates with the Finance Committee of the City Council.

The Finance Committee has heard from representatives from the Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA), who are expected to fund a portion of the construction costs; Symmes, Maini, & McKee Associates (SMMA), the architectural firm planning the school; and Tishman Construction Corporation of New England, who will build the school.

The size of the new school, the funding and location for a new track, and whether cost estimates include a parking garage were disputed issues at Monday night's Finance Committee meeting.

The Finance Committee meeting will continue again after the public hearing July 5.

Councillor John Keenan, chairman of the Finance Committee, said he hopes the City Council will come to a vote following the July 5 meeting.

Tishman has recommended a cost range of $120 million to $130 million to build the school, though the square foot estimates still vary as building designs are finalized.

Their current estimate is $126,759,608 which is an increase from 2003 estimates of $79,200,000 by Cole & Goyette, the original archi-

Shea Waits On 90,000 Population Figure

Quincy appears to have finally cracked the magic 90,000 mark in population but City Clerk Joe Shea is eying that figure warily.

"It's probably correct," he said, "but I'm in the middle of the city census now. I'll wait and see how that turns out."

Until then, he said, he'll tell anyone who asks him that the population of Quincy is 88,025, the figure he got in the city census of 2005

Federal census estimates the other day place Quincy's population at 90,250 in 2005, up from the 88,231 counted in 2000.

That figure was obtained by taking that for 2000 and adjusting it according to data based on building permits, school enrollments and similar information.

Shea said the city census figures, based on a more accurate count, will be ready in about three weeks.

Quincy has long been chasing Brockton for the title of the Biggest Little City on the South Shore.

The 2005 estimates put Brockton at 94,632, up less than 200 in five years, and burgeoning Plymouth displaced Weymouth as the third largest community in the area at 54,923.

Two Liquor Licenses Suspended In Police 'Sting'

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

As a result of a "sting" operation conducted by Lt. Peter Turowski of the Quincy Police Department on May 26, two establishments have been suspended for selling liquor to underage persons.

Turowski, liquor agent for the License Board said on the night in question, a 19 year old female was sitting at the bar at the Washington Tap, 609 Washington St. with a bottle of beer in front of her.

When he asked the bartender why he didn't ask for an ID, he said he thought she had been there before.

Mark Crowley, owner of the Washington Tap apologized to the board saying it "never happened before" in his 11 years as owner. He said the person who sold the beer to the teenager was not able to attend a TIP class when it was offered, but has since been TIP certified.

On a 5-0 vote, the board voted to suspend the liquor license for three days with two days suspension and one day to be served on a Friday. No day has been designated yet.

The other establishment found in the "sting" was the Kagawa Japanese Restaurant, 1544 Hancock St.

Turowski said there was a 19 year old female sitting at the bar with a bottle of beer in front of her.

Atty. George Huos, counsel for owner Helen Lau said the sushi chef asked the teenager what she wanted to drink. Then owner Lau, who said she thought the man sitting next to her was her husband, a gentlemen who she said comes in every Friday.

Assuming that the beer was for her husband, she served the beer.

Turowski told the board that when he saw the woman at the bar, she was sitting alone.

On a 5-0 vote, the board voted to suspension the liquor license for three days, with two days suspended and one day to be served. Lau picked this Friday, June 30 to be the day to close.

The board voted also that the Japanese Restaurant could remain open to serve food only.

It was the first offense for both establishments.

White House Wreath Readied For John Quincy Adams Tomb

Didn't Like Coulter Column

A reader takes sharp issue with me on the recent column criticizing Ann Coulter, the outspoken TV panelist, on her new book.

Don Kusser of Quincy fires back in her defense in a letter:

"First of all I can't believe that you would call author Ann Coulter a motor mouth conservative.

COULTER

"I thought that you Democrats prided yourself with having compassion. One of the things I found very concerning to me was the statement that you made 'she's an assassin and maybe ought to be muzzled.'

"Mr. Bosworth, as the owner and publisher of the Rising Sun — oops, sorry — The Quincy Sun, apparently by that statement you believe that a person does not have a 1st Amendment right unless you approve of it.

"These women that you are referring to did lose their husbands on 9/11 in the World Trade Center and they are millionaires. Also those women campaigned for John Kerry against President Bush.

"So, Mr. Bosworth, when those women enter the arena of politics just because they had a tragedy in their life does not mean that someone can not criticize their political views.

"If you had read the whole chapter in that book instead of just speaking the Liberal Party line, you probably would have understood exactly what she was saying, but that's not a habit you Liberals have.

"The opinion from the owner of one very tiny overpriced newspaper will not hurt the sale of this book as you noticed the book is number 1 on the New York times best seller list.

"Remember, Henry, the Constitution and the 1st Amendment are meant for all of us and not just a chosen 'few.'"

Some strong words there, Don.

So, I hope you don't mind a few comments.

I heartily agree with you about the First Amendment but some people use the right of free speech as a poison dart.

I think Coulter went far too far in her book (Godless: The Church of Liberalism) when she writes about those four women from New Jersey whose husbands died at the World Trade Center:

"These broads are millionaires, lionized on TV and in articles about them reveling in their status as celebrities.

"I've never seen people enjoying their husband's deaths so much."

That's criticizing their political views?

I see it as pretty cruel if not vicious.

Those four women did campaign for John Kerry.

Don't they have that right? If they had campaigned for George Bush, Coulter would have wrapped her arms around them.

But that wouldn't sell as many books, would it? Go after those four women, attack them just a couple of months before the fifth anniversary of 9/11, call them broads enjoying their husband's deaths. Now that will get you a lot of free publicity on TV and in the newspapers. That should sell a lot of books. Coulter will probably laugh all the way to the bank. Maybe she'll be a millionaire if she already isn't.

Don, don't know what the reference to the Rising Sun means, but if it's Japan, I've been there. Traveled across the Pacific in World War II to get there.

You say "one very tiny local overpriced newspaper will not hurt the sales of this book." Well, it won't help sales either.

And is the sale of that book so important?

Just one other thing:

To set the record straight, I am not a Liberal and not speaking the Liberal Party line. I'm not a Democrat and I'm not a Republican.

Politically, I am unenrolled — a term I dislike. We used to be called independents until Ross Perot came up from looking under the hood and cleaning out the barn and turned the word independent into a political party.

So, I am neither Democrat nor Republican. I vote for candidates on both sides, my choice often depending on the person. I even voted for Bush — once.

I am a little amused, Don, with you thinking I'm a Democrat because I got a call the other day from a reader about another column I wrote. "You're a Republican, aren't you!" he insisted.

So, maybe I'm doing something right in the nonpartisan department.

Thanks for your letter and opinions, Don. And hope you continue reading this tiny, overpriced newspaper.

Hate to lose a reader.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1912 real photo postcard view showing the reverse curve on Beach Street in Wollaston. When the Wollaston Park Land Company laid out their subdivision here on the old Quincy Estate in the 1880s, they had to bend Beach Street to circumvent the old Josiah Quincy house that is still on today's Muirhead Street out of view on the right. A few years after this picture was taken, when automobiles began using these streets, the city took the empty house lot across the street, behind the boy's back, to widen the street and reduce the danger at the curve. Praises Minton, Quincy Police

Open letter to Police Chief Robert Crawley:

My name is Rimas M. Ambraziejus and I am a History teacher at North Quincy High School. I am writing this letter to you in a humble attempt to praise Lt. Dan Minton and the police officers of the Quincy Police Department.

It has been my pleasure to work with Lt. Minton in bringing the Quincy Police Student Academy to students at North Quincy High School. The Student Police Academy is a curriculum to introduce students to the many varied, diverse, challenging, and interesting responsibilities and tasks performed by law enforcement personnel and other public service organizations.

For most students, their perception of society is formed through the unrealistic prism of television, so this is an attempt to inform them of reality through classroom instruction and presentation by and from professionals in the associated fields of public service. Tours of on-site facilities further enhance the learning process. It also allows for young people and public service professionals to get to know each other in a learning, positive environment.

Lt. Minton has been a pillar of professionalism and dedication. His easy going manner and thoughtful insights have made this year's academy another great success for the young participants in the program. He was always available for consultation, even during his off-duty hours. He never shied away from a challenge when quick thinking, adaptation, and daring were required to make a situation benefit the students. He can be very inspirational.

His dedication to make the Student Police Academy a positive ongoing experience to serve the students of North Quincy High School is a reflection of his great commitment to the citizens and young people living in Quincy. The city is fortunate to have such an intelligent, dedicated, upstanding, and committed individual on the payroll. Always above and beyond, that is who he is.

I would also like to praise the many police officers who came to speak to the two senior classes that were part of the Student Police Academy. They were all well-prepared, knowledgeable, and exhibited a sincere sense of respect toward the young people in front of them. Their tone and language was always respectful, clear, and demonstrated an enthusiastic attempt to teach, enlighten, and to connect in a positive way with clients they serve day after day. They always, each and every one of them, made attempts to have the students feel comfortable in their presence. It was no more, "us versus them," but, "we are all in this together." Judging from the student's comments in class the next day, and even weeks afterward, the police officers succeeded.

The citizens of Quincy are fortunate to have these dedicated and very professional police officers working for them. I, as a public school teacher, am honored to work with them.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Golden Cake

We had the almost usual gang over on the week-end, that almost usual rainy one.

I decided to make a great recipe for golden cake, which was one my mother made frequently. It's easy and can be made way before it is served.

Although this recipe was printed several years ago, I thought it was time again as a reminder of how good a home-made cake tastes compared to a mix. I whipped some fresh heavy cream and some fresh strawberries and even the little ones wanted seconds.

Golden Cake

1 stick butter (or margarine)
1 cup 1/4 sugar (I used one cup which I thought was sweet enough)
1 cup milk
2 eggs (slightly beaten)
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 1/4 teaspoons baking powder
2 1/4 cups flour
1 package fresh strawberries (frozen can also be used)
1 pint heavy cream (ready-whip of cool whip can also be used)

Pre-heat oven to 350 degrees. Place all the dry ingredients in a bowl. Then cream sugar and butter together until smooth. Add alternately the dry ingredients with the eggs and milk. Add the vanilla. Beat for 2 minutes.

Grease and flour a cake pan (or two if desired) Bake for 40 minutes if using a large cake pan and about 30 minutes if using two pans. Place a toothpick in to see if done or a thin knife.

When ready to serve, place a mound of cream over the top smothered with strawberries. I had extra cream and strawberries on the side. I used a little natural sugar with the strawberries for a sweeter taste.

'Correction Officers Of Year'

State Honors Six From Bellotti's Office

The Massachusetts Executive Office of Public Safety (EOPS) presented "Correction Officer of the Year awards to six Norfolk County Sheriff's Office employees Monday at a State House ceremony.

"I'm very proud of these officers and the dedication and professionalism they represent, which is reflective of my entire staff," said Sheriff Michael Bellotti. "Their commitment to public safety and their willingness to go above and beyond the call of duty is both admirable and deserving of this honor.

Receiving the EOPS Community Service Group Award were Lt. Steven Shangold, Sgt. Charles Hayes, Sgt. Carter Holmes, Sgt. Bryan Connolly and Maintenance Officer Frank Flora who responded to an accident on Route 128 in Dedham on Sept. 14, 2005. Connolly and Flora are Quincy residents.

After hearing what sounded like a serious accident from their posts at the Sheriff's Office, the officers could see an overturned pick-up truck on the highway.

The officers, after ordering facility dispatch to contact the Dedham Fire Department and the State Police, responded to the scene, positioned a vehicle with emergency lights on the roadway to alert other drivers and then stabilized the crash victim prior to emergency response arriving.

The EOPS Individual Award for Meritorious Conduct was presented to Deputy Sheriff George Greene, who responded to a gas leak and evacuated the area while working on a road detail in Canton on Nov. 23, 2005.

While directing early morning traffic for a contracting crew, Greene saw an excavator hit a high pressure gas line and two workers run from the scene.

Aware of the strong odor of gas and a loud noise coming from the gas line, Greene ran to nearby buildings and homes to evacuate the area.

Although Greene fell twice and injured himself, he continued his task and was able to evacuate two businesses and five homes and also call for emergency response.

For their actions, and going "above and beyond" the call of duty, the Executive Office of Public Safety recognized the six officers at the "Correction Officer of the Year Award" ceremony.

Richard Sweeney Wins B.C. High Jesuit Secondary Education Award

Richard Sweeney of Quincy, a 2006 graduate of Boston College High School, recently received the school's most prestigious award, "The Jesuit Secondary Education Association Award."

The award was presented to Sweeney by William J. Kemeza, president of B.C. High, at Senior Class Night, an evening set aside to celebrate and reward its seniors. The award is presented annually to that member of the graduating class who best exemplifies the ideals for graduates of Jesuit High Schools: a person who is open to growth, intellectually competent, religious, loving, and committed to doing justice.

"Richard Sweeney embodies these ideals," Kemeza said, "in both the quality and breadth of his achievements. Though he is a leader in all he undertakes, he is perhaps better known for his generosity and eagerness to serve others.

"His peers honored him this year by electing him President of the Student Council and Vice-President of the National Honor Society. While compiling an impressive academic record, he has also contributed to a broad range of service activities and was chosen to serve on the Campus Ministry Board of Directors.

"Last year he was recognized for his service to the school with the Paul Hunter Award as the junior who best exemplified the ideals of Jesuit education and service. His school contributions have also extended to athletics, where he was a valued member of the tennis team, and the newspaper, where he was Opinions Editor this year.

"His volunteer efforts outside of school are too numerous to list. In service, academics, sports, clubs, and his unwavering devotion to the entire school community, he has personified the Graduate at Graduation; therefore, B.C. High is honored to present Richard Sweeney this year's JSEA Award."

In addition to receiving the coveted JSEA Award, Sweeney received two other awards. He won a National Honor Society award and a Student Council award.

How To Protect Your Home

It's Hurricane Season

During this year's Atlantic Hurricane Season (June 1-Nov. 30), the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) urges homeowners to protect their property from strong winds, damaging rains and flooding that hurricanes or tropical storms can bring to New England.

"There are several steps we can all take to help make our homes more storm resistant," said MEMA Director Cristine McCombs. "Early planning and preparation can be the key to your safety."

Here are some examples of how to protect your property:

• Learn the particular hurricane risks for your area. Find out if your home is subject to storm surge or inland flooding.

• Make a record of your personal property. Keep an itemized list of your furniture, clothing and valuables to assist adjusters in case of a claim. Back it up with photos or video.

• Protect your insurance policies and other important documents in a secure place like a safe deposit box or a watertight box.

• Keep trees and shrubbery trimmed. Remove diseased or damaged tree limbs that could be blown down during a storm.

• Clear clogged rain gutters. Hurricanes/tropical storms often bring heavy rain. Providing clear drainage will help prevent misdirected flooding.

• Make sure storage sheds or other outbuildings are securely anchored, either to a permanent foundation or with straps and ground anchors.

• Make temporary plywood covers to protect windows and sliding doors. Drill holes for screws or lag bolts in each cover and around each window. Use a numbering or lettering system that shows which cover goes with which window. Store the mounting screws or lag bolts with the covers in a place where they are readily accessible. Taping of windows does not prevent them from breaking.

• Make a list of outdoor items to bring inside in case of a storm, such as lawn furniture, trash barrels, hanging plants, toys and awnings. A list will help you remember anything that can be broken or picked up by strong winds and used as a missile.

• Learn to shut off utilities, as well as where gas pilots and water mains are located.

• Close and lock doors and windows to ensure that they are closed tight to help protect against strong winds and rain.

• Buy Flood Insurance. Unlike damage from hurricane winds, water damage from coastal or inland flooding is not covered by homeowners insurance. Contact your local insurance agent or contact the National Flood Insurance Program.

MEMA is the state agency responsible for coordinating federal, state, local, voluntary and private resources during emergencies and disasters in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

For more information about MEMA and hurricane preparedness, visit mass.gov/mema.

tect firm. The MSBA has not agreed to Tishman estimates so far.

"This is the first time we've seen some of this," said Andy Cherullo, CFO of the MSBA June 22. "I have no idea what Tishman did to get this."

"The (M)SBA is saying they're not their numbers," said Keenan. "I'm not satisfied is my point."

Keenan also said he has concerns that builders may profit from unquestioned unnecessary spending that still comes in under budget, if the budget is inflated.

"My concern is there's a great track record of bringing projects under budget which is easy to do, with an inflated budget. I still see those dollars not accounted for."

Ward 2 Councilor Daniel Raymondi said that a 90 percent reimbursement rate was advertised from original cost estimates, but today, after inflation, the same reimbursement has a much lower percentage.

City Council President Douglas Gutro said that although he is grateful for a 57 percent estimated reimbursement, he wondered if they should hold out for more, but fears jeopardizing funding.

According to Tishman, construction cost escalation achieved record highs in 2004, 2005, which continue strong in 2006. Tishman faulted the spike in escalation on war, lack of materials, shortage of subcontractors and skilled trade labor, and natural disasters, especially a strong hurricane season that greatly effected the costs of woods, metals and cement.

Tishman said they believe that escalation will hold at approximately nine percent for 2006, and lower to 4.5 percent for 2007 and 2008.

Katherine Craven, executive director of the MSBA met with the Finance Committee Monday night to discuss requirements and timelines for the city to be approved for an MSBA loan to build the new school.

According to Craven, the MSBA will pay for 90 percent of the maximum allowable cost of $80,228,599, or a minimum grant of $72,205,739 for eligible costs.

She said that in order for the city to be approved for the grant, the MSBA must have a finalized documentation that includes the schematic design, final construction documents prior to a bid, Massachusetts Environmental Protection Agency and other environmental certifications, proof of site ownership for use as a school property, and historic commission reviews.

Craven said that once the city has submitted the application the MSBA will be prepared to enter into a project funding agreement giving a monthly cash flow with construction benchmarks.

Craven advised the council to submit a vote that identifies the total cost of the new high school project, the construction site, and what will be included in the costs.

Craven warned the council that efforts to include other schools in the vote that are not yet approved by the Board of the Authority, like Central Middle School, risks losing funding.

Craven said she has reviewed two draft votes from the City Council that include drainage improvements to Faxon Field, and the cost to purchase that site. She said this draft remains ineligible.

Craven said the MSBA is reviewing 1156 projects, and has a lending budget of $500 million.

"We have been looking at bids coming in and we have been stunned by the costs," said Craven.

Craven said the MSBA gives funding priority to schools that have health or safety risks, and schools looking to renovate the school rather than build a new one.

Cherullo said the MSBA is reviewing the needs and updates from other towns looking to build schools.

"So what you're telling me is there's a pool of money and this is going to be a competitive process," McNamee asked Cherullo at the June 22 meeting.

Raymondi expressed concerns over an ongoing dispute with the new Lynn High School, designed by SMMA, which was built on a dump site and is reportedly sinking into the ground.

"We now know that this did happen with the same firm and the same kind of issues," said Raymondi. "Should we have concern?" he asked Craven.

"I think you should exercise caution with anybody," said Craven, "regardless of who your vender is."

"To know that the ground is unstable and to have the first floor sinking in a relatively short amount of time, it's troubling," said Raymondi.

"The absolute fact is that the structural frame of that building is not sinking at all," said Edward Frenette, architect for the SMMA. "Specific isolated areas are settling. It's only a report, it's not a finding of fact."

Frenette said they have designed 60 schools without a problem.

"We're doing a disservice to the work of the School Committee," said Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis. "They knew about Lynn, and I think they're happy with the selection of their architect. As a professional it's easy to poke holes."

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly expressed concerns over restrictions of a 60 foot buffer zone between the new high school and the existing high school.

"What is so bugaboo about the buildings touching?" asked Kelly. "It's a perfectly good building."

"We aren't requiring anything other than a new high school be built," said Craven. "It's not our choice, it's your choice. It's not something we're making Quincy do.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said the original plans submitted to the MSBA did not have the schools touch because the original plan had the old high school become a middle school.

Another general cause for concern is lack of space for parking.

"If there's one thing that drives me crazy, is that there's not enough parking when you go to places," said Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis.

"We've got this big building sitting there, and we don't know what we're going to do about parking," he said. "I'm talking about the wetlands. We had this vision that we were going to fill in the wetlands."

"We consider that a regulated space and we're staying out of it," said Thomas A. Erickson, vice president of Tishman.

Noriko Miyakoda Hall, vice president of Tishman, said there will be surface parking, but Erickson said that parking for faculty may be built under the school in an area designed to protect the building from flooding. "If there is a desire and will for more parking, there is space to do it," he said.

She said the number of parking spaces will be determined by whether there's bus transportation available, and whether seniors will be parking their vehicles in school parking.

According to the MSBA, other communities that have given bids for new high schools are Lawrence, King Philip (Norfolk), Everett, Swampscott, Chicopee Comprehensive, Somerville Lincoln Park Elementary, and Newton North.

A Job Well Done

On June 14, at approximately 11:10 a.m., Officer Michael Duran was dispatched to the area of School and Summer streets on a report of a "Disorder in Progress." Officers Daniel Francis, Michael Brandolini and Paul Jackson also responded.

LT. DAN MINTON

Upon arrival, the officers met with a woman standing outside of her vehicle, occupied by three young children. The vehicle had a shattered windshield. It was quickly determined this was a domestic violence incident.

While Officers Francis and Jackson interviewed the woman, Officer Duran joined Officer Brandolini as he questioned the woman's boyfriend, observing he was visibly shaken. The boyfriend told the officers they were arguing over money when they left their residence and he chose to walk rather than ride with his girlfriend. He stated she drove parallel to him from Federal Avenue to the area of St. John's Church, arguing the entire time through the open passenger side window.

According to his statement, while walking eastbound on School Street onto the crosswalk at Summer Street, his girlfriend accelerated and turned from School Street and intentionally struck him, sending him over the hood and onto the ground. The boyfriend said he was so angry he got up and punched the right side of the windshield, shattering the glass.

Officer Duran interviewed a witness, who called the police and verified what the boyfriend had told the officers. He questioned the woman about the incident and she stated they were arguing and he go so mad he punched the windshield. She denied striking him with the car.

Officer Duran examined the vehicle for physical evidence and found two fresh hand prints on the hood, consistent with where the boyfriend stated he was struck. Fallon Ambulance examined the boyfriend but he refused medical treatment.

Detectives Paul Pieper and Jim Lencki arrived on scene and transported the children, ages 8, 5 and 1, to another family member for their safety. Once they were out of sight, Officer Duran informed the woman, a 28-year-old Quincy resident, she was under arrest for "Assault with Intent to Kill," "Negligent Operation of a Motor Vehicle as to Endanger" and "Failure to Stop for Pedestrian in Crosswalk."

The boyfriend was advised of his rights as a victim of domestic violence, but did not want to seek a restraining order. A domestic violence report and a "51A" report to DSS were filed, to be followed up by the Quincy Police Special Investigations Unit. Nice work!

UPDATE: Regarding the lost child case, which resulted in the investigation of child neglect and two children being removed from their home, Officer Lauren Lambert informed me the Department of Social Services held an emergency 72-hour hearing at Stoughton District Court.

During this hearing, excerpts from her extensive report were read and photographs taken of the apartment's filth and of the children's conditions were provided to the judge. Present in the courtroom were the children's fraternal and maternal grandmothers, who had both traveled from England.

The presiding judge gave custody to the maternal grandmother, who stated she would take the children with her back to England.

Maintaining Floors Doesn't Have To Be A Monumental Task

By JOANNE LIEBELER

(NAPS) Pity your poor floors. They're trod upon, stomped on and usually neglected. A clean, glossy floor can actually improve the appearance of an entire room. Fortunately maintaining and revitalizing your floors doesn't have to be a monumental task for time-starved homeowners. Here are some tips to keep your floors looking great:

Hardwood Floors

According to the Hardwood Information Center, hardwood flooring can add as much as $10,000 to the resale value of a home, so it pays to take care of hardwood flooring. You can do that by using a little common sense around the house.

Try not to wear high heels or boots on your hardwood floors and be sure to clean up spills as soon as they happen. If you have hardwood in the kitchen, it's a good idea to keep area rugs in front of the sink and other areas where the floors tend to get wet.

To care for hardwood floors, use a product such as the Orange Glo Hardwood Floor Care System. The Orange Glo System cleans, shines and protects against scratches, wear and tear on your hardwood floors. The cleaner cleans floors without leaving a residue, while the Refinisher restores shine and leaves a protective coat.

Other Hard Surface Floors

Laminate flooring has been growing in popularity and more than 70 percent of Americans have at least some vinyl flooring in their homes. If you're like most people, you have a number of different hard flooring surfaces in your house.

For these types of floors, it is important to keep them clean, but you can also add a protective shine to boost their appearance. A product like Orange Glo's Laminate, Vinyl & Linoleum Revita-Shine adds a protective shine layer to dull floors.

Regardless of how you care for your floors, keep one final point in mind: Floors are often the focal point of a room, yet they take the most abuse. Your floors deserve better and treating them well could pay off in a number of ways.

For 15 years, Ms. Liebeler has shown do-it-yourselfers how to fix, design and improve their homes through television shows such as TLC's "Home Savvy" and PBS "Hometime." She's built a reputation as a hands-on, do-it-yourself host.

The Home Doctor Is In

(NAPS) The Home Doctor has some answers to building questions.

Q: A recent storm wreaked havoc on my roof and I'm now facing a roof replacement project for the first time. What should I know about shingles before diving into the reroof with my contractor?

A: Before I answer your question, I want to be sure you're working with a reputable contractor. Ask your roofer if he has insurance and get a written estimate for the work. It's a good idea to ask for a couple of references to follow up on in advance of signing a contract. The Better Business Bureau can also alert you to any complaints that have been filed against the company.

Once you are comfortable with the contractor, it's time to investigate shingle options. Interestingly, I've found that contractors will frequently recommend a shingle identical to the one they are replacing. There are so many new options in roofing that you'd be remiss not to investigate. From dramatic color blends to high-end "luxury" looks and outstanding warranty terms, make sure your contractor gives you a number of choices.

For most homeowners, I recommend asphalt roofing versus slate or wood. Generally, the more traditional materials are more costly and require a significant amount of upkeep over time. Asphalt shingles tend to endure the elements much better and some even come with impact-resistant features. They are more affordable in upfront costs. Plus, new styles of luxury asphalt shingles replicate the look of wood or slate with a likeness and affordability that are hard to beat.

As far as finding a quality shingle, CertainTeed has built a good reputation with its extensive line of asphalt shingles. This is the company that pioneered the increasingly popular multi-layer shingle and is known for its innovative design and bold shingle color choices, such as variegated reds, blues and greens. When investigating shingle styles, their website is a good place to start.

The style of a home and the owner's personal preference will determine the appropriate shingle for the home. For a roof built of high-quality materials and a dramatic, statement-making look, it may be worth looking at CertainTeed's new Centennial Slate or Landmark TL Ultimate® luxury shingles. The former has a look of true blended slate, the latter is a wood-shake style. Both luxury shingles come with outstanding warranties and use color and layers to capture authentic style.

For more information, visit www.certainteed.com or call 800-782-8777.

Save Energy This Summer — And Beyond

By Amy Anderson

These tips could save you hundreds of dollars this summer. Why not try a few of them in your home?

• Caulk and weather-strip around windows and doors that leak air. As Dad used to say, "We aren't paying to air-condition the outdoors!"

• Use the microwave. Smaller portions are cooked more efficiently in the microwave, and the bonus is that its use doesn't heat the kitchen like an oven would.

• Run a ceiling fan in rooms you are in. By turning the thermostat two degrees higher and using your ceiling fan to feel cooler, you can save up to 14 percent on your summer power bill. Be sure to run the blades counterclockwise (down) in the summer, and opposite in the winter.

• Invest in a light-sensing and/or motion-sensing porch light to save on energy costs. These types of fixtures turn outdoor lights off when the sun comes up or on when motion is detected in the area of the lamp, meaning you don't have to leave a light on or remember to turn it off.

• Replace light bulbs in the five most-used light fixtures in your home with Energy Star-rated bulbs. It can save you more than $60 a year in energy use.

• Unplug battery chargers or power adapters that aren't in use.

• When cooking, use the size pot that fits the burner, or the burner that is the best size for the pot. "A 6-inch pot on an 8-inch burner wastes over 40 percent of the burner's heat," according to the Environmental Protection Agency.

• Another fact from the EPA: A sink leaking hot water at "a rate of 1 drip per second can waste up to 1,661 gallons of water over the course of a year, and waste up to $35 in electricity or natural gas." Not only are you paying for the water, but you're paying to heat it, so why waste it?

• Turn off office equipment that's not in use, like fax machines, copiers, printers and scanners. Turn off your computer monitor when you are not working at your desk.

• If you have a fireplace, close the flue damper tightly when not in use.

• Check your floor vents and air registers to make sure that air can circulate unimpeded by furniture or floor coverings. Change or clean your air filter monthly.

• According to ENERGYSTAR.gov, "Leaving your car at home just two days a week will save 1,590 pounds of greenhouse gas emissions each year." Not to mention the gas you'll save and the cost of wear and tear on your vehicle. Proper tire pressure can save gallons as well.

• Today's dishwashers don't require you to clean your dishes before loading. Scrape food off and save water. Run dishwashers with a full load.

• Whenever possible, use cold water to wash your clothes. Wash full loads, and if you have a moisture-sensing setting on your dryer, use it. Clean the lint trap on your dryer after every use.

• Setting your water heater's thermostat to 120 F. or lower can both reduce energy costs and help prevent accidental scalding in the bath.

Bows To Weymouth, Braintree

Setback For Morrisette

Legion Baseball

By CHRIS POISSON

The Morrisette American Legion baseball team hit a bump in the road last week after cruising through the first week of the season.

Morrisette suffered an 11-4 setback at Weymouth last Monday and dropped a 12-6 decision at Braintree last Thursday as the defense made a combined 10 errors leading to 16 unearned runs.

Maybe the rain last weekend washed those mistakes away as last Friday's Canton game and Sunday's Quincy rematch were postponed.

Morrisette (4-3) will try to get back on course this week. It played Braintree Monday and Hyde Park Tuesday and will travel to Stoughton Friday at 5:45 p.m. and host Holbrook Saturday and Cohasset Sunday, both at 7:30 p.m.

In the Braintree game, Brian Sullivan allowed four earned runs on nine hits in 5 1/3 innings as the defense made a handful of errors. Jon Pelletier closed out the game with shutout ball.

Braintree built a 9-0 lead before Morrisette pushed across three runs in the fourth inning. Steve Sullivan reached on an infield error and Matt Haskins singled before Pelletier ripped an RBI double.

Rick Salvucci followed with a two-run single, getting caught in a rundown between first and second base to enable Pelletier to score the third run of the frame.

Morrisette made it 9-4 with an unearned run in the fifth. Joe Vialpando singled, moved to second on a passed ball and scored when Joe Garland reached on an infield error.

Braintree extended its lead to 12-4 with a three-run sixth. Morrisette added a pair in the bottom half to close out the scoring. Pelletier doubled and scored on Salvucci's single. With two outs, Vialpando singled and crossed home on Ray Marchand's single.

Against Weymouth, Morrisette grabbed a 1-0 lead in the second when Salvucci singled home Steve Sullivan (double). Weymouth quickly answered with a run in the bottom half.

But Morrisette took a 4-1 lead in the third when Vialpando, Marchand, Garland and Brian Sullivan hit consecutive singles to plate two runs and Steve Sullivan reached on error allowing Garland to score the third run.

Weymouth chipped away with a run in the third and two in the fourth to tie the game at 4-4. It took a 5-4 lead in the fifth inning and then scored six unearned runs in the sixth to run away with the victory.

Steve Connolly pitched the first 4 1/3 innings, allowing three earned runs on six hits and a walk. Haskins pitched in relief, giving up six hits and six unearned runs as the defense made three errors behind him.

RUNNERS AWAIT the start of Point Webster's fourth annual Great Race.

TAKING SOME HEAT

One of the most common causes of engine overheating is thermostat failure. If the thermostat doesn't open to allow coolant to circulate through the engine, drivers will find themselves stopped on the side of the road in very short order. Thermostat failure can be mechanical in nature, or it may stem from coolant loss. If the upper radiator hose doesn't become hot to the touch within minutes of the engine having been started, it is an indication that the thermostat is defective and needs to be replaced. The replacement thermostat must have the same operating temperature as the original so that the computerized engine controls can continue to properly maintain the operation of the fuel, ignition, and emissions control systems.

Engine overheating can lead to permanent engine damage. To avoid costly repairs later, bring your car to LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO to have any potential problems averted. Located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, we guarantee any work done to your car. Don't let your car's engine overheat! If you have any questions please call 781-843-1550. And remember, we are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles.

HINT: All coolant hoses should be inspected at least annually.

Andrew Paine To Compete In Junior Olympics

Andrew Paine, son of Donna and Michael Paine of Quincy, is a member of the Beantown Volleyball 16's Team that will compete in the Junior Olympics in July in Minneapolis, Minn.

The team, comprised of nine other boys from the Boston area, metro west and Rhode Island, made volleyball history by becoming the first New England team ever to qualify for the Open National Tournament. The Open Division includes the best 36 teams in the country for its age group.

Paine is a sophomore at Quincy High School and has played two years of varsity volleyball for coach Ed Smith. He was voted a league all-star as well as being selected as one of the captains this past season.

He played for Beantown, a non-profit volleyball club for middle school and high school boys, for four years. This past year, his team won the Northeast Regional 17's championship competing as a 16-and-under team.

Academically, Paine has made distinction every term and was recently inducted into the QHS National Honor Society. He is also a member of the QHS Math Club and assists the QHS girls' volleyball team.

The costs of Nationals, including travel, hotel and entry fee, is expensive. Any contributions (tax deduction number 043167733) to help offset expenses would be appreciated by the family. Make checks payable to Beantown Volleyball and send to Andrew Paine, 38 Pelican Road, Quincy, MA 02169.

Quincy Legion Edged By Holbrook

The Quincy American Legion baseball team came up a run short once again as it continues to search for its first victory of the season.

Quincy (0-8) suffered a 7-6 loss Monday night against Holbrook at Adams Field for its third straight one-run defeat and fourth of the season.

It fell to Weymouth, 9-8, last Wednesday and dropped a 5-4 decision to Cohasset the following day. Last Friday's game at Braintree and Sunday's showdown with Morrisette were postponed because of the rain.

Quincy, which played Cohasset Tuesday and Hyde Park Wednesday, will travel to Stoughton this Sunday at 5 p.m. and host Milton Monday at 8 p.m.

Babe Ruth International Baseball Highlights

Graeber, Davis & Cantwell exploded for 10 runs in the fourth inning to win its first playoff game, 13-3, over Marina Bay Skilled Nursing in recent Babe Ruth International league action at O'Rourke Field.

J.J. Downs, Lamonte Toombs, Pat Watkins and Paul Reardon each had a couple of hits to lead the offensive onslaught. Kevin Zagrodny mixed a fastball with an off-speed curve to gain the victory, striking out eight in seven innings. Reardon (catcher), Rich Kurtzman and Myles Riddell played great defensive games.

For Marina Bay, Paul Carson, Diego Arredondo, Brian O'Connell and Chris Mariano all had hits and O'Connell, Eddie Oldham and Elvin Nunez played strong defense.

In other action:

Corner Crew 7
Infinity Mortgage 2

Will Head struck out 10 and allowed three hits in a complete-game performance to lead Corner Crew to its first playoff victory. It was a team effort as 10 players had at least one hit, including Tom Pettiti, James Lupo, Owen Kilcullen, Greg McDouglas, Ben Sticco and Brian Kilcullen. Steve Santana, Dave Hennessey and Head each had two hits.

Steve Barressi and Pettiti held down the defense. Coach Don Davidson called the game the best effort his team has given all year, just in time for the playoffs.

For Infinity Mortgage, Ryan Keany pitched seven strong innings and also added a hit. Kevin Mullarkey, Matt Brean, Danny Diggins and Max Devoe played well.

Comm. Builders 14
Braintree Moose 10

Rob Krueger struck out nine to lead Commonwealth Builders to a playoff win. Ben Leahy earned the save with 2 2/3 innings of relief. Catcher Joe Madden played well while Billy Ahern, Ryan Bulger and Jonathan Mullin contributed both offensively and defensively.

For the Moose, Anthony DiPalmo settled down after a six-run first inning, allowing only three more earned runs while striking out 12 in a complete-game effort. He added two doubles and two stolen bases.

Joe Benoit smacked two bases-loaded doubles to amass six RBI. Pat Ryan added three hits, three runs and an RBI while catcher Tim Gillis had a two-run single and played well behind the plate. The defense was sparked by Jared Martin, who never fails to back up the correct base.

Braintree Moose 8
State St. Global 2

Sean McDonald led the Moose to its first playoff win with 10 strikeouts in seven innings and also added an RBI and run scored. Making great defensive plays were third baseman Mike Benoit (hit, RBI, run), shortstop Steve Anastasi (double) and Anthony DiPalmo (two hits, two runs).

John Morton, filling in at left field for the first time, hit the cutoff man every time and knocked in the go-ahead run by "taking one for the team" off the helmet with the bases loaded.

For State Street Global, Steve Shattuck pitched a great game. Catcher Steve Babcock played well defensively and had two of his team's four hits. Third baseman Chris MacDaniel and shortstop Kevin Therrian made strong plays in the field.

Spotlight On Health & Fitness

From Start To Fitness

by Andrea Wyatt M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

The Changing Face of Fitness

Q. I have been going to gyms for more than 20 years, and I am noticing fewer and fewer people who exercise like me (strength training — weight belt and all!) and more who are using bands, balls and other toys while in the gym. Also, many of the staff members have suggested that I try different exercises or complete the exercises I have done for years some other way. Why such a change in culture?

A. "If it ain't broke, don't fix it," right? I'm sure you've seen many changes in the culture of your fitness facility over the years. What you have witnessed is the evolution of the fitness industry from a more recreational and body-building foundation to a more scientific one.

The reasons you've been seeing a change include more educated fitness instructors, increased research within the fitness industry, and recognition of the needs of the general population, which include more than just strength training.

The fitness industry has advanced in recent years, and as more research is completed, we find certain forms of exercise to be more beneficial and safe than others. You may find that certain exercises you have completed in the past have been modified to a safer version, or may have been found as a culprit for causing certain injuries.

For example, while weight belts were once very popular, their use today outside of bodybuilding is discouraged. Research suggests that the use of weight belts can inhibit development of the inner core muscles necessary to support the body on a regular basis.

Many fitness facilities are requiring their fitness professionals to have a four-year degree in addition to a nationally recognized certification, which has produced the most knowledgeable and educated staffs ever. These professionals often have backgrounds in related sports-science fields such as athletic training, physical therapy, exercise physiology and nutrition, and have brought this knowledge to their fitness facilities.

The change in American culture has also carried over to the fitness industry. There are more obese, sedentary and inactive people than ever before, which has produced an extreme increase in medical conditions such as lower back, neck and spinal injuries, diabetes, postural distortions and muscular compensations that keep many in pain on a daily basis. The fitness industry has recognized this and has begun training and educating the public on how to prevent or help improve these conditions.

Not everything in the fitness industry is new. There are plenty of forms of exercise that have stayed pretty true to their original form, with a few changes to appeal to a broader market. Currently, yoga and other mind/body type classes are extremely popular and have been packaged to attract even the most unlikely of participants, such as competitive athletes, both male and female.

Dentistry for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

PREHISTORIC DENTISTRY

The first mention of dentistry, according to the American Dental Association, comes from an ancient Sumerian text (5,000 B.C.), which identified "tooth worms" as the cause of dental decay. At the time, mention was made of a doctor, who "deal(t) with teeth." Now, scientists have uncovered evidence that dentistry goes back almost 9,000 years. In Pakistan, archeologists uncovered teeth with precisely drilled holes. Because the teeth were molars, which were not given to decoration, scientists believe the holes were drilled to remove decay. Examination of the holes with an electron microscope shows that they were drilled by rotating a rod (with a stone tip) vigorously between the palms of the dentist. Any filling material has been lost to the ages.

A smile is one of our greatest personal assets. It expresses who we are and how we feel about ourselves. Yet many people avoid smiling because they are concerned about the condition of their teeth. Many times we underestimate the value of investing in improving our smile. We emphasize preventive, functional, and cosmetic dental care. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. You are important to us as a person – not just a patient. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are currently accepting new patients. Let us help you smile with confidence. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. A tooth with a precisely drilled hole found in a Colorado burial site dating back 1,000 years is the only evidence of early dentistry in this country.

Beechwood's 'Beat The Heat' Tips

Beechwood on the Bay is offering seniors its air-conditioned Senior Center, especially for those at risk when the temperature soars.

"Our drop-in center is cool and welcoming," said Coordinator Maryann Mahony. "Quincy seniors are invited to stop by to participate in some or all of our summer activities."

The center, located at 440 East Squantum St., opens at 7:30 a.m. and closes at 5:30 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. On Tuesdays and Thursdays, the center has evening programs until 9 p.m. To check on the "cooling center" hours, call Mahony at 617-471-5712.

"Air conditioning is the No. 1 protective factor against heat-related illness and death," according to the Department of Health and Human Services. "If a home is not air-conditioned, people can reduce their risk of heat-related illness by spending time in centers or facilities that are air-conditioned."

Heat waves contribute to the deaths of elderly people because their air conditioner has broken, because they simple don't have cool air circulating in their homes or because they over exert when temps are high.

Heat-related illnesses can mean permanent disability or death. Following proper precautionary measures, however, will help keep seniors out of harm's way.

Top 10 tips to keep seniors safe in the summer:

- Drink plenty of liquids — eight or more 8-ounce glasses and/or fruit juices — every day to stay hydrated. Encourage people to drink frequently throughout the day by having water visibly available and people/systems in place for them to drink.
- Avoid caffeinated and alcoholic beverages. These are diuretics and can cause dehydration.
- Dress appropriately. Wear loose-fitting clothes in natural-like cotton. These will breathe easier than synthetic fabrics such as polyester. Also dress in light colors that will reflect the heat instead of darker colors that will attract them.
- When outdoors, protect your skin from damage by wearing sunglasses and a sunscreen of 30 SPF or more.
- Stay indoors during extreme heat. Avoid the outdoors during extremely hot days and/or during the hottest part of the late afternoon. A room with air conditioning is best.
- If you do no have air conditioning in your apartment, go somewhere that does. A movie theater, the mall, a friend's or relative's home or your community senior center are all good places to go.
- If you need to get out of the house and don't drive a car, take a taxi, call a friend or take a transportation service. Do not wait outside for the bus in extreme heat.
- If you are absolutely unable to leave the house and do not have air conditioning, take a cool bath or shower to lower your body temperature on extremely hot days.
- Temperatures inside the home should not exceed 85 degrees Fahrenheit for prolonged periods of time. Activities should be reduced when temps are 80 degrees or above.
- Know the signs of heat stroke and take immediate action when you feel them coming on. Signs include flushed face, high body temperature, headache, nausea, rapid pulse, dizziness and confusion.

Imaging Procedures In Health Care

(NAPS) More and more medical advances are cutting down on cutting people open. Improved imaging procedures make diagnostic and even surgical procedures less invasive.

Medical imaging enables a range of less-invasive, highly targeted medical therapies that translate into better and more comfortable care for patients. Because they are less invasive, these treatments mean fewer complications, shorter hospital stays and, in many cases, no incisions or surgery.

Many renowned medical experts believe that without imaging to guide diagnosis and treatment, patient safety would be compromised and quality of care diminished.

Doctors have long used surgery for diagnostic as well as therapeutic purposes, looking inside a patient to see what's causing his or her symptoms. Now, improved imaging procedures mean this is often unnecessary, saving patients discomfort, time and money. Here are some of the ways imaging has improved health care:

- Image-guided biopsies allow doctors to remove a small piece of tissue for testing through a tiny incision, while still being able to see exactly what they're doing.
- CT scans can reduce the need for invasive procedures and additional imaging tests in helping physicians diagnose pulmonary embolism.
- Microcoil stents are used to repair bran aneurysms, reducing a patient's chance of death by almost a quarter. Placing stents would be impossible without the use of video X-ray imaging technology.
- The preferred therapy for reopening blocked arteries and permitting blood flow to the heart is a procedure called coronary angioplasty. Again, only through the use of imaging technology can doctors see where the blockage is and how to get there.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

As we approach the Fourth of July it is well to be reminded that the nationhood we celebrate did not spring full blown with the mere Declaration of Independence from the tyranny of the day.

The prize of freedom came only by reason of firm actions taken by many individuals acting singly and collectively over an extended period before and after the Declaration of Independence on July 4, 1776. This is the tradition of resolute purpose on which the United States of America was founded and has been maintained.

"Let every nation know, whether it wishes us well or ill, that we shall pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship, support any friend, oppose any foe, in order to assure the survival and the success of liberty." – John F. Kennedy.

Let us join together on July 4, 2006, in honoring America by rededicating ourselves to the principles of the founders and showing the same resolute purpose that the late President Kennedy articulated for a latter day. The need continues. We cannot rest on the laurels of past accomplishments.

Wayne Cushing Receives Award From Mass. Assisted Living Facilities Association

Quincy resident Wayne Cushing, resident services assistant of Allerton House Assisted Living Community at Central Park in Weymouth, recently received a Program Innovation Award from the Massachusetts Assisted Living Facilities Association.

Cushing was honored for the development of a Traveling Basketball League for the assisted living residents.

The award was presented at the 12th Annual Mass-ALFA dinner in Burlington.

QUINCY RESIDENT Wayne Cushing, resident services assistant, Allerton House Assisted Living Community in Weymouth, recently received a Program Innovation Award from the Massachusetts Assisted Living Facilities Association.

Cushing, who has been in his role for three years, often asks, "How many 80- year-olds do you know who are on a traveling basketball team?""

At the Allerton House communities, owned and managed by Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group, the answer is, quite a few.

Allerton House residents, some of whom have never played basketball before, practice weekly on their shooting and rebounding skills. Bi-monthly tournaments are held at the Allerton sister communities in Quincy, Hingham, and Duxbury, where the teams battle for bragging rights as winners, and the team trophy.

Each community sport team shirts, which they proudly wear to the games as the other residents and spectators cheer on their favorite team.

"Wayne took this idea, that residents in good health at almost any age, could benefit from the exercise and camaraderie that would come from a traveling basketball team," said Paul Casale, Jr., executive director of Allerton House at Central Park.

"The residents and communities benefit from this program because it helps to form a close bond between everyone involved," added Lynn Sullivan, director of resident services, Allerton House at Central Park.

Casale says that Cushing's love of fitness and athletics along with his dedication to the residents has also resulted in a traveling golf league. The winning team displays the trophy and photos in a main lobby for family and friends to view.

Allerton House at Central Park is an assisted living community with 70-apartment homes on 43 School House Rd. in Weymouth.

Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group also owns and manages the Hancock Park Rehabilitation & Nursing Center and the Allerton House at Hancock Park in Quincy.

QUINCY RESIDENT Fran McDonald played the role of a mock accident victim during the emergency preparedness exercise and is loaded into an ambulance by staff from Fallon Ambulance Services.

MAUREEN ELDREDG, a resident of 1000 Southern Artery who volunteered to serve as a mock accident victim during the emergency preparedness exercise, is interviewed by Quincy Medical Center Emergency Department Nurse Therese Stephens, RN, during the emergency preparedness exercise.

Preparing For Unthinkable Disasters:

QMC, Fallon Host Emergency Preparedness Exercise

Furthering emergency preparedness efforts in the City of Quincy, Quincy Medical Center and Fallon Ambulance Services recently organized a morning-long disaster training exercise.

"While it is hard to ignore the sensationalized television coverage surrounding worst case scenarios of pandemic flu, avian flu, and small pox, it is important for South Shore residents to know that Quincy Medical Center is constantly reviewing and adjusting our emergency preparedness planning to ensure that this hospital is equipped and ready – even in the most dire of circumstances," said Dr. Gary Gibbons, Quincy Medical Center President and CEO.

The fictitious emergency situation involved a rapidly escalating tropical depression that caused a 38-foot pleasure boat to capsize in Quincy Harbor during a breakfast cruise attended by several South Shore senior citizens. The accident results in more than 12 mock accident victims rushed by Fallon Ambulance Services to the Emergency Department at Quincy Medical Center.

In addition, several elderly patients who were not directly involved in boating accident visited the hospital to express concern for the victims and seek treatment for symptoms including heart palpitations and psychological concerns.

The near hurricane weather conditions were designed to add additional stress to the system. The plan forecasted that the City of Quincy would lose electrical power due to the storm, causing the hospital to launch its temporary generator power and manage additional flow of patients seeking refuge from the storm. The storm condition would prohibit QMC from calling in additional staff to accommodate the rapid influx of patients.

Besides Quincy Medical Center and Fallon Ambulance Service personnel, several residents of the 1000 Southern Artery senior complex were actively involved in the drill – playing the critical role of accident victims, "worried, but well" visitors to the hospital, and family members.

Following the exercise, the hospital hosted a debriefing with representatives from each of the hospital's department and patient care areas reporting on their actions and experiences during the morning's events.

"Quincy Medical Center is focused on our emergency preparedness efforts, every day. We continually participate in disaster preparedness trainings and collaborate with Fallon Ambulance Service, our city and state government agencies, and our healthcare peers in Boston and the South Shore to ensure that this community is prepared in the event of a large scale emergency situation," said Mark Dutra, Director of Safety and Security at Quincy Medical Center.

Quincy Medical Center (www.quincymc.org) is a 232-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community. At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, emergency medicine, and psychiatry. Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work with community physicians to ensure the continuity of patient care.

A Special Supplement The Quincy Sun Thursday, June 29, 2006

City of Quincy, Massachusetts
Office of the Mayor

Welcome to Historic Quincy!

Quincy has played a unique role in the formation of our great country–and we continue to play that role today! The Massachusetts Declaration of Rights, the model for the United States Constitution, was drafted in our historic city by John Adams, the second president of the United States and father to John Quincy Adams, our country's sixth president. Patriots, statesmen and women of science and of letters–Quincy has nurtured many of the seminal figures that brought our nation to greatness.

I encourage you to use this fine publication as a guide to historic Quincy. Visit the Adams National Historical Park and the presidential homesteads. Stop by the "Old House" and experience the colonial lifestyle. Tour United First Parish Church, which serves as the final resting place for John, John Quincy, Abigail, and Louisa Catherine Adams. Live the history of our City and of our nation.

Don't neglect to enjoy what Quincy has to offer today. Quincy is nestled between the Blue Hills Reservation and the Atlantic Ocean. Enjoy our twenty-seven miles of coastland, natural salt marshes and magnificent parklands. Explore our downtown, watch our outdoor concerts, play golf, or enjoy Quincy's booming restaurant scene. There is something for everyone to enjoy.

We are proud of Quincy and hope that you have the opportunity to experience all that our historical and cosmopolitan City has to offer.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM J. PHELAN
MAYOR

First Father And Son Presidents

Birthplace Of John And John Quincy Adams

By TOM HENSHAW

It was the North Precinct of Braintree then, a sprawling tract of woods and farmlands on the gently rolling hills some 10 miles south of the Boston Stone along the winding Coast Road to Plymouth.

Something less than 1,500 people lived in the North, Middle and South Precincts of Braintree in the year 1735 and two of them were Deacon John Adams, 44, farmer and cordwainer, and his wife, Susanna, 26.

Their home was a weathered gray farmhouse with a high peaked roof and attached lean-to kitchen set on seven acres of farmland at roughly Milepost 11 of the Coast Road, just where it turned up the wooded slopes of Penn's Hill toward the Monatiquot River ford.

He was a pillar of his rural community. Mr. Adams was a deacon in the First Parish Church, a lieutenant in the Braintree militia and a town constable with a forceful personality and tact that enabled him to collect taxes from his neighbors.

He was a hard-working farmer whose cider was acknowledged best in town, he worked in leather during the winter months, and he had an eye on an adjoining piece of farmland, 9 1/2 acres owned by the Billings brothers, complete with a farmhouse similar to his own.

Susanna Adams was a Boylston of Brookline, socially a cut above her husband, and perhaps there were moments in the simple house at the foot of Penn's Hill when she thought of the home of her uncle, the noted Dr. Zabiel Boylston of Brookline, whose furniture came all the way from London.

Their first child, a son who was named John for his father, was born in the southeast bedroom of the farmhouse on Oct. 19, 1735. (Old Style). He would become the second president of the United States.

Deacon John purchased the house next door for 500 pounds in 1744 and it was ready 20 years later when young John moved in with his brand new bride, the former Abigail Smith, the preacher's sparkling daughter from the next town of Weymouth.

Their second child, a son who was named John Quincy Adams after his great-grandfather, Col. John Quincy. was born there on July 11, 1767. He would become the sixth president of the United States.

Until George W. Bush was sworn in as the 43rd president in 2001. John Adams and John Quincy Adams were the only father and son combination to achieve that office. George H. W. Bush was the 41st. The Harrisons, William Henry and Benjamin, were grandfather and grandson.

THE ADAMS BIRTHPLACES, where John Adams and his son, John Quincy Adams, the second and sixth Presidents of the United States, were born, is the only location in the country where two presidential birthplaces stand side-by-side. It is a National Historical Site under the supervision of the U.S. National Park Service. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble

The precise age of the two cottages at 133 and 141 Franklin St. at the foot of Penn's Hill is not known.

When the John Adams Birthplace was restored by the Daughters of the Revolution in 1897, a brick bearing the date 1661 was discovered under the southeast corner, and the house was known to have been occupied by one Joseph Penniman in that year.

And a man named Samuel Belcher was living in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace as early as 1663, when it was little more than a one-room shack with fireplace. It was built to its present size in 1716, as evidenced by a date brick found in the new fireplace.

According to Henry Adams, grandson of President John Quincy Adams, no member of the family lived in the cottages after 1818, although ownership remained in the Adams family until 1940.

Both houses were restored by the Adams Realty Trust, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace in 1896 at a cost of $1,650 and the John Adams Birthplace a year later at an expense of $515.49.

They were presented to the city of Quincy in 1940 and supervised by the Quincy Historical Society until they were turned over to the U.S. National Park Service in 1979.

The Adams Birthplaces at 133 and 141 Franklin St. are open daily, including Sundays and holidays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. from April 19 to Nov. 10 with guided tours. Admission is $5 for adults and children 16 and over, which also includes admission to the Adams Mansion within seven days. Park passes are available. Tours must be arranged at the Visitors' Center, 1250 Hancock St. The last full tour leaves the Visitors' Center at 3:15 p.m. Tours are on a first come, first serve basis.

After Faithful Restoration

Birthplaces Have 'As They Were' Look

The birthplace of John Adams, second president of the United States, looks like it did when he and his parents, Deacon John and Susanna lived there.

It took on that "as it was" look after a painstaking six-year reconstruction project in the 1980s.

Visitors to the John Adams Birthplace, which peers over the shoulder of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace on Franklin St., South Quincy, can now see more completely how the house looked.

The house is well-furnished and looks like it did when John and Abigail lived in it.

The final renovation touches were to the room where Deacon John Adams made shoes.

The rooms are furnished from the period of Deacon John and his wife and probably reflected her taste. They are furnished, not elaborately, but sufficiently to have a lived-in look.

The birthplace was probably built in the late 17th or early 18th Century for less than $1,000 in the pounds of the day and the clapboards were hand-hewn from trees that grew in its fields.

The pine clapboards of the John Adams Birthplace are unpainted and the U.S. National Park Service, which restored the house, insists that based on research the house will remain that way, despite the fact that John Adams was known to have preferred it white.

For more than 80 years they were the little red farmhouses at the foot of Penn's Hill. But research turned up the fact that Abigail Adams, the wife of the second president, wanted them "stone" and white in color.

Since what Abigail wanted, Abigail usually got, in the summer of 1980, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace was repainted to Abigail's taste, the "stone" color determined to be a sort of off-white, mixed especially for the occasion from a late 18th Century formula.

The John Adams Birthplace was painted white so that both houses would look as they did in 1807, the year the last Adams lived in them, but later research indicated it was unpainted.

The birthplaces, parts of which date back to the 17th Century, were taken over by the National Park Service on May 1, 1979 after years of semi-neglect due to lack of restoration and maintenance funds.

The John Quincy Adams Birthplace reopened in 1982 for the first time in three years after undergoing a $175,000 rehabilitation faithful to the lives of the prominent family that lived there.

If you close your eyes and give your imagination full rein you can see them now as they were more than 200 years ago.

There is Abigail Adams in the new pink gingham dress. There is the curly-haired infant, Thomas Boylston Adams, bouncing on his father's knee. And there is John Adams, home from the Continental Congress in Philadelphia for the first time in a year, sitting at the table and drinking a cup of tea.

JOHN ADAMS BIRTHPLACE (Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble)

The setting, right down to the pewter plates and candlesticks, is reproduced faithfully in the corner room of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace.

The furnishings of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace are precise reproductions of those that were in the house when the second president lived there. The originals are at the Old House, the Adams National Historic Site, from which they cannot be removed under the ownership agreement with the Adams family.

The most interesting room in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace is John Adams' old law office, in which the elder Adams, James Bowdoin and Samuel Adams drafted the Massachusetts State Constitution, on which the U.S. Constitution was modeled.

The law office is furnished pretty much as John Adams had it.

There is the hutch table on which he wrote the State Constitution; the bookcase filled with books that probably were there in John Adams' day, judging by an inventory of his law library; his old writing desk and two chairs that were copied from those in his second law office in Boston.

Pastels of Abigail and John, originally done in Salem, were photographically reproduced by photographer George Dow and now hang in Abigail's sitting room. The originals are in the possession of the Massachusetts Historical Society.

Abigail's old kitchen cabinet was discovered serving as a bookcase in the Old House.

The cabinet was reproduced and installed in the kitchen of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace along with copies of the blue china that John purchased when he was emissary to Holland.

The Adams Birthplaces are at 133 and 141 Franklin St. They are open daily, including Sundays and holidays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. from April 19 to Nov. 10 with guided tours. Admission is $5 for adults and children 16 and over, which also includes admission to the Adams Mansion within seven days. Park passes are available. Tours must be arranged at the Visitors' Center, 1250 Hancock St. Last full tour leaves Visitors' Center at 3:15 p.m. Tours are on a first come, first serve basis.

Descent from John & Priscilla

John Adams, the second president, can trace his ancestry back to John Alden and Priscilla Mullins of "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?" fame.

His grandfather, Joseph Adams, married Hannah Bass, daughter of John and Ruth (Alden) Bass and granddaughter of the Pilgrim couple John and Priscilla.

Adams's Crucial Nominations

John Adams, the farmer's son from Old Braintree, not only had a hand in writing the U. S. Constitution, but he made two nominations to posts that proved to be critical to the future of the new republic.

As a member of the Continental Congress, he eschewed intercolonial rivalries and nominated George Washington, a Virginia planter, as commander in chief of the Continental army.

As president, he nominated John Marshall as chief justice of the Supreme Court, where he served 34 years and established the basic principle that the court can invalidate an act of Congress.

Since the birth of our nation, people of Quincy have shaped American life. So much so, that the President and Congress of the United States have authorized the creation of a commemorative work along the Mall in Washington, D.C. to honor John Adams and his distinguished family. With the aid and inspiration of David McCullough, Pulitzer Prize winning author of John Adams, the Adams legacy will soon be forever celebrated in our nation's capital alongside the likes of Washington, Jefferson, and Lincoln.

From the Revolutionary War to the 21st century, Quincy residents have left their mark on our nation's governmental, business, and philanthropic institutions.

Today, as our community richly invests in education, revitalizes its downtown, and embraces the natural wonder of our 27-mile shoreline, the City of Presidents has as much to look forward to as it does to be thankful for!

On behalf of the Quincy City Council, I encourage you to visit our great city and experience our historic sites, fine restaurants and shops, and natural treasures — and see why our residents are proud to call Quincy home as were two Presidents.

'The Old House'

Summer White House And Home Of 2 Presidents

Josiah Quincy, the one who built railroads around New England and founded the cooperative bank movement in Massachusetts, was in his boyhood a frequent visitor to the mansion where John Adams, the second president of the United States, lived in retirement.

Later, he wrote with wry amusement about Sunday dinner with the aging patriarch of the Adams clan and his wife, Abigail, a dinner that inevitably began with a thick pudding made from boiled corn meal.

"...it being thought desirable to take the edge off one's hunger before reaching the joint," wrote Quincy.

"Indeed, it was considered wise to stimulate the young to fill themselves with pudding, by the assurance that the boy who managed to eat the most of it should be helped most abundantly to the meat, which was to follow.

"It need not be said that neither the winner nor his competitors found much room for meat at the close of their contest, and so the domestic economy of the arrangement was very apparent."

Quincy, as a young Harvard law student, stopped by several times a week in summer to talk and read to the former President. He found the visits delightful. Indeed, the Adams of the cold and austere public mien was never more relaxed than he was at his country home in Quincy.

The original house, a small part of the present building, was built probably in 1731 by Major Leonard Vassall, a wealthy West Indian sugar planter who lived in Cambridge and apparently used it for a summer place.

His daughter, Mrs. Anna Borland, who was a Loyalist during the Revolution, abandoned the house to leave with the British forces when they evacuated Boston in 1776. For a while it was used as a haven for rebel refugees fleeing the war zones.

Mrs. Borland returned to reclaim the house after the Revolution and John Adams, then in Europe as the first American ambassador to London, purchased it for 600 pounds through the good offices of the Cotton Tuffs of Weymouth, his wife Abigail's cousin.

The Adamses were about to return to the United States after seven years abroad and Abigail was concerned that John's books and papers and the furnishings they had acquired in Europe would not fit into their old farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill where they lived before.

The deal was closed on Sept. 26, 1787, and the deed is still on file in the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in which the Adams purchase is specified as a house, barn and other buildings on seven acres of land with some 76 acres more scattered around the North Precinct if Braintree.

There are indications that Abigail was first disappointed with her purchase. It was a lot smaller than she remembered it.

"In height and breadth it feels like a wren's house," she wrote to her daughter, Abigail, the wife of Col. William S. Smith, "Let Col. Smith come without heels to his shoes or he will not be able to walk upright."

Abigail and John Adams moved into the house, which they named "Peacefield," after his retirement from the presidency in 1801 and lived there until they died.

It was from the "Old House," as the family called it, that John Adams carried on his long and increasingly warm correspondence with his old rival, Thomas Jefferson of Virginia, who had succeeded him in the presidency. In retirement, they became firm friends as they outlasted their contemporaries.

"Thomas Jefferson lives," whispered John Adams as he lay dying in the Old House. He was wrong. Jefferson, in far away Monticello, Va., had preceded him in death by a few hours on the same day.

It was July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

The Old House which served as summer White House for two presidents, was home to four generations of the Adams family, the last, Brooks Adams, dying in February, 1927. It was taken over by the U.S. National Park Service in 1946 to become the Adams Mansion National Historic Site.

The site at 135 Adams St. is open from April 19 to Nov. 10 daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The last full tour is at 4 p.m. Admission is $5 for adults and youth 16 and over, and includes admission to the Adams Birthplaces within seven days. First Wife, Mother Of Presidents

Advocate Abigail Adams: 'Remember The Ladies'

What do Barbara Bush and Abigail Adams have in common?

Both are noted for being the wife of one president and the mother of another.

Barbara's husband, George H. W., was the 41st president from 1989 to 1993 and her son, George W., is the 43rd president who moved into the White House in 2001 and is still there.

Abigail's husband, John, was the second president from 1797 to 1801 and her son, John Quincy, the sixth president from 1825 to 1829.

And her grandson, Charles Francis Adams, ran unsuccessfully for vice president on the Free Soil ticket in 1848.

Their husbands share another distinction, too. John was born in the section of Braintree now known as Quincy. George H. W. was born in Milton, the next town over.

But this is Abigail's story . . .

ABIGAIL ADAMS

An early advocate of women's rights, the former Abigail Smith wrote to her husband, John, who was in Philadelphia helping his fellow Founding Fathers hammer out a Constitution for the new republic:

"In the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make, I desire you would remember the ladies and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors.

"Do not put such unlimited power into the hands of the husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could."

Sadly, unlike Barbara Bush, Abigail Adams did not live to see her son become president. She died in her 74th year, Oct. 28, 1818, seven years before he entered the White House.

Although she is traditionally remembered as the wife of one president and the mother of another, Abigail was more than that.

She was a remarkable woman in her own right and one ahead of her time.

Born in neighboring Weymouth Nov. 11, 1744, the daughter of the Rev. William Smith, a Congregational minister, and his wife, Elizabeth Quincy Smith, she had no formal schooling.

But through tutoring by her father and mother and reading, she became a well-known writer of letters that have served to chronicle American history.

She was a brave and resourceful woman, too. She was often left alone for long periods of time to care for her children and run the farm at the foot of Penn's Hill while her husband was away in the service of their fledgling country.

Early in their marriage, he was in France trying to develop strong ties with that country and she sailed to meet him in Paris. They had not seen one another in five years.

ABIGAIL ADAMS and her son, John Quincy Adams -- the future sixth President of the United States -- look out over Quincy Square from beside historic First Parish Church. The handsome bronze statue depicts her at about age 32 and him as a 10-year-old boy. It was commissioned by the Quincy Partnership and created by noted sculptor Lloyd Lillie. (Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth)

John and Abigail Adams were the first president and first lady to occupy the White House. When Adams took office, succeeding George Washington on March 4, 1797, Philadelphia was the nation's capital. John and Abigail moved into the White House in November, 1800. It was called the President's Palace at the time.

No fancy airs about her. She won a special spot in White House folklore by hanging her laundry in the East Room. She was just being practical. Many of the rooms had not been finished when they moved in and the East Room was one of the warmer ones, better for drying wet clothing.

John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, the man who succeeded him as president, were close friends who worked together to produce the precious Declaration of Independence. But they had a falling out and became political enemies.

When Jefferson defeated Adams in his bid for reelection to a second term, Adams was so bitter that he refused to stay in Washington for Jefferson's inauguration in 1801 and came home to Quincy.

Abigail became a peacemaker through letters to Jefferson and, thanks to her efforts, the two former presidents reconciled in their later years.

Both succumbed July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, Jefferson a few hours before Adams.

John and Abigail were married 54 years and it was a happy union despite frequent and long separations in the early years.

Abigail was the woman behind two men — a husband and son — who encouraged and helped them in their distinguished service to their country on their way to the Presidency.

She and her husband, son and daughter-in-law, Louisa Catherine, are entombed in the crypt in the United First Parish Church.

A bronze statue depicting Abigail at about age 32 and John Quincy at age 10 with her hand on his shoulder in a motherly touch, was erected in 1997 just a few feet away.

The very spot from which she now looks out onto Quincy Square is where she walked when the area was an open field.

A Mother's Advice

Abigail Adams had this motherly advice for her son, John Quincy Adams, the future sixth prresident, in a letter written to him when he was 10 years old and in Europe with his father, John Adams, who was on a diplomatic mission:

"Improve your understanding for acquiring usefull (sic) knowledge and virtue, such as will render you an ornament to society, an Honour to your Country, and a Blessing to Your parents.

Your affectionate Mother

A solid tradition of building strong kids, strong families, strong communities.

Bean suppers in the Auditorium after Family Swim. A circus featuring volunteer ringmaster, Delevare King, and the talents of young local gymnasts. The very popular Hi-Y Leaders Club. Elmer "Mike" Fagerlund remembers it all, spanning youth, teen years, and married life with a family.

He joined the Y in 1928 at the age of ten, when our building was located on Washington Street. Back then, the Y was for men and boys only. "You never heard of a bathing suit," he chuckles, remembering uninhibited early years in the old pint-sized pool. Mike's father was a Y member back then, too.

"Elmer wasn't a popular name at that time," he recalls. "In fact, it had some negative connotations. So when I came to the Y, some of the boys said, 'Hey, we'll call you Mike'," Elmer laughs, "and it's been Mike ever since."

Later, in the mid-1950s when Mike returned to the newly-built Y on Coddington Street with his wife, Norma, and children Deedee, Martha, and John, all three kids joined the swim team. They competed in Portland, Maine; Pawtucket, Rhode Island; and even Yale University, winning many awards.

"I think the greatest contribution that the Y has made is that it brought people from all over the area together," Mike says. Some examples include family swim times with past regular attendees Edward Rowe Snow (historian, writer) and Francis X. Bellotti (former Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts).

We're still on that mission. Bringing people from all over the area together to build strong kids, strong families, strong communities. Ask Mike's grandson, Eric, age 33. He has been both a member and Y staffer here, carrying on the family tradition along with his sisters, Amy and Justine.

We'd like to thank Mike and thousands of other Y families who keep the YMCA spirit alive every day. Together we're making history while building a better South Shore community.

United First Parish

Only Church Where Two Presidents Entombed

In 1949, when the present First Parish Church building, the Old Stone Temple, was 121 years old, it was ruled officially that the church is older than the city itself and the town before it.

It was then that the late historian William Churchill Edwards was called upon to resolve a minor dispute that involved the rounding of the corners of the church lot in downtown Quincy.

"Almost the first subject to which the minds of the early settlers of our country were turned after they landed here was the formation of a church," said Edwards.

The first church in these parts was established as a branch of the Church of Boston in 1636. It became a church in its own right in 1639. The Mount Wollaston section of Boston was incorporated as the town of Braintree on May 23, 1640. Ergo, the church came first!

Quincy's first house of worship, the branch of the Church of Boston, was called the "Chapel of Ease," and if it was neglected by early historians it was because its first pastor, the Rev. John Wheelwright, his sister-in-law, Anne Hutchinson, and others were banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony for heresy.

The new church, the one that lasted, was gathered by covenant on Sept. 26, 1639, and it was holding services in its third meeting house in 1732 when its pastor was the Rev. John Hancock, father of the bold first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Son John also was a member.

The affairs of the church and the town of Quincy were one and the same until 1824 when church and state were separated in Massachusetts and the Congregational Society was established to handle parochial matters.

The old Hancock meeting house was still standing, although a little run down, on the south lawn of the present church lot in 1822 when former President John Adams deeded the interest from certain of his lands and granite from his pastures to build a stone temple.

It was completed in Greek revival style at a cost of $30,488.56-which was some $3,000 less than architect Alexander Parrish's estimate-and dedicated Nov. 12, 1828, with John Quincy Adams, the sixth President of the United States holding Pew No. 1.

Even before the church was dedicated, the mortal remains of his benefactors, John and Abigail Adams, were transferred to tombs in the crypt of the church and, in 1852, the bodies of John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa, joined them.

It is the only church in the United States in which two Presidents are buried. The only other church in which a President is buried is the Episcopal Cathedral in Washington, D.C., where President Woodrow Wilson is entombed.

The church is open to the public for tours daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday, Sunday from 12 noon to 5 p.m., mid-April to mid-November. Admission is $4 for adults, $3 for students and senior citizens, and free for children 12 and under. For further information, call 617-773-0062.

Why We Pronounce It 'Quin-zee'

Why do we pronounce Quincy "Quin-zee" when just about everyone else in the country refers to it as "Quin-see?"

There are 19 other Quincys in the U.S., but they pronounce it "Quin-see."

Can they be right and we be wrong?

Not according to Quincy's late city historian, William C. Edwards, who never budged an inch whenever the argument ever came up. And it still comes up.

The reason we pronounce it "Quin-zee" is very simple.

"That's the way the Quincy family pronounced it," he used to explain.

"The original Quincy family which settled here at Mount Wollaston pronounced it 'Quin-zee,' including Col. John Quincy after whom Quincy, Mass.—the first Quincy—was named in 1792."

Colonel Quincy was the great grandfather of sixth President John Quincy Adams.

Apparently, all 19 other Quincys in the U.S. were named after John Quincy Adams.

And, apparently the early settlers of those communities thought John Quincy pronounced it John "Quin-see."

Anyway, that is how Edwards explained it.

Seems like a sound argument.

GENERAL DOUGLAS MacARTHUR in a visit to United First Parish Church July 25, 1951, placed flowers on the tombs of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, Abigail and Louisa Catherine. With him are Mrs. MacArthur, Mayor Thomas Burgin and City Historian William Edwards. While stopping by the Adams family pew in the church, MacArthur said: "I am certain that John Quincy Adams must have prayed in this pew for divine guidance before he wrote the Monroe Doctrine." Charles Flagg photo

Dorothy Quincy Homestead

John Hancock Signed 'Declaration Of Love' Here

An aura of romance surrounds the stately old house that is set back in the trees from the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road on the banks of Furnace Brook.

There is the wallpaper with the blue cupids and pink flowers that was imported from France for the wedding of Dorothy Quincy, the vivacious daughter of the house, to Quincy-born John Hancock, a patriot on the run with a price on his head.

There are the words "You I Love and You Alone," addressed by Hancock to his beloved Dorothy and scratched on a window pane with his diamond ring just before he fled to Lexington on the eve of the Revolution.

And there are the secret chambers and passageways, used, it was said, to hide fugitive patriots during the Revolution and at an earlier date, even certain Englishmen fleeing a charge of regicide in the death of King Charles I.

It is for those reasons, and its combined Colonial, Georgian and Victorian style, that the old house was elevated in 2005 to the status of a National Historic Landmark possessing "national significance in commemorating the history of the United States."

Parts of the house were built in 1685 by Col. Edmund Quincy, the second of the name, on land that was granted to an earlier Edmund in 1638. The major part was built in 1706 by Edmund the third. (There were six Edmunds in all, four in a direct line, two nephews).

The house was the social center of old Braintree during the regime of the fourth Edmund, largely because he sired five beautiful daughters around whom swirled a whole future generation of judges, generals and merchant kings.

The undisputed belle of the household was Dorothy, the coquettish youngest of the eight Quincy children,, whose troth was soon plighted to John Hancock, the wealthy young businessman from Boston who was already becoming known as a leader of the rebels.

Tradition has it that they were to have been married in the north parlor of the Quincy omestead with its French cupid wallpaper when Revolution intervened and John had to flee with the British regulars on his heels.

Ecentually, they were wed Aug. 28, 1775, at the home of Thaddeus Burr, uncle of Aaron Burr (later vice president of the United States and slayer of Alexander Hamilton in a duel) in Fairfield, Conn.

After the Revolution and the death of Edmund the fourth in 1788 the old house passed from the Quincy family. The Hancocks wanted nothing to do with it. Their only son, John George Washington Hancock, was killed in a skating accident at age 9 while on a visit in 1787.

The house was acquired in 1904 by the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames, who restored it with vintage furniture, utensils and clothing, and gave it to the state with the proviso that the Dames continue to run it.

Now that it is a National Historic Landmark, the next step for the Dorothy Quincy Homestead will be acceptance by the National Park Service as part of the Adams National Historical Park alongside the Adams Birthplaces and the Adams Mansion.

John Quincy Adams:

The Old Flame Still Burned

The old man's bitterness glowed from every word as he penned them in his diary on June 17, 1843, the day the Bunker Hill Monument was dedicated.

"What a name in the annals of mankind is Bunker Hill! What a day was the 17th of June, 1775! And what a burlesque upon them both is an oration upon them by Daniel Webster!"

The old man despised Webster as a turncoat to his own heritage, one whose compromises had sold out to slavery.

"The ideal associations thundering cannon, which I heard, and the smoke of burning Charlestown, which I saw, on that awful day .. How could I have witnessed all this at once, without an unbecoming burst of indignation.

"Daniel Webster is a heartless traitor to the cause of freedom; John Tyler [the President] is a slave-monger. What have these to do with the Quincy granite pyramid on the brow of Bunker Hill?

"I stayed home .. "

The old flame still burned in John Quincy Adams at 75.

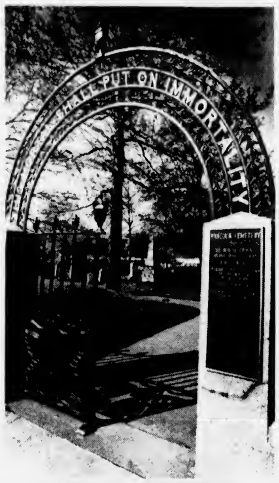
Hancock Cemetery

Where Patriots, Early Settlers, Intrigue Rest

Henry, the first Adams in Quincy, is buried there. So is the Rev. John Hancock, father of the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. And Colonel John Quincy, for whom the city is named.

But of all the 800 graves in the Hancock Cemetery, the Old Burying Ground of Colonial Quincy, most intriguing is one marked by a tombstone bearing this cryptic epitaph:



"Erected to the memory of John R. Grieve: Died Nov. 12, 1850, age 22 years, and Hannah Banks, his wife, died Nov. 12, 1850, age 15 years. Both of Zanesville, Ohio. Deluded by the writings of A.J. Davis."

The mystery of John and Hannah has never been fully solved.

They came to Quincy in 1850, not as man and wife, but as male cousins, John Green and George Sands. They obtained work in a shoe factory but rarely left their lodgings on Elm St., spending long hours reading books on spiritualism.

Co-Workers thought that George Sands looked frail, almost effeminate. It was widely suspected that "he" was a girl. A scheme was devised to test the theory.

One day at lunch one of the shoe workers tossed George an apple. A man would catch it by closing his legs; a woman by spreading her skirt. Guess what "George" did!

HANCOCK CEMETERY

Humiliated, John and Hannah never went back to the factory. Nor did they ever return to the house on Elm St. Their frozen bodies were found next spring by rabbit hunters on Penn's Hill, locked in a loving embrace.

Several months later, the father of John Grieve arrived from Ohio to bury the young couple. It was he who directed the words to be chiselled on the headstone. He explained no further.

A.J. Davis was never identified for sure. But Andrew Jackson Davis, a spiritualist, hypnotist and faith healer, was then practicing in Boston.

Among the belongings found in the Elm. St. lodgings were these words, written by 15-year-old Hannah Banks:

"To the oppressed and downtrodden, to the suffering and afflicted, I would cry out...Death is only an event, only a circumstance in the eternal life experience of the human soul. Death is simply a birth into a new and perfect state of existence."

Not far from the grave of John and Hannah is a tomb bearing words that cry out of an earlier injustice:

"Three precious friends under this tombstone lie

"Patterns to aged, youth and infancy.

"A great mother, her learned son, with child.

"The first and least went free. He was exiled.

"In love to Christ, this country, and dear friends.

"He left his own, cross'd seas and for amends

"Was here extoll'd, and envy'd all in a breath,

"His noble consort leaves, is drawn to death,

"Stranger changes may befall us ere we die,

"Blest they who will arrive eternity.

"God grant some names, O thou New England's friend.

"Don't sooner fade than thine, if times don't mend."

The tomb with its hidden message contains the family of the Rev. Leonard Hoar, third president of Harvard College, a man too liberal for his times.

He was forced by the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony to resign at the instigation of religious opponents and jealous colleagues for permitting Harvard to "languish and decay." Eight months later, in November 1675, he was dead at 45.

In 1975, the same General Court, now of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, righted the 300-year-old wrong done to the Rev. Mr. Hoar by "proclaiming and confirming his innocence of any misdeeds while president of Harvard College."

The cemetery, on Hancock St., Quincy Sq., next to City Hall, is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

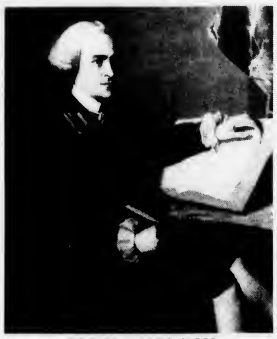
Some Wanted Quincy To Be Hancock

By HENRY BOSWORTH

If some of the early settlers had their way, it would be the city of Hancock today instead of Quincy.

Quincy, like George Washington, was born on Feb. 22.

On Feb. 22, 1792, the General Court of Massachusetts passed an act incorporating the North Precinct of Old Braintree as the separate town of Quincy.



But, just before that, quite a few of the residents wanted the new town named after native-son John Hancock instead of Boston-born Colonel John Quincy.

Colonel Quincy, who had represented Old Braintree in the General Court, was the great-grandfather of President John Quincy Adams.

Many people today think Quincy was named after the sixth President but the honor actually goes to his great-grandfather.

John Hancock, who was born in the North Precinct, was governor of Massachusetts when the General Court passed the act incorporating the new town as Quincy. He signed the act the following day.

But at the first town meeting of the new town in May, a petition was presented to change the name from Quincy to Hancock in honor of the patriot and first signer of the Declaration of Independence. The move was finally defeated after a stormy verbal battle.

JOHN HANCOCK

Opponents argued that Hancock was still alive and that the honor should go to a distinguished-but-deceased-person.

Colonel Quincy met those requirements. He was both distinguished and deceased.

He had represented Old Braintree in the General Court from 1717 to 1741, 12 of those years as Speaker of the House. He died in 1767 at age 77, two days after John Quincy Adams was born.

Quincy became a city June 11, 1888.

But a lot of people will go right on thinking Quincy was named after John Quincy Adams.

Abigail Adams Cairn

The Smoke Could Be Seen Over Bunker Hill

Abigail Adams was awakened at dawn in the farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill by the sound of far-off guns. All through the sweltering morning of June 17, 1775, as she hustled about with the chores, the dull boom of cannon intruded on her consciousness.

Riders on the Coast Road to Plymouth, stopping at the farmhouse for a drink of water, told her of a great battle underway on Breed's Hill in Charlestown.

One of them brought word that Dr. Joseph Warren had been killed in the fighting and little Abby, age 10, burst into tears, and John Quincy, nearly 8, felt bewildered and sad, for Dr. Warren was the Adams family doctor in Boston.

In the afternoon, Abigail could stand it no longer. Taking Abby and John Quincy by the hand, she walked up the Coast Road to the top of Penn's Hill and climbed up on the rocks for a better view.

The panorama of the Bay, a shimmering blue in the sunshine, spread out before them, the tiny houses on the three hills of Boston and, beyond, the black smoke rising in billows.

"Good God," exclaimed Abigail, "they are burning Charlestown!"

The scene etched itself forever in John Quincy's memory.

The early days of the Revolution were times of turmoil in Old Braintree and its North Precinct, which was later called Quincy.

Abigail's husband, John, was away most of the time at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia, leaving 31-year-old Abigail to manage the farm and look to the needs of four small children: Abigail, John Quincy, Charles, 5, and Thomas Boylston, 3.

There were days of alarm as the British, penned up in Boston by the brand new Continental Army, foraged up and down the coast for supplies. Refugees from occupied Boston and the inner towns of Dorchester and Roxbury sometimes slept in the kitchen and in the fields.

As the wife of a member of Congress, Abigail was a center of attention. The house on the Coast Road was a favorite stopping place for travelers to Plymouth. Politicians up from Philadelphia made it a point to stop by for a visit with John Adams' wife.

Abigail was invited to visit Gen. George Washington's headquarters at Winter Hill. The aristocratic Washington was suspect among New Englanders. He was a Virginian; he was an Anglican; and, it was said, he held slaves. But John Adams liked him and Abigail was soon charmed.

One day, young John Quincy came home to find his Uncle Elihu melting down Abigail's pewter spoons in the kitchen to make bullet molds. He looked at his mother and she looked back at him and something indefinable passed between them.

"Do you wonder," wrote the sixth President of the United States some 68 years later, "that a boy of 7 who witnessed this scene should be a patriot."

City Hall

Seat Of Government For 162 Years

Daniel and Hannah French deeded the land to the town of Quincy for $1,000 with the stipulation that it "shall not be used for any other purpose than as a place for a Town House and for the said Inhabitants."

And, with a few minor transgressions of that vow, the solid structure of Quincy granite on Quincy Square has been just that for the past 162 years, the nerve center of government for the town and then the city.

It was the great hall on the second floor that the popular John Quincy Adams II, grandson of a President of the United States, held forth as town moderator for many years and, with his brother, Charles Francis Adams Jr., gave informal direction to town affairs.

One of the earliest ordinances passed by the first City Council on March 8, 1889 was the adoption of the City Seal emblazoned with the four most significant dates in Quincy's history:

1625, for the first settlement on Mount Wollaston; 1640, for its separation from Boston as the town of Braintree; 1792, for its separation from Braintree as the town of Quincy; and 1888, for its incorporation as a city.

CITY HALL

Designed by the architect Solomon Willard — who received $280 for drawing up the plans and superintending construction for five months — the City Hall was completed and occupied for the first time on Nov. 1, 1844.

It cost exactly $19,115.93 to build, including 88 cents to John Briesler for lead to seal the chimney.

In 1979, when a three and a half story reflective glass addition was built behind the old City Hall, the cost was $1.9 million.

John Adams 'Father'

U.S., State Constitution Both Born Here

By TOM HENSHAW

Quincy, birthplace of John Adams, John Quincy Adams and John Hancock, also has claim to the birth of the U.S. Constitution.

The seed for this precious document was planted here.

The U.S. Constitution was modeled after the Massachusetts Constitution which was written by John Adams, Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin in Adams' law office of the John Quincy Adams birthplace in Quincy.

There is every reason to believe that John Adams did not want to go the Massachusetts Constitution Convention in Cambridge in 1779.

He missed his wife, Abigail, terribly, and she him.

The American colonies, newly reborn as the United States of America, were going through the most dismal period of the War for Independence. Inflation was rampant: butcher's meat, a dollar to eight shillings a pound; flour, fifty dollars a hundredweight. The news from the fighting front was of death, privation and horror.

Like many Braintree wives whose husbands were away at war. Abigail Adams was forced into the unaccustomed role of head of the household, a function she filled with determination.

John Adams attended the opening session of the Constitutional Convention in Cambridge on Wednesday, June 1, 1779. On Saturday, he was named to a committee of 30 to prepare the declaration of rights and the constitution. On Monday, the committee delegated the task to a subcommittee of three, John and Samuel Adams; and James Bowdoin.

Thus it was that John Adams wound up in the law office of his home at the foot of Penn's Hill, paired with his firebrand cousin, Sam, and his ailing friend, James Bowdoin, to write a Constitution for Massachusetts.

The patient, hard-working John Adams, of course, did most of the work.

"I was by the Convention put upon the Committee—by the Committee upon the subcommittee—and by the subcommittee appointed a sub subcommittee—so that I had the honor to be principal Engineer," he wrote to his friend, Edmund Jennings. Payroll records indicate that he was paid 90 pounds for his work.

The so-called "Adams draft" of the Massachusetts Constitution was accepted by the Convention with a few alterations but by that time John Adams was long gone back to Europe, this time to help negotiate a treaty of peace with Britain and serve as America's first minister to London. He did not see the farm at the foot of Penn's Hill again for another eight years.

But he was immensely heartened by these words from the pen of his ever-loving Abigail, written on Oct. 15, 1780:

"Our Massachusetts Constitution is read with admission in New York and pronounced by the Royal Governor as the best republican form he ever saw."

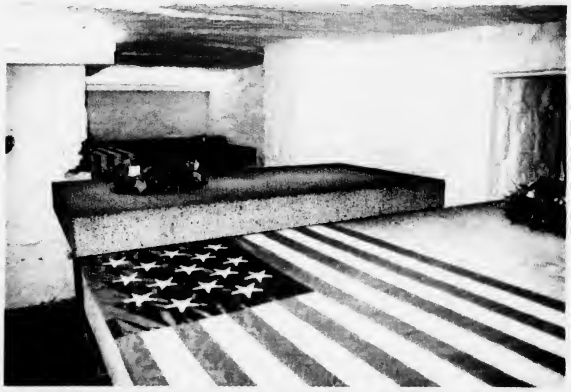
'STONE AGE' of American architecture is preserved in Quincy as the shiny curves of the granite 'gazing ball' on Constitution Common reflect the solid granite squares of First Parish Church in the background and the old section of City Hall to its right.

GENERATIONS of stone cutters who made Quincy granite synonymous with the best in building materials for more than 100 years are honored with a statue in Granite Workers' Park on Copeland St., in West Quincy, inscribed to those 'whose talents and dedication have been recognized throughout the world.'



THE LIFE-SIZED bronze statue of second president John Adams rests on the edge of Constitution Common outside City Hall so that it appears he is looking across Hancock St. to United First Parish Church and the statue of his wife, Abigail and son, John Quincy Adams who became the sixth president. Both statues were commissioned by the Quincy Partnership and are the work of noted sculptor Lloyd Lillie.

By modern standards, the boarding house at the corner of Hancock and Depot Sts. had all the aspects of a genteel prison.

Residents were forbidden to leave between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. They could not enter or leave at any time exept by the hall door. They were banned from pool halls and bars. Smoking materials also were forbidden to them.

In exchange for good behavior, plus tuition ranging from $75 to $150 a year, they were given the best prep school education of the day, for they were students at Adams Academy, which flourished from 1872 to 1907 in Quincy.

The academy was a gift of John Adams, the second President of the United States, who always had his checkbook ready to fill the spiritual and educational needs of the citizens of his beloved Quincy.

The trust fund, nourished by "rents, profits and emoluments" from certain Adams-owned properties, was set up in the Adams will of 1822, but it was not until 1869 that the fund was deemed larege enough to start construction.

The location was specified by Adams himself as the corner of Adams and Hancock Streets., site of the birthplace of his childhood friend, John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The doors opened to the first students, 24 of them, on Sept. 4, 1872. Five years later, the academy reached a peak enrollment of 154 with an international student body—25 from Quincy, four from Washington, D.C., 125 from14 states, two from England and one from Chile.

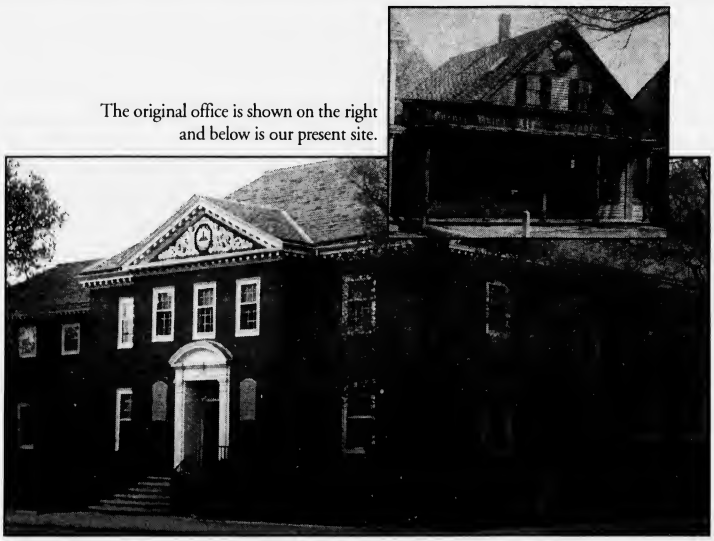
It had one of the earliest prep school football teams, too, recording a tie with the Resolutes of Boston on Oct. 21, 1876, a scant seven years after Princeton and Rutgers played the first college game. It whipped Andover three times from 1877-79.

The admissions catalogue specified that applicants be "well prepared in the usual studies of good grammar school" and warned that "no pupils are desired to give them a collegiate education."

The best known headmaster was Dr. William Everett, once acclaimed as one of the seven smartest men in the world. He ran the academy with a firm hand from 1878 to 1893 and again from 1897 to 1907. From 1893 to 1897, he was a U.S. congressman from Lynn.

Dr. Everett, an amiable if sometimes waspish eccentric, was widely known as the man who hated Abraham Lincoln. He had reason. His father was Edward Everett, whose masterful oration at Gettysburg was over-shadowed by Lincoln's notes scribbled on the back of an envelope.

It was Dr. Everett, who signaled the passing of Adams Academy—and many other 19th Century classical prep schools—at graduation exercises in 1907 when he said that "unless someone comes forward and planks down $50,000, the academy will be closed."



Nobody did. On June 22, 1907, the Adams Academy officially closed its doors.

The building today is occupied by the Quincy Historical Society, which maintains a museum and research library in the old classrooms as well as an expanded gift shop.

The museum and gift shop are open all year, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and April through November, Saturday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. The library is open Monday and Wednesday from 9 a.m. to noon. Other times by appointment. Call 617-773-1144 for more information.

Thomas Crane Library Architectural Beauty

He came to Quincy as a boy of 7, grew to young manhood on a farm in Quincy Point, learned the granite-cutters' trade, and left at the age of 26 to win fame and fortune in stone in New York City.

That was the last Quincy heard of Thomas Crane for half a century until one February day in 1880, five years after his death, when his son, Albert, appeared with $20,000 with which to build a memorial — preferably a library — to his father.

"My father always retained a strong feeling for the town of Quincy," was his only explanation.

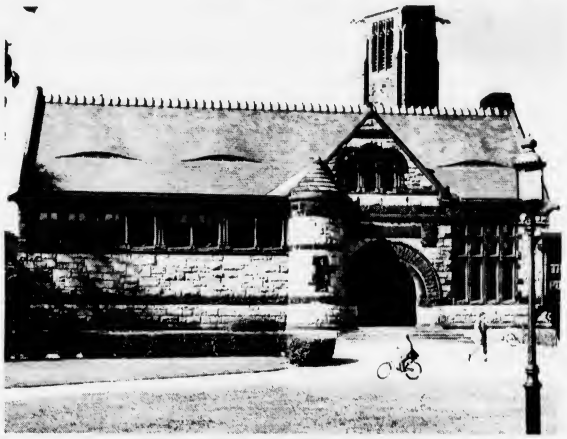
Albert Crane himself chose the man to design the building, Henry Hobson Richardson, grandson of the English scientist Dr. Joseph Priestly and the foremost architect of the day.

His reputation was so formidable that he was able to tell Crane, "I cannot guarantee that the building, when completed, shall conform to (your) ideas of beauty and taste," and still get the job.

Richardson's Romanesque building, which now houses the reference section of the library, was dedicated on May 30, 1882, with the principal oration delivered by Charles Francis Adams, Jr., chairman of the Board of Trustees.

It was Adams who gave the library its name. Albert Crane wanted it to be "The Quincy Free Public Library." Adams insisted on "The Thomas Crane Public Library."

"Who's giving the building?" asked Albert Crane.



"You are, but you wouldn't have if it hadn't been for me," said Adams, who was used to having his way around Quincy, and that was that.

President John Adams' modest collection of books was housed in the library until 1893, when it was discovered that in 11 years only two persons, one of them Charles Francis Adams, Jr., had asked to see them. They were then transferred to the Boston Public Library.

At the start, Richardson's magnificent building was all but hidden behind a grain store, a hotel, an office building and four homes that lined Washington St.

Albert Crane, however, was a persistent man and, by the time he died in 1917, he had purchased and torn down all the buildings, leaving a broad expanse of open space to enhance the library.

But before the lawn could be seeded, World War I intervened and, in a burst of patriotism — "Food will win the war," they said — the area was planted with potatoes, tended by an expert brought in from Maine.

THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC LIBRARY

The experiment failed.

"There wasn't a potato in the lot that was anywhere near as large as a golf ball," said Mayor Joseph L. Whiton. The harvest was donated to the poor farm.

Albert Crane also put up $64,000 to build the Spear St. wing of the library in 1907-08 and the Crane family gave yet another $164,000 for the free standing addition, built in 1938.

A new $18 million addition that almost doubled the size of the existing library was completed in the spring of 2001 with money from the Crane endowment used to purchase the property and the rest paid for with a city bond issue.

The new wing was dedicated this year as the Mayor James A. Sheets Building.

The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., is open to the public, free of charge, Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Fridays and Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

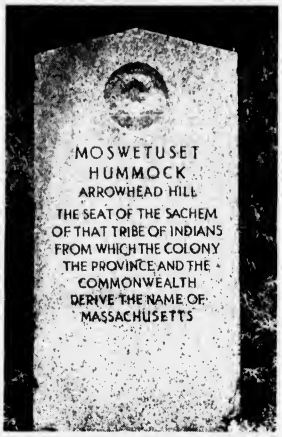
Moswetuset Hummock

'Birthplace Of Massachusetts'

The Indians saw it as a hill (wetuset) shaped like an arrow head (mos) so they called it "Moswetuset" and when English tongues got through mangling the word it came out "Massachusetts," which became the name of the bay and then the state.

The little wooded hillock near the junction of East Squantum Street and Quincy Shore Drive was once the seat of the sachem Chickatabot, who comes down through the pages of Quincy history as a rather pathetic figure.



He was the chief of the Moswetuset Indians, a once great tribe that occupied the coast north of Plymouth.

A few years before, under the great sachem Nanepashemet, the Moswetuset had been able to field some 3,000 warriors for a war with a neighboring tribe. Nanepashemet was killed.

Then came the plague.

In two years the mighty Moswetuset were all but wiped out. No more than 60 of them were left to till their fields on the banks of the Neponset River. Sachem Chickatabot fled his home on the hill in Wollaston and took refuge on Moswetuset Hummock.

That was the situation in 1621 when Capt. Myles Standish landed from a shallop with an exploring party of Plymouth Pilgrims that included the Indian guide Squanto (or Tsquantum), whose name was given to the peninsula that stuck out in the bay. They called it Squantum.

The tragic Chickatabot died not long after the Pilgrims' visit and he was succeeded as sachem by his son, Josiah Wampatuck, a boy who knew a good deal when he saw one.

Wampatuck sold what was left of his virtually deserted tribal lands to a group of whites for 12 pounds, 10 shillings. The lands included most of what is today the city of Quincy and the towns of Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook.

Moswetuset Hummock, identified by a marker stone and maintained in its natural state, is open to the public.

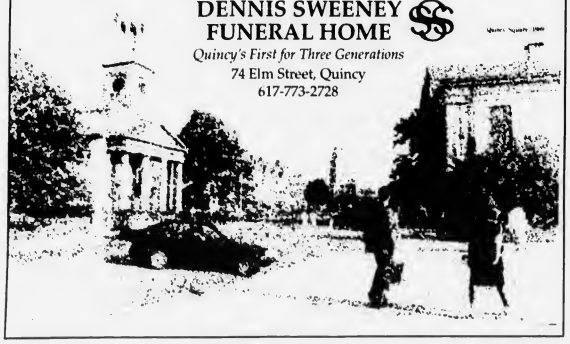
A Third Generation Continues Our Traditions.

Quincy has changed a great deal since Sweeney Funeral Home was established in 1917. But, it's nice to know some things will never change. Like the observance of traditional values and customs.

At Sweeney Funeral Homes, older residents are quick to notice the subtle reminders of yesteryear, such as the grey gloves our funeral director still wears. Like the characteristic top hat and tails that our founder, Dennis Sweeney, wore over 30 years ago, they reflect our Tradition. One that has been built on a dignified and instinctive concern for the city's bereaved families for three generations.

Today, our founder's grand-nephew, Dennis S. Sweeney has continued the family's philosophy of maintaining a beautiful, home-like atmosphere.



And like his namesake, who started pre-arrangements in the 1940s, Dennis believes in helping residents to plan for the future. Pre-planning means that this financial decision is not left for a family to decide while they are attempting to cope with a major personal loss. It's a difficult time, a time when family members are least able to make the wisest choice.

Sweeney Funeral Homes has been helping South Shore residents with difficult decisions for over 70 years. Call Dennis Sweeney at (617) 773-2728 for a free consultation. There's no time like the present.

Josiah Quincy House

Lookout For Spying On British Ships

Abigail Adams stood with her great-uncle, Col. Josiah Quincy, in a window of his mansion overlooking Wollaston Beach and watched the tall masts of 170 ships stand slowly out to sea. It was March 17, 1776. The British were evacuating Boston.

But even in triumph there was tragedy.

Aboard the departing ships were more than 1,000 Loyalists, Americans who had chosen King above country, and one of them was Abigail's cousin, Samuel Quincy, the Colonel's only remaining son, an avowed Tory.

"I take a long farewell," his sister, Hannah, wrote to him for one last time. "Let it not be published that a brother of such brothers fled from his country. Can you expect to walk uprightly now? Can you take fire in your bosom and not be burned?"

Two of Col. Josiah Quincy's sons had died young. Now he had no more.

But there was no time for regrets. The work of revolution had begun. The second floor of the house at what is now 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, was a lookout from which the 66-year-old Colonel spied on British ship movements for his friend, Gen. George Washington.

A few months before, Col. Quincy watched the Royal Governor, Gen. Thomas Gage depart and he scratched on a pane of window glass the reminder: "Oct. 10, 1775, General Gage sailed for England with a fair wind."

This time he remained in the window for three days as the British tall ships moved restlessly about the Harbor as if reluctant to leave. Finally, on March 20, the last of them passed through the roadstead and out to sea.

The mansion in Wollaston reached full social flower under the aegis of the Colonel's grandson, the third Josiah, the "Great Mayor" of Boston, president of Harvard and Congressman, who called it "Tranquillia" and used it as his summer home.

It was there that the Marquis de Lafayette visited one Sunday afternoon after dinner with his friend, ex-President John Adams at the Adams Mansion. He carried flowers from the Adams garden for Mrs. Eliza Susan Quincy and her five attractive daughters.

The house was built in 1770 by the old Colonel himself, the first in a line of six Josiahs. It was said that, while most families passed their line from sire to son, the Quincys went from 'Siah to 'Siah.

But, while there were six Josiahs and innumerable Edmunds, the city was named for yet another member of the prolific family — Col. John Quincy, the great-grandfather of John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States.

The house, which was painted yellow for many years, recently underwent a conversion to beige to more accurately reflect how it looked in the 1880s when another Eliza Susan Quincy, a historian, began to chronicle information pertaining to the house and family.

Eliza Susan kept journals, inventoried the contents of the house and persuaded relatives to return heirlooms so that the house could becomne a museum of Quincy family history. Her work initiated the process that led to the preservation of the house by the Society for the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities (SPNEA).

JOSIAH QUINCY HOUSE in Wollaston recently underwent a paint change from yellow to beige to reflect more accurately how the house, a National Historic Landmark, looked in the 1880s when historian Eliza Susan Quincy began to organize historical information on the house.

WWII Famed Figure

'Kilroy Was Here' At Quincy Shipyard

"Kilroy was here!"

It seemed like the words were everywhere 60 years ago.

They greeted the first American GIs to arrive at the Imperial Palace in war-torn Tokyo in the late summer of 1945 and they mystified Stalin in the men's room at Yalta.

"Kilroy was here!"

He really wasn't but in a way he was.

It all began in 1942 in Bethlehem Steel's Fore River Shipyard in Quincy where James J. Kilroy was employed as a checker whose job it was to count the number of holes filled by a riveter.

Kilroy's job was important to the riveters since they were paid by the number of rivets they drove. Kilroy would go around and count them and check each with a chalk mark.

Some riveters would wait until the checker had gone and then erase the last chalk mark. Another checker would count the rivet a second time and the riveter would get paid twice for the same work.

One day, Kilroy overheard his boss ask a riveter if Kilroy had checked a certain rivet. No, said the riveter. That made Kilroy mad because he knew he had checked that particular rivet.

He grabbed a piece of chalk, went over to where the two men were standing and scribbled "Kilroy was here!" in large, bold letters right next to the check mark. It soon became his standard practice.

Ordinarily, the chalk mark would be covered up by paint. But this was wartime and some ships left the Yard too fast to be fully painted.

The enigmatic "Kilroy was here!" began appearing all over the world, joined by a drawing of a long-nosed character peering over a wall.

The mysterious message fascinated GIs. Soon they began writing it themselves on walls in the most unlikely places, like the Imperial Palace in Tokyo and the men's room at Yalta.

"Who is Kilroy?" asked Stalin as he came out wiping his hands.

Eventually, as "Remember Pearl Harbor" stood for America's fighting men in World War II and the men and women who built the war machines for them, so did "Kilroy was here!" come to stand for them too.

USS Lexington Led Search For Amelia

When Amelia Earhart, once the part owner of Dennison Airport in North Quincy, vanished over the Pacific on an around-the-world flight in 1937, it was the Quincy-built aircraft carrier Lexington (the first) and its 90 planes that led the three week search for her.

She has never been found.

Quincy Adams Yacht Yard

The Fore River Shipyard was not the only shipbuilding facility in Quincy that helped to win World War II

There was also the Quincy Adams Yacht Yard on the Town River in Germantown, which turned from building private yachts when war broke out to constructing wooden-hulled submarine chasers,

At one time, the yacht yard was turning out SC-boats at the rate of two a month toi help destroy the German U-boat menace and win the Battle of the North Atlantic and preserve the supply line to Britain.

The yuard won the coveted Navy "E" for excellence six times.

The Granite Railway

First Commerical Railroad In U.S.

THE GRANITE RAILWAY

It was the darndest looking contraption that many among the distinguished gathering had ever seen.

Each of the three wagons had four wheels, six and one half feet in diameter, surmounted by a smaller gear wheel which was used to raise and lower the cargo platform that was slung low between the wheels.

It rode on foot-high wooden rails, topped by iron plate, which rested on stone sleepers or cross ties, placed eight feet apart and firmly supported on crushed granite to a depth beyond the frost line.

On Saturday, Oct. 7, 1826, the wagons were laden with 16 tons of the finest Quincy granite and the opening day guests were properly amazed when a single horse moved the whole thing with ease more than three miles to a special wharf on the Neponset River.

The granite blocks, a particularly hard and weather-resistant stone capable of taking a brilliant polish, were en route to Charlestown, where they were building a monument to the Battle of Bunker Hill.

The Granite Railway, the first such commercial venture in the United States, was built specifically to transport stone for the Bunker Hill Monument.

That it became successful, and a model for others around the country, is a tribute to three vastly dissimilar men, the engineer Gridley Bryant, the architect Solomon Willard and the financier, Colonel Thomas Handasyd Perkins.

Bryant was 27 at the time but already an engineer of note. He invented the eight wheeled railroad car and, when a fellow named Ross Winans of Baltimore sued to establish a patent on it, Bryant was able to prove his claim to the satisfaction of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Willard, then 43, was a great bear of a man, gentle, obliging, industrious. Frivolity, it was said, was alien to him and he was never known to run. He could be crotchety, too. He was a carpenter turned woodcarver, turned stone-carver and, finally architect.

Perkins was the autocratic, 52-year-old merchant king of Boston who was said to have been offered the post of Secretary of the Navy by President Washington and turned it down with the observation that he owned more ships than the Navy.

It was Perkins who lobbied the Railway's charter through a puzzled and obstinate State Legislature, which had never been called upon to incorporate a commercial railroad before. It was Perkins who financed it, too, largely with his own money.

Even in its early days, the Granite Railway was a tourist attraction of some magnitude.

Daniel Webster, who used to stop off for a pick-me-up in Quincy en route from Boston and Washington to his home in Marshfield, viewed it and decided that it would never succeed because of the frost that would form on the rails in the winter.

The President of the United States, a local boy named John Quincy Adams, visited in August, 1827, got caught in a thunderstorm and took shelter in a shed where Willard's stone-cutters were hacking away at monument granite.

A group of visitors were riding up the Railway's incline in an empty car on July 25, 1832, when the chain broke and catapulted them over a 40-foot cliff. One was killed in what may have been the first railroad fatality in the United States.

The Granite Railway Co. survived until 1870, some 27 years after the Bunker Hill Monument was finished, when most of its track was taken over by the Old Colony Railroad, which in turn became a division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

Today much of the roadbed, over which freight moved commercially on rails for the first time in America, is buried under the macadam of the Southeast Expressway.

The incline of the old Railway has been restored and is located at the dead end of Mullin Ave. in West Quincy. It is open to the public year around, 24 hours a day. There is no admission charge.

Quincy's Granite Was Famed The World Over

They're just holes in the ground now, attractive and perilous nuisances that, over the years, have filled with water and lured swimmers to their dooms, unaware of the dangers that lie in the cool green depths.

But there was a time, more than 100 years ago, when the Quincy granite quarries swarmed with workmen hacking out stone that was sought as prime building material around the world.

Like Topsy, the granite industry in Quincy "just growed."

The earliest settlers used the surface boulders found on the North and South Commons to build the foundations of their homes and the fences that separated them from their neighbors.

At the industry's height in the late 1800s, there were more than 30 operating quarries and in one of them, Jonathan Swingle's quarry, men dug for granite at a The first known use of Quincy granite as a building material was the town's second meeting house in 1666, a scant 41 years after the first settlement at Mount Wollaston.

The stone building served a dual purposes. Sometimes it was a church where the community worshipped; other times it served as a fort in case of an Indian attack.

Quarrying in general was in its infancy, an inexact science in those days.

GRANITE WORKERS, many of them immigrants who learned their craft in Italy and the Scandinavian countries, are memorialized with a statue of Quincy granite in the Granite Workers Park on Copeland St., West Quincy. There were as many as 4,000 working in the Quincy quarries during the "Stone Age" of American architecture.

The process of cutting a rock to size was simple — build a fire around it, then drop an iron ball or cold water on the rock, which would break at approximately the desired spot.

'THE GAZING BALL,' a shining sphere of Quincy granite on display in Constitution Common outside City Hall, is a constant reminder that Quincy stone was once one of the most cherished building materials. The 9 1/2-ton ball spent 68 years at the Fore River Rotary before returning to its original home this year.

Later, the quarrymen used wooden wedges which expanded when wet to split the stone, then sledges and hammers introduced by German immigrants, finally iron wedges.

These were the methods used to obtain granite to build King's Chapel in Boston (1753), the State Prison in Charlestown (1815), the Dedham jail (1817) and St. Paul's Church in Boston (1820).

That was the situation when Solomon Willard decided to commemorate the Battle of Bunker Hill (actually Breed's Hill) by building a monument out of Quincy granite.

The problem was that no one had ever built with such large pieces of stone before and no one knew how to quarry it or work it or transport it to the building location.

Willard, who quit his job as an architect and moved to Quincy to direct quarrying operations for the Bunker Hill Monument, had to devise new methods for obtaining and working the stone.

The new method of transportation, devised by Gridley Bryant, involved the construction of the first commercial railroad in the United States to carry stone from the quarry to the Neponset River.

Willard's inventions and new methods inaugurated what is known as "the Stone Age" of American architecture and the Quincy granite industry flourished along with it.

Quincy granite, known for its durability and its ability to take a high polish, was shipped all over the world under the trade names "Quincy Light." "Quincy Dark," and "Quincy Extra Dark."

The demise of the granite industry started after World War I when lighter and more malleable building materials were developed with which to construct stronger and less costly buildings.

The last operating quarry, Swingle's, went out of business in 1963.

Quincy Ships Played A Major Role In WWII

USS Quincy Took FDR To Yalta

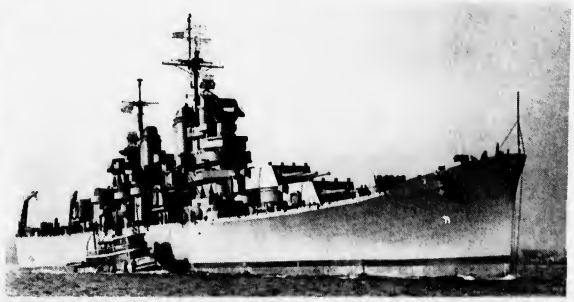
The President and the Prime Minister met on the ship's deck and went on from there to the conference that would decide the future of a world at war.

The President was Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Prime Minister was Winston Churchill and the ship was the Quincy-built heavy cruiser USS Quincy, the second of that name to perform heroically in World War II.

The time was 60 years ago, Feb. 2, 1945, and the place was the island of Malta in the Mediterranean, where the President met the Prime Minister and together they flew on to the Yalta Conference in the Russian Crimea.

After dropping off FDR at Malta, USS Quincy met him again at the Great Bitter Lake in the Suez Canal where they entertained King Farouk of Egypt, Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia and King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia.

Quincy was specially outfitted to carry FDR across the UBoat-infested Atlantic to confer with Churchill and Russian Premier Joseph Stalin after she participated in the bombardment of Normandy on D-Day.



She was part of a naval group that stood off the Allied beachhead and shelled the German defenses to soften them up for the landing party and, when that was done, joined another force in bombarding the French port of Cherbourg into submission.

CHESTER NIMITZ

Her performance off Utah Beach drew praise from Admiral E. L. Cochrane, chief of the Bureau of Ships, who wrote to the Bethlehem Steel Co., owners of the Fore River Shipyard at the time:

"The Bethlehem-built cruiser Quincy has been giving a splendid account of herself in support of the Allied invasion of Western Europe.

THE USS QUINCY, built in 1943, the second heavy cruiser to bear the name, had a prominent role in World War II, including shelling the Normandy coast during D-Day in 1944 and bombarding the Japanese homeland. In between, she took President Franklin D. Roosevelt to the Yalta Conference in 1945. The first USS Quincy was sunk in the Battle of Savo Island in 1942.

"The performance of Quincy is in keeping with the quality of workmanship which characterizes the Navy vessels constructed at your yard."

After that brief respite for diplomacy at Yalta, it was back to war for Quincy, supporting carrier strikes on Okinawa and the Japanese home islands, finally entering Tokyo Bay on Sept. 1 in time to be present when the Japanese surrendered aboard the battleship Missouri, ending World War II 60 years ago.

The second Quincy, launched June 23, 1943, with great fanfare, was one of scores of warships built by Bethlehem's Fore River Shipyard, which employed 32,000 men and women in its Quincy and Hingham locations at their peak Jan. 15, 1943.

The first Quincy, launched June 19, 1935. was on peacetime convoy duty between Capetown, South Africa, and the Caribbean island of Trinidad, when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor and virtually destroyed America's Pacific fleet.

She was dispatched to the South Pacific in the summer of 1942 to shell Japanese installations on the Solomon Island of Guadalcanal and offer protection to the Marines who landed there in the first American offensive of World War II in August.

She was on patrol in the channel off Guadalcanal in the early morning hours of Aug. 9 when she was attacked by a large enemy naval force and sunk after taking many direct hits in what became known as the Battle of Savo Island.

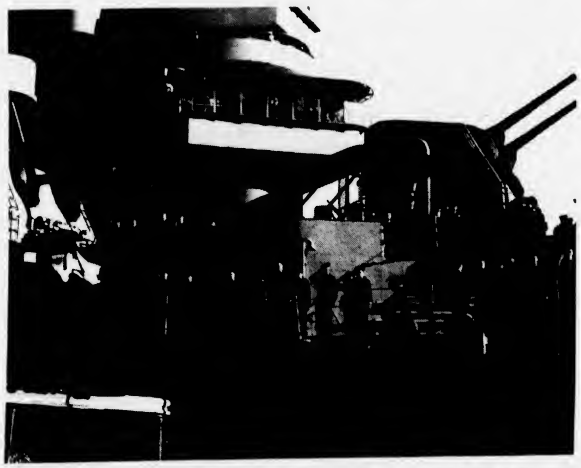
The final message from the stricken ship was one of defiance:

"We're going down between them — give 'em hell!"

News of the sinking struck hard at the men and women of the Fore River Shipyard, who had just begun work on a heavy cruiser to be called St. Paul. They petitioned Washington to change the name to Quincy and it was done.

She was christened by Mrs. Henry S. Morgan, daughter of Charles Francis Adams, former Secretary of the Navy and Mayor of Quincy, and daughter-in-law of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, the international financier. It was she who had christened the first Quincy.

The historic shipyard in Quincy Point was founded two miles upriver in Braintree in 1884 as the Fore River Engine Company by Thomas A. Watson, the same man who heard Alexander Graham Bell's first words on the first telephone — "Watson, come here; I want you."



The company was formed to make marine engines but the demand for private yachts was so strong that Watson was forced to move downriver in 1900 to Quincy where the river was wider, the channel deeper and more suited to launch ships.

As early as 1898, the yard began building ships for the U. S. Navy, with keels laid for the destroyers Lawrence and MacDonough, a contract in hand for the cruiser Des Moines and two more pending for the battleships Rhode Island and New Jersey.

Another one of those early ships was Nevada, delivered in 1916, which fought its way through two world wars, survived Pearl Harbor and the A-Bomb test at Bikini Atoll, and finally had to be sunk by a friendly torpedo.

Also Quincy-built were the battleship Rivadavia for the Argentine Navy, five submarines for the Japanese Navy for the Russo-Japanese War of 1904-5, and the world's only seven-masted schooner, Thomas W. Lawson. (FYI - They were called fore, main, mizzen, rusher, driver, jigger and spanker.)

An adjunct facility called the Victory Plant had to be built to handle the US Navy's overflow during World War I and together the yards turned out 35 destroyers in 27 months, more than all the other shipyards in the country combined, including USS Reid, built in a record 41 1/2 days from keel-laying to delivery.

BRITISH Prime Minister Winston Churchill (extreme left) acknowledges salute from American sailors as he comes aboard the heavy cruiser USS Quincy to meet Franklin D. Roosevelt on their way to the Big Three conference at Yalta 61 years ago in February, 1945.

A Naval officer named Chester Nimitz was briefly a resident of Quincy in 1913 while waiting for his submarine to be fitted at the yard. He remained long enough to marry a Wollaston girl, Catherine Vance Freeman, daughter of a former City Council president.

When, shortly after Pearl Harbor, Nimitz was named commander of all American naval forces in the Pacific, Catherine congratulated him on taking over the fleet.

"But, my dear," he replied. "The fleet's at the bottom of the sea."

That was the Quincy shipyard's cue once again to roll up its collective sleeves and get busy. Starting on Dec. 7, 1941, for the next three years, its workers turned out 88 ships, ranging from LSTs (landing ships tanks) to CVs (aircraft carriers), an average of one every 12 1/2 days.

It was in a shipyard annex in Hingham, five miles away down the coast, that workers set world's records by building the destroyer HMS Reynolds in 24 1/2 working days and delivering five ships to the Navy in 50 hours.

The battleship USS Massachusetts, "Big Mamie," delivered May 12, 1942, took part in some 35 engagements during the war, including the sinking of the mighty Vichy-French battleship Jean Bart at Casablanca before she could be turned over to the Germans.

Today she is a featured exhibit, along with the Quincy-built destroyer Joseph P. Kennedy Jr., at the naval museum in Fall River.

The aircraft carrier Wasp, launched from the Fore River ways April 4, 1939, was escorting transports of Marine reinforcements to Guadalcanal on Sept. 16, 1942, when two torpedoes from the Japanese submarine I-19 struck her in the vicinity of her gas tanks and magazines.

Another carrier, already abuilding at the Quincy yard and designated USS Oriskany, was renamed Wasp and sent off to war Nov. 24, 1943, taking part in the Battle of Leyte Gulf and the assaults on the Marianas, Iwo Jima, Okinawa and the Japanese home islands.

The carrier Lexington, laid down as a battle cruiser but completed as the US Navy's second aircraft carrier in 1925, was at sea when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor but, less than six months later, she fell to an enemy torpedo in the Battle of the Coral Sea.

As with Wasp, a carrier already on the ways in Quincy and ready to be dubbed USS Cabot, was renamed Lexington and commissioned Feb. 17, 1943, in time to fight through the central Pacific and launch its planes into the action that became known as "the Great Marianas Turkey Shoot."

From the heights in World War II, the once busy Fore River Shipyard fell on post-war hard times, building mostly tankers and freighters with an occasional Navy contract for a submarine, destroyer or frigate. But every now and then it was called on to construct something new and interesting.

Like the world's heaviest ship, the 106,500-ton tanker Manhattan, launched in 1962, the fastest and most powerful supertanker, which was later converted into the world's largest icebreaker for a trip through the Canadian Arctic with one barrel of oil to prove that oil from Alaska's North Slope could be transported by sea.

Or the fleet oilers Redstone, Vanguard and Mercury, converted into instrumentation ships in 1966 to track missiles on the firing range, but also used to follow the progress of the Apollo spacecraft as they circled the earth in orbit and raced to the moon.

Or the world's first nuclear-powered surface combat ship, the cruiser Long Beach, launched in 1961, and the world's second, the frigate Bainbridge, in 1962. They were among the last ships built by Bethlehem at the shipyard before it was sold to General Dynamics.

The most notable ship construction contracts under taken during the 13 years General Dynamics operated the shipyard were the ten 436-foot liquefied natural gas (LNG) tankers with their great bulbous tanks that were built elsewhere and hoisted aboard the ship by the Goliath Crane that became a landmark at the yard.

For the record, the last ship built by General Dynamics at the 86-year-old Quincy shipyard was the maritime prepositioning ship Sgt. William R. Button. That was in 1986. Then General Dynamics shut the door.

First Competitive Aeromeet Here In 1910

Amelia Earhart, Harriet Quimby Pioneers

By SHARRON BEALS

Quincy plunged into the new and challenging world of aviation less than seven years after the Wright brothers proved, on a windy Carolina beach, that heavier-than-air craft could fly.

The site was a 500-acre tract of former farmland called "New Squantum," leased by the Harvard-Boston Aero Association and opened Aug. 8, 1910, as the Harvard Aviation Field.

Most of the great ones of the early days of flying showed up at Squantum at one time or another, including the Wright brothers themselves, Claude Graham-White, Richard E. Byrd and the First Ladies of the Air, Harriet Quimby and Amelia Earhart.

Quimby was the first American woman to qualify for a pilot's license in 1911 and the second in the world (Helene Dutrieu of France was the first) and the first woman to fly across the English Channel.

Earhart, who once had a financial interest in a private airport at Squantum, was the first woman to solo across the Atlantic and was trying to be the first around the world when she vanished over the Pacific in 1937.

The first competitive air show in the United States was organized by the Harvard Aero Society Sept. 3-10, 1910, and it drew 22 flyers and 17 aircraft as competitors and President William Howard Taft as one of 150,000 spectators.

Star of the meet was the Brit, Graham-White, who brought two airplanes, a Bleriot monoplane and a Farman biplane, and won $10,000 offered by the Boston Globe for a hazardous double round trip to Boston Light. He also sweetened the pot by taking passengers on short flights for $500 each.

The 1913 Harvard Meet was to have featured a competition between Quimby and Blanche Scott, the first American woman to fly a plane, for the honor of flying the first air mail flight to New York. Instead, it ended tragically.

Quimby, showing off her new two-seat Bleriot monoplane, took Meet Director William A.F. Willard for a flight around Boston Light. Returning, the plane suddenly nosed over and Quimby and Willard fell out, dropping to their deaths in Dorchester Bay 1,000 feet below.

Only then was it revealed that Quimby had already been chosen to fly the mail to New York for the first time.

The Navy took over the field in Squantum in 1917 and established the US Naval Training School, with Lt. (jg) Earl Spencer in command, to train young men in the fast developing art of flying airplanes.

Spencer and his wife, the former Wallis Warfield, the Belle of Baltimore, lived on Davis Street in Wollaston, where neighbors thought she was a bit stuck up and snobbish and nicknamed her "the Duchess."

HARRIET QUIMBY

AMELIA EARHART

Twenty years later, twice divorced, she gained a real title, the Duchness of Windsor, when she married the former King Edward VIII of England, who gave up his throne "for the woman I love."

Squantum's first reign as a training field didn't last long once the Navy discovered that the best use of the land was as a shipyard for the building of destroyers to break the German U-Boat blockade of the Atlantic during World War I.

It wasn't until 1923 that the Squantum

Lindberghs Weds Pass Up Quincy

Dennison Airport had a plane ready to take Charles Lindbergh and his bride, Ann Morrow, to Maine on their honeymoon in 1929.

But the newly weds' 35-foot-yacht Mouette docked in Provincetown instead of Quincy and they flew to Maine from a Cape Cod airport.

Fog Halts Mail

An attempt to deliver mail by air from the Squantum NAS to the SS Leviathon, nearly 400 miles out to sea, failed in 1927 when the fliers couldn't find the ship in the fog.

Lt. Clarence H. Schildhauer and his crew of three searched for three hours before giving up

Naval Reserve Station was established, commanded by Lt. Richard E. Byrd, with one old weather-beaten hangar and one ancient seaplane, held together, they said "by wire, curses and prayers."

Thus, Naval Reserve Aviation was born.

Later, as Admiral Byrd, the young lieutenant became renowned for his flights over the North and South Poles and the establishment of the Little America research station on the Antarctic continent.

Of the many officers who served at Squantum, none stand out more than Commander John J. Shea, executive officer from 1931 to 1940, when he went to war as air operations officer aboard the aircraft carrier Wasp.

Wasp was sunk Sept. 15, 1942, and Jack Shea was last seen "fighting the fire on the flight deck displaying great courage and devotion to duty, and disregarding the danger of exploding ammunition and debris filling the air and rapidly spreading the fire."

His last letter to his 5-year-old son, Jack Jr., written just before he was lost, became a classic in wartime literature, read in part:

"When you are a little bigger you will know why your daddy is not home so much anymore. You know we have a big country and we have ideals as to how people should live and enjoy the riches of it and how each is born with equal rights to life, freedom and the pursuit of happiness.

"Unfortunately, there are some countries in this world where they do not have these ideals, where a boy cannot grow up to be what he wants to be with no limit on his opportuniuties to be a great man such as a great priest, statesman, doctor, soldier, business man, etc.

"Because there are people in countries who want to change our nation, its ideals, its form of government and way of life we must leave our homes and families to fight. Fighting for the defense of our country, ideals, homes and honor is an honor and a duty which your daddy has to do before he can come home and settle down with you and mother.

"When it is done he is coming home to be with you always and forever. So wait just a little while longer. I'm afraid it will be more than the two weeks you told me on the phone.

" . . . Last of all don't ever forget your daddy. Pray for him to come back and if it is God's will that he does not, be the kind of a boy and man your daddy wants you to be."

Shea received the Navy Cross for his action aboard the dying Wasp. The field at Squantum NAS was named Shea Field. And his name is memorialized in the Quincy street called Commander Shea Boulevard.

The Depression brought hard times to flyers at Squantum as well as the country at large.

Fifteen officers and men and 10 civilian employees were discharged in July, 1933, leaving the base with Lt. Felix Baker, the commander, two reserve officers and 10 enlisted men.

Even while the Navy was training its reserve flyers, it leased a portion of its property to Quincy architect Harold T. Dennison to open a commercial airport in 1927 with Amelia Earhart as one of his five backers.

Earhart was one of the passengers on the first official flight out of Dennison Airport and, as a resident of Medford and a social worker in Boston, she visited the field in Squantum frequently to hone her own flying skills for aviation feats yet to come.

Instructors at Dennison taught flying during the week and took passengers joy riding on Sundays. It wasn't unusual for 1,000 persons to show up for a short hop at 50 cents and a longer one at $2.50 to $5 on a good weekend. But even that wasn't enough.

Dennison, as president of the Dennison Airport Kennel Club Inc., tried to open a dog track on the site in 1935 but it was turned down. Said City Councillor John R. Shaughnessy: "There is nothing lower than a dog track. Three of the six operated in Illinois were controlled by Al Capone."

The coming of World War II meant a revival of training at the Squantum Naval Air Station and the demise of commercial aviation at Dennison Airport as the Navy cancelled its lease and added a concrete surface to the runways and extended them until they were a half a mile long.

Trainees put in 10 hours of flight time with an instructor in the back seat of a two-seater trainer, then got one solo flight before being shipped on to advanced training bases at Pensacola, Jacksonville or Corpus Christi. Between flights they received elementary classroom instruction.

After the war, on July 1, 1946, the Squantum Naval Air Station became a Naval Reserve Training Base where for the next seven years thousands of officers and enlisted men and women — the Weekend Warriors — came each weekend for training.

Squantum's glorious aviation history came to an end in 1953 due to the rapid expansion of Logan Airport which placed Quincy in the path of jetliners approaching the East Boston field for a landing. Clearly, one of them had to go and, just as clearly, it was Squantum.

The national ensign was hauled down for the last time on the morning of Dec. 23, 1953, and the training of Weekend Warriors moved to the South Weymouth Naval Air Facility, home base of anti-submarine blimp patrols since 1942.

Reserve Capt. Harry Sartoris, the last commander of NAS Squantum, flew the last plane out of the old base and landed the first plane at the new NAS South Weymouth, where he was to become the first commander.

Today, Squantum's pioneer flying days of Harriet Quimby, Amelia Earhart, Commander John J. Shea and Captain Harry Sartoris live on in the Aviation History Information Center at the Beechwood Community Life Center where the old Dennison Airport once held sway.

Dunkin' Donuts Got Quincy Start

Ruth Gordon, Howard Johnson, Lee Remick, Billy DeWolfe Born Here

RUTH GORDON

BILLY DeWOLFE

HOWARD JOHNSON

LEE REMICK

Teachers dubbed the Class of 1914 the "worst class" ever at Quincy High School because no one made the honor roll. Too bad they couldn't have looked ahead to the future of Ruth G. Jones.

A year later, armed with a new name, Ruth Gordon, she was on a train bound for New York with a year's tuition to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts and $50 in spending money pinned to her corset.

Ruth Gordon went on to fame and fortune as an actress on the Broadway stage and the Hollywood movie studios and as a writer of short stories and plays with her husband, Garson Kanin.

She won an Academy Award as best supporting actress in 1969 for her role as a Satanist in "Rosemary's Baby," and an Emmy in 1979 for her one-time role in the sitcom "Taxi."

Ruth Gordon never forgot her roots in Quincy, returning frequently to attend class reunions. Her last visit was in 1984 for the dedication of the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater in Merrymount Park.

She died in 1985 at the age of 88.

His name too was Jones, William Andrew Jones, and, as a teen-aged usher in the old Quincy Theater, where vaudeville persisted into the 1920s, he used to dream of performing himself.

But Billy Jones was such a common name, he thought, so he borrowed the name of the Quincy Theater manager and as Billy DeWolfe he became a dancer and comic in movies on TV.

He visited his old home town almost yearly and when he died in 1974 at the age of 67. he was buried in the Jones family plot in Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

The year was 1925 when 27-year-old Howard Johnson, a failure as a cigar salesman, took over a rundown drug store with a newspaper franchise and a marble soda fountain on Beale Street in Wollaston.

Soon he began making his own ice cream — 28 flavors eventually — and then he had a seaside snack shack on Wollaston Beach Boulevard and a restaurant in the tallest building in downtown Quincy.

Just then, by coincidence, Eugene O'Neill's latest play, "Strange Interlude," was banned in Boston so the producers moved it to the Quincy Theater, just up Hancock Street from the Howard Johnson restaurant in the then Granite Trust Bank.

It was a long play, so the sellout audiences were given an hour and a half dinner break at intermission so the place to go was Johnson's restaurant where the special, chicken pies, were $1 apiece.

Eventually, Howard Johnson-franchised restaurants and motels, with their familiar orange roofs, spanned the continent, truly, in their own words, "a landmark for hungry Americans."

Bill Rosenberg was just shy of his 30th birthday when he bought a used delivery truck, invested $5,000 in a modest kitchen in an old butcher shop and opened the Industrial Luncheon Service.

He stocked the truck with coffee, sandwiches and doughnuts and made his first stop at the Boston Gear Works in North Quincy, where he sold his first cup of coffee for a nickel.

He had 144 canteen trucks by 1950 when he decided a retail store would be more profitable so he started a shop called the "Open Kettle" on Southern Artery in Quincy.

That name didn't catch on so Rosenberg called a brainstorming session. "What do you do with a doughnut?" asked the architect, Bernard Healy, rhetorically. "You dunk it."

And the name "Dunkin' Donuts" was born.

For years, her father, Frank, ran an upscale men's clothing store in downtown Quincy but it remained for his daughter, Lee Remick, to spread the family name far and wide.

She burst into Hollywood as the nubile drum majorette with Andy Griffith in "A Face in the Crowd," and followed it up as the alcoholic wife with Jack Lemmon in "Days of Wine and Roses."

She died in 1991 at the age of 55.

His real name was William Szathmary but he changed it to an easier-to-remember Bill Dana when he appeared on the scene as a writer and sometime performer on the old Steve Allen Show.

The 1942 graduate of Quincy High School later gained a measure of fame in the entertainment world as the comic with the thick Spanish accent, 'Jose Jimenez.'

John Adams' Final Toast

On July 1, 1825, four days before the nation was to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, the chairman of the Committee of Arrangements in Quincy, called on John Adams.

The 90-year-old former president, who played such a vital role in the composition and passage of the declaration, was asked to join the committee at dinner. Regretfully, the ailing old patriot declined.

Then he was asked to propose a toast for the dinner.

"I will give 'Independence Forever!'" he Would he like to add to that?

"Not a syllable," said the old man.

Four days later, he was dead.

Neighbors Had A Nickname

Duchess Of Windsor A Former Resident

By HENRY BOSWORTH

No, the Duchess of Windsor was not a Quincy girl but she lived here for a time long be-fore King Edward VIII gave up the British throne "for the woman I love."

She lived in Wollaston in 1917 while she was married to her first husband, a young lieutenant stationed at a Naval air school in Squantum, which later became the Squantum Naval Air Station..

The Massachusetts Naval Militia maintained a training field in what is now the Marina Bay area which was taken over by the First Naval District as a school to train young aviators to fly the new-fangled airplanes

Assigned as head of the school was Lt. Earle W. Spencer.

He was married to the former Wallis Warfield, the Baltimore belle who later, as a twice-divorced woman, became the Duchess of Windsor when she wed the king who abdicated his throne for her love.

The match touched off a crisis in English royalty. Some thought the king should be allowed to marry her and keep his title as long as she did not become queen. But stronger opposition prevailed and he stepped down.

They were married on June 3, 1937,

While living in Quincy, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer resided in a second floor apartment on Davis Street in Wollaston.

DUCHESS OF WINDSOR

Legend has it that her neighbors in 1917 thought she was somewhat stuck up and snobbish.

In fact, they nicknamed her "the Duchess."

Last Survivor

John Adams, who died only a few hours after Thomas Jefferson on July 4, 1825, outlived all but one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

The last survivor of the signers was Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Maryland, who died in 1832 at the age of 95. Adams died at 90.

Wake Up Call

Two of the most important town officials in Quincy (then Old Braintree) in the last days of the 17th century were the constable and the tithingman.

The tithingman was appointed and paid by the town selectmen to keep order in church on Sunday morning and see to it that pewholders stayed awake during the sometimes three or four hour sermons.

He was provided with a two-foot long staff with a brass tip on one end to rouse sleeping male parishioners and a feather on the other end to do the same for female.

Among the duties of the constable was to apprehend Quakers and "attend funerals of any that died with the small pox, and walk before the corpse to give notice to any, who may be in danger of infection."

Quincy Won Bet

Shipyards in Quincy and San Francisco made a $10,000 bet in 1918 on which could build the most destroyers in that year.

Quincy not only won, building 18 destroyers to Frisco's six, but added 10 submarines and six merchant vessels as well.

USS SALEM
(Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble)

Centerpiece Of U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum

USS Salem Flagship Of The Sixth Fleet

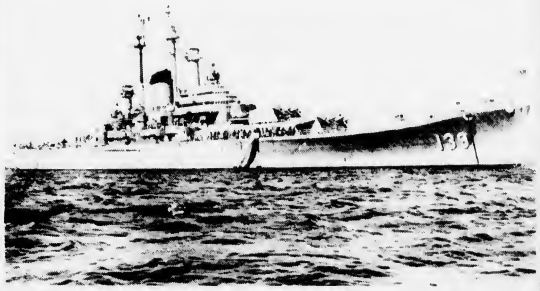
Although she never fired a shot in anger, the heavy cruiser USS Salem at the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum stands for all the ships that were built at Bethlehem Steel's Fore River Shipyard, a mighty armada that helped beat Hitler and Tojo.

Salem was ordered during World War II but launched in 1947 after hostilities had ceased and commissioned in 1949 to become the flagship of the U. S. Navy's Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean during the Cold War years in the 1950s.

At 716 feet, six inches in length and 17,000 tons displacement with a crew of 109 officers and 1,690 enlisted men and eight-inch/55 caliber guns in three triple turrets, she was the bulwark of democracy in the Mediterranean and Caribbean Seas,

Salem and her crew earned the praise of the king and queen of Greece for their work in providing relief supplies and humanitarian aid for four days as the first ship on the scene after an earthquake ravaged the Greek islands in 1953.

She was at sea bound for a new billet in Villafrance on the French Riviera in 1956 when fighting broke out between Israel and Egypt and she was diverted to the islands of Rhodes to assure safe passage of American and other ships through the Suez Canal.



Salem was on active duty for 10 years, decommissioned in 1959 and berthed in the Atlantic Reserve Fleet in Philadelphia; then brought back to its birthplace in Quincy and recommissioned in 1995 as a member of the Historic Naval Ships Association.

She features tours of the main deck, the number three turret, the admiral's and captain's bridges, the quarters on the second deck where the crew lived and worked, an extensive model ship collection and the region's only Navy SEAL display.

The ship is also home to the Cruiser Sailor Museum as well as museums dedicated to the USS St. Paul and USS Newport News, sister ships of Salem. The museum's archives are open for research and viewing an extensive collection of armaments, uniforms and memorabilia.

The USS Salem at the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum is located at 739 Washington St., at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point. City Named For Him But:

Col. John Quincy Something Of A Mystery Man

Few men have served the public good longer or as well as Col. John Quincy.

He was Speaker of the Massachusetts House, a governor's councillor, a selectman and perennial moderator of the town meeting in Old Braintree, commander of the local militia regiment and guardian of the rights of the few Ponkapoag Indians who survived the plague.

And through his granddaughter, Abigail Adams, nee Smith, he was the grandfather-in-law of the second president of the United States and the great grandfather of the sixth.

Small wonder then, that when the North Precinct broke away from Old Braintree in 1792 they named the new town "Quincy."

Col. John Quincy is something of a mystery man, even in the city that bears his name. It is not known for sure when came to Old Braintree. Nor is there a picture of him extant or even a physical description of him in the words that have been left to us by his contemporaries.

During celebration in Quincy in 1908, the main speaker, the Rev. Daniel Munro Wilson, noted that "in his day, he was one of the most trusted and influential public characters of the province; but for a hundred years or more, he has now been buried in oblivion.

"For example, I once mentioned John Quincy to a lifelong resident, a man of affairs and influence in the town. The response was: 'John Quincy? John Quincy? I never heard of him before!' Another in the group then exclaimed: 'You mean John Quincy Adams, don't you?'"

John Quincy was born in Boston. His father, Daniel, died when he was a year old and his widowed mother, Anna, married the Rev. Moses Fiske, minister of the First Parish Church in Braintree.

He graduated from Harvard in 1708, obtained a master's degree in 1711 and inherited, through his mother, a good-sized farm in Mount Wollaston and lived there for the rest of his life.

John Quincy's rise in public life was meteoric.

He married Elizabeth Norton, the daughter of a Hingham minister, in 1715 and was named justice of the peace the same year, moderator of the town meeting a year later and began 22 years of service in the House a year after that. He was Speaker of the House for 12 years. starting in 1729.

In 1741, he was manipulated out of his posts as commander of the Suffolk militia regiment by a wealthy Boston lawyer named Joseph Gooch, who is described by some as an "opportunist," and by others as an "unsavory demagogue."

Gooch arrived in Old Braintree determined to launch a political career. Beer and cider, supplied by Gooch, flowed freely in the taverns. The strategy prevailed and Quincy was dismissed as militia commander.

But his banishment was short-lived. Captains and lieutenants refused to serve under Gooch. They would serve only under Quincy. Demoralized, the people of Braintree turned Gooch out and returned command of their militia to Quincy.

Quincy's reputation was such that he was named by the legislature to be trustee of the funds of the Ponkapoag Indians, survivors of a devastating plague. He held the post for 20 years at the insistence of the Indians themselves.

Whenever there was a civic job to be done, it was the practice of the people of Old Braintree to appoint Col. John Quincy to do it. Thus it was that he was called on to chair the committee that first recommended the North Precinct become a separate town. That was in 1728.

It took 64 years but finally it was done and, when it was, they named it for John Quincy.

MONUMENT was placed on Col. John Quincy's grave in the Hancock Cemetery by the Quincy Historical Society in 1904. Plaque reads: 'Here was buried Col. John Quincy of Mount Wollaston 1689-1767 from whom Quincy was named.' His gravestone itself is at the lower right.

Captain Who?

The original settlement of Quincy was made as a trading post in 1625 by an all male company led by a Captain Wollaston. who was so obscure that his first name has been lost to history.

A few years ago, the historian Hobart Holly, after exhaustive research, concluded that his first name was probably Richard — but, still, nobody knows for sure.

Battlefields of Quincy

Although it furnished fighting men and leaders in the Revolution, Quincy (Old Braintree then) escaped without a pitched battle being fought on its shores.

The Minutemen of Quincy, however, did take part in a number of local skirmishes, harassing the Redcoats even after most of them had left Boston March 17, 1775,

On Sunday morning, May 21, 1775, three British sloops dropped anchor in the Fore River not far off Germantown.

The Quincy company, under the command of Elihu Adams, John Adams' brother, drove them off as they raided Sheep Island in nearby Weymouth.

On the night of July 9, 1775, a Quincy company of 300 men put out in whaleboats from Germantown and seized cattle, sheep and enemy soldiers from Long Island, under the noses of the British troops.

A few days later, another company of men, leaving Moon Island off Squantum in whale-boats, set fire to a house and barn on Long Island under fire from the British fleet..

On Sunday evening, July 29, 1775, a group of men left Squantum in whaleboats, overpowered a guard and burned Boston Light, the beacon that guided ships into Boston Harbor.
